"1931 America Forward March"

Let's Get Busy

CIRCUMSTANCES have always yielded to man—when man has had the intelligence and courage to face them, fearlessly. The present condition is no exception to this rule. America has many thousand times more dollars seeking to be put to work than it has men looking for jobs. We have an abundance of raw materials ready to flow through our smooth-running machinery of manufacturing and merchandising. Obsolescence, wear and sub-normal consumption have been steadily at work for a year, building a new high level in the reservoir of potential demand.

¶ The elements of sound and solid prosperity are at hand—money in abundance, the skill and the will to work, the ceaseless desire to consume.

¶ What then is lacking?

¶ It is the will to buy, which has been made inert by the paralyzing fear of the unknown.

¶ The responsibility for abolishing this false and harmful fear does not rest on the unorganized consumer. It lies at our own doorstep—a problem for organized American business.

¶ Recognizing and accepting our own share in this responsibility, Distribution and Warehousing, in conjunction with other magazines influential in the business field, is inaugurating an editorial program which will provide practical aid as well as inspiration to our readers in planning the forward march in 1931.

¶ It is time for all of us to get busy. Passive resistance never overcame a depression. But no depression can withstand the crashing assault of American business imbued with the will to win.

¶ Now turn to the next page and read John H. Van Deventer's "Calling the Turn in Business"—the first article in this magazine group's editorial program to stimulate the Forward March to business normalcy during the new year.

¶ And the steps which warehouse executives themselves should take, individually, to make 1931 a better business year are suggested by our industry's trade association presidents—page 18.

Calling the Turn in Business

America's Consuming Power Is Still Intact

By JOHN H. VAN DEVENTER
Industrial Consultant, United Business Publishers

"WHEN will business in general, and my business in particular, begin to emerge from the doldrums of depression?" "By what signs will I be able to foresee the coming of the upturn?"

These questions, which are being asked by thousands of merchants and manufacturers, have kept economic prophets busy. There has been no slowing down in the business of making predictions. Charts, trend curves and statistics have reached a record output, as have the conclusions based on them. Unfortunately for the individual who is seeking light on his own business, the predictions have been so conflicting that confusion rather than clarity of thinking has been the result. They have varied and still vary—from the extreme of optimistic "pollyanna" which foresees record-breaking prosperity just around the corner, to the pessimistic outlook which puts resumption so far away as to be undiscernible, even to high-powered economic field glasses.

Fortunately, American business has a habit of discounting predictions, as it has of surmounting obstacles. Optimistic generalizations cannot stampede it into a forward movement until it is ready to go.

But when American business makes up its mind to advance, neither unfavorable world conditions nor real and imaginary ills at home can stay its progress.

The greater the obstacles confronting it, the stronger will be its forward push. That is Business America's record, indelibly written by past history.

IT is instructive, today, to look back to the state of mind as expressed in the business publications and newspapers of 1873, at the time of the great depression which resulted from greenback and railroad inflation. Were it not for the old-fashioned type and format in which the economic opinions of that day were set forth, one might readily believe himself to be reading material published in 1930. Permanent overproduction due to too much machinery in the United States; inability of the population in future to keep pace, in consuming power, with the ability of our factories to turn out goods; technological unemployment resulting from improved machinery and processes—such were the grave doubts which found expression daily in the discussions of our business and industrial grandfathers. This at a time, mind you, when our total annual pig iron production was some two million tons, as contrasted with 42 million tons in 1929. And when the value of our entire year's output of manufactured products was less than five billion dollars, as contrasted with last year's output value of close to 70 billions of dollars' worth.

With the coming of every depression in our history we find a recurrence of the same state of mind—a widespread belief that industrial and business America had reached the economic jumping-off place. Whereas, the facts recorded by the moving finger of time are that every depression has been a time to take breath and take stock, to consolidate past gains and wipe out present inefficiencies, and that after every one of these unpleasant periods American business has surged forward to make new records of accomplishment.

In proof of which, consider the fact that American business, measured in annual volume, has never in its history retrogressed when considered in five-year periods. Even those years which contained the lows of our most severe depressions, excelled, in every case, the annual record of five years preceding.

Business Has Been Beating a Strategic Retreat

WARS of any magnitude are not won by a constant and unbroken succession of victories. Retreats sometimes save the day from defeat.

For the past year or more, Business America has been executing a strategic retreat. No other maneuver was possible in the face of an overwhelming horde of frozen consumer-pocketbooks, suddenly congealed by the stock market crash. One cannot successfully assault such an ice barrier; it must be given time to thaw.

On the whole, the retreat of business and industry has been an orderly one. There has been no helter-skelter stampede of wage and price cutting such as have characterized other depressions. Prices have come down, it is true, as part of the process of thawing out the frozen pocketbooks, but in many cases this has been compensated for by the efficiency gains in production which have followed the most rigorous self-examination that industry has experienced in many years. The executive question mark has been put intensively to work in our industrial plants and factories, with the result that hitherto unseen wastes have been eliminated and overhead costs materially reduced.

Industry as a whole, in spite of its reduced volumes, is on a higher efficiency plane than it has ever been before.

The strategic retreat was inevitable, under the existing circumstances, but it has continued long enough.

Our normal measure of prosperity cannot be won back until the about-face is executed and the forward march begins!

How Much Buying Power Have We Lost?

WHEN business and industry are forced to retreat, the casualty lists of unemployment lengthen. Men out of work have a minimum of consuming power, and those still employed whose hours have been shortened suffer a decrease in total earnings though their wage rates may remain undiminished.

How much have unemployment and curtailed operations cost us in buying power?

We have no means of knowing exactly how many men and women are out of work, but Government estimates put the total at three and one-half million. During normal "good times" we have an average of approximately one million. We can estimate that two and one-half million represents the increase in unemployed due to this depression. With due respect to the unfortunate exceptions, one may say with truth that the bulk of this increase in the ranks of the idle comes from the lower stratas of capability and skill. The more desirable are retained because they are harder to replace.

The average normal earning power of those totally out of work probably did not exceed $25 a week, many of them being casual and seasonal workers. Civic and private philanthropic movements are well under way which will provide a large number of these unemployed with at least a nominal earning power. But assuming that their state of unemployment has extended a full ten months, the loss in wages of the two and a half millions amounts to two billion, eight hundred million dollars in round numbers. A big figure—but not in comparison with the ninety billion dollars which represent our normal annual total of 1929 buying and selling.

It is more difficult to approximate the loss of buying power which has been due to curtailed industrial operations. The panic of 1920 was followed by severe unemployment, extending over a period of more than sixteen months of curtailed productivity. Yet the average shrinkage in volume of productivity for the sixteen months following the break in September, 1920, as recorded for 64 various manufactured products, was only 23 per cent under the record of the eight booming months of activity which preceded the break.

When the records are available, in the case of our present depression, we shall probably find that manufacturing volumes, over the depression period, have not averaged more than 25 per cent below the average for 1929.

On this basis, assuming the total wages paid to have shrunk in like proportion, industry's short time operations during the past year will have cost us an additional two and six-tenths billion. Some of this has already been accounted for under the loss of wages of the totally unemployed, but we will let it stand for good measure.

Assuming that the misfortunes of the American farmer have cost him from a quarter to a third of his total crop values, we find an additional shrinkage of three billion dollars. Thus far, our total of diminished buying power amounts to eight billion, four hundred million dollars. We cannot increase this on the account of diminished dividends, as the total dividends paid by American corporations during the first eleven months of 1930 exceeded those paid in 1929 by a quarter of a billion dollars. We must, however, take account of the decreased income and profits of industry, the professions and of retail business. Three billion dollars is an outside figure for this loss, and our final total becomes eleven billion four hundred million.

So our normal purchasing power of ninety billion dollars has shrunk, during the depression, to approximately seventy-eight billion—a 15 per cent decrease.

But while our total dollars have been shrinking, the individual dollar has been getting bigger. The dollar of today, due to price declines, will do fifteen cents more business than the dollar of a year ago.

In other words, our depleted stake is capable of maintaining as large a volume of business now as our ninety billions did a year ago.

Actually, despite our setbacks, we have more buying power than we have ever had.

America has the wherewithal at this very moment, to maintain a volume of business and a rate of employment equal to 1929, at the present price levels.

What, Then, Are We Waiting For?

IF America has the buying power necessary to put us back on a level of normal operations, what, then, are we waiting for?

In answering this question, we must distinguish between power to buy and will to buy.

It is the frozen pocket book that is holding us back. Most of our authorities agree that the state of mind is much more responsible for present conditions than is the state of money.

The responsibility for revivifying the American will to buy does not rest on the consumer. He is a buyer, not a seller. We cannot win prosperity back by passing the hat to the public with an appeal to "Buy Now."

The obligation of thawing out the frozen pocket books and thus bringing the upturn, rests squarely on the shoulders of organized business and industry.

It is not a buying job.

It is a selling job!

Never yet has there been a resistance sufficiently great as to withstand a properly directed force of sufficient magnitude. This law of natural science applies truthfully to selling. Those who have made practical application of it in their own businesses are not suffering from the depression.

Are you shaping the force of your selling to meet the present-day buying apathy?

Are you advertising more extensively and intelligently than ever before?

Are you utilizing, to the fullest degree, all of the effective avenues of sales promotion that lead to the pocket books of your possible customers?

Or have you curtailed your sales efforts and expenditures with the expectation of withholding your drive until prosperity is "just around the corner"?

There is one call that prosperity always heeds, and that is the clarion call of superior salesmanship—a serviceable product, sold in a better way.

"When will business pick up?"

When you and I pick it up. Not before.

Prosperity is the result of individual as well as collective push. Those who sit back and wait for it to come are not likely to recognize it when it arrives.

"By what signs will you be able to foresee the coming of the upturn?"

For your business, and for all business, the upturn will be in sight when you realize the truth that American consuming power is still intact; and, knowing this, resolve to intensify your sales effort to the point that will tap it.

In your own business, and in all lines of business and industry, there are those who have already realized this truth, and for whom, in consequence, the depression is now past history.

Business Conditions in Warehousing Industry

By
ELMER ERICKSON*

As Reported to Julius H. Barnes Chairman of President Hoover's National Business Survey Conference

IN the hope that my report on business conditions in the warehousing industry may be sufficiently complete to enable you to have exact information, I have gathered specific information from 114 representative warehousemen throughout the country. I have endeavored to obtain their views as to the trends, and also solicited criticism of my personal views.

As you are aware, our industry is composed of three major branches which are generally known as merchandise storage, cold storage, and that of household goods storage.

It appears that merchandise storage business from Jan. 1 to Oct. 31 compares favorably with 1928 and 1929. This is especially true with respect to space occupancy. Fluctuations in the volume of storage handled are usually those found in freight carloadings reported by the American Railway Association, which indicate that in June and December carloadings drop materially. While these fluctuations are considered seasonal, I find that during the month of November the industry was only normally quiet. It is believed this condition will continue through January, but from then on the trend is upwards to normal business. As a matter of fact, a large number of warehousemen state that they are now enjoying normal occupancy. This favorable situation is undoubtedly due to increased use of merchandise warehouses and their distribution facilities. Merchandise stocks in the warehouses continue at a low level.

A survey of conditions in the cold storage industry indicates that it also has enjoyed good business and the comparison is favorable with 1929. In many instances the reports indicate that holdings (space occupancy) are slightly better than 1929. Cold storage is a seasonal business and it is difficult to make comparisons or to prophesy. The usual seasonal fluctuations will apply in January and February, and they may be considered as normal.

Warehousemen engaged in household goods storage report a year which compares favorably with 1928 and 1929; occupancy little below normal and business which might be considered good. However, there appears to have been a slight decrease in packing, removals and hauling. This is a substantial part of the household goods storage business.

You will be interested in knowing that from those reporting, more than 60 per cent of the firms engaged in warehousing business have maintained normal employment throughout this period of business depression. A number report additions to their payroll.

The effects of the 1930 business depression upon our industry has been quite different from the experience of 1920 and 1921. It is my opinion that our industry has not suffered greatly during this period of business depression. The industry as a whole has tried to go along in a normal manner, making necessary adjustments because of changing conditions, and maintaining employment to the best of its ability by continuing maintenance and betterment work. It appears that the industry is now going through a normally quiet period which may continue for the next month or two.

There seems to be a feeling that both the current depression and prospects of speedy recovery are overadvertised. The depression is not as bad as certain classes of people imply, and it is undoubtedly made to appear worse than it is by the apparent necessity for publicity in efforts to relieve unemployment.

In closing, I wish to add I believe that, with the gradual upturn of business next year, our industry is adjusted to take hold with a minimum of slack.

Through a Clear Lens Into 1931

Our Trade Association Presidents Tell How to Forward March

Compiled by KENT B. STILES

WAREHOUSING'S trade association presidents, recognizing that keen thinking and constructive action are essential steps toward the return of business normalcy, have out of their experience joined in contributing, on these pages, their counsel and suggestion as to what our industry's executives should do, individually and collectively, to make the new year brighter and saner.

Elected by their competitors to positions of guidance, they were the ones logically to be requested to flood with the lights of common sense those avenues which lead toward industrial stabilization.

In preparing their opinions they have avoided Pollyanna prophecies. They have looked ahead not through rose-colored glasses but through clear lenses.

They have, in fact, caught the vision of the "1931 America Forward March" movement which symbolizes Business America's timely effort and determinative will to end depression and restore prosperity.

They have set forth the problems which are paramount in warehousing as the new year dawns and they have outlined a program of business reconstruction.

It is to be hoped that what they have written will, in the words of A. T. Gibson, president of the California Warehousemen's Association, get the storage executives "away from routine details of their own business" and "make them think about the industry as a whole and business in general."

The "1931 America Forward March" campaign—to which Distribution and Warehousing this year dedicates its January symposium of trade leaders' wisdom—was, in fact, designed by its sponsoring group of business magazines to stimulate business thought, in the various industries, exactly as Mr. Gibson has suggested.

Not in many years has Business America been so definitely in need of straight thinking by its individual operators. What our industry's association presidents here contribute is stimulation of just such straight thinking, and a careful perusal of what these leaders have written as to how warehousing should proceed in the months ahead is commended—with Distribution and Warehousing's conviction that if the suggestions advanced are intelligently heeded and faithfully followed, our industry will forward march in 1931 keeping pace with other business lines advancing similarly along the road to better times.

As one association president expresses it, 1931 is "examination year" for Business America. Is warehousing prepared? A constructive mental attitude is requisite, another urges. "A-la-Rockne," suggests H. C. Herschman, general president of the American Warehousemen's Association, who, writing in the phraseology of football, declares that team work will result in business touchdowns.

The thought that team work is necessary is advanced by many of the presidents. The value of trade associations is emphasized repeatedly. Cooperation, it is pointed out, is essential as never before by reason of agencies encroaching on warehousing's domain—Government competition, railroad storage, inequitable taxation, efforts by shippers to dictate lower rates. Only through solidarity and unity, we are told, can the industry hope to avert further encroachments and defeat adverse legislative measures.

Maintenance of warehousing's standards of service and charges; elimination of price slashing; cutting down of extravagant expenditures; improvements in the internal machinery of the plant; perfections of inventory systems; banishment of bad practices; reduction of overhead; immediate collection of all handling charges and the first month's storage—these are some of the concrete suggestions proffered.

Warehousing must adapt itself to the changed conditions, it is advised. It must learn to handle hand to mouth business and must assess in-bound and out-bound labor changes. It must harvest uncultivated fields by attracting the patronage of manufacturing interests not yet acquainted with the services of the industry. It must help those manufacturers already familiar with such services to enlarge their territories. Opinion is expressed that advertising and educational campaigns will aid both these efforts, while at the same time warehousing must develop information as to operating costs in old channels of merchandise routing so that shippers may be convinced that the warehouse method of distribution is the most economical. It must do handling and reporting promptly, and accounts must be accurate and given personal attention; infinite details of the customers' desires must be considered as never before.

In furniture warehousing, sidelines must be developed —moth proofing, rug cleaning and the like. Even interior decorating of the home is suggested as a future source of revenue.

With one or two exception those presidents who allude to labor conditions counsel that the present wage scale must be obtained, with year-round employment assured. Greater interest should be taken in employees, and group insurance is advised. Instead of turning out men in the slack period, they should be put to work on repairs, renewals, van painting. Warehouses should be kept clean and the men neatly uniformed. Addressing the household goods branch of the industry, James F. Keenan, president of the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association, particularly mentions the desirability of cleanliness and orderliness.

And it is suggested that less pessimism in conversation and radio talks would help things along!

What these trade leaders write is based on long contact with the warehouse business. It is offered in a spirit of helpfulness in a period when industry is emerging from a slump.

No executive can read the following pages without truly deriving inspiration as he steps across the threshold into the new year.

"A-la-Rockne"

By H. C. Herschman, St. Joseph, Mo., General President American Warehousemen's Association

THE most persistent pastime of the pessimist during the months just past has been to enlarge upon the gloomy outlook with reference to conditions throughout the world in order to substantiate the "comforting conclusion" that we could not recover until such time as the whole world became prosperous once more.

While we may not have been overwhelmed with a super-abundance of business by reason of which we might become wildly enthusiastic, our industry is in ship-shape condition.

One of our most generally possessed characteristics is that which causes us to believe that which we hear most frequently. Most folks do not take the time to sit quietly for a few moments and count the blessings which have been showered upon them. We are rather inclined to place the major emphasis on the one good thing which we have been deprived of—forgetting the nine which we have.

The pining of the pessimist is equally as useless as the hound's baying at a barren moon—the time in either case is wasted. If we are to be worthy of any consideration whatever in the scheme of things, we must acquire it by dint of hard work and maintain it by continuing with full vigor, clear heads and keen vision.

Let me say to you "A-la-Rockne."

1931 now comes to our field for the annual game. Indications point this contest to be of the greatest importance in our history to date.

What will be the outcome?

Just a year ago 1930 found us out of condition but still overconfident and more or less self-satisfied. Result—an upset. This experience taught us that we can't depend entirely on past performance.

Right now let us hitch up our belts a notch tighter and really play the game. Fumbles will not carry the ball over the goal line. TEAM-WORK, with all cooperating, will gain us many touchdowns.

If you or I are not strong enough to make the team, let us join the cheering sections, encouraging those who are playing the game for us. The cheer leaders will direct us. Join in the yell! Awaken to the occasion! Get the spirit! Work! W-o-r-k! W-O-R-K!

True to tradition—Loyalty and Americanism have always responded when the occasion demanded. Our college (industry) must be awakened and every student (you and I) go out to win. We must win! We WILL win! By how big a score depends on how intelligently and industriously we play the game this year, and build for the immediate years to follow.

Father Time is about to blow the whistle. Are we ready? Sure! Let us get into the game with the courage that will bring us victory.

As an industry we are young—we are growing. We rejoice in the fact that we may exult with all those about us when times are plenteous; neither would we forget our responsibility in stressful times. The future may best be judged by the knowledge that as a people we are progressive, with a will to have our portion of the best things of this life.

Our industry represents an essential element in the economic structure of our nation. There is a distinct need for the service which we have to offer. As I contemplate the future, I do so with a firm conviction that we shall, as an industry, increase in usefulness to our fellowman, and with an unfaltering faith in the belief that, as individuals, the rewards which we receive will not be less than that for which we have strived.

Conservation

By James F. Keenan, Pittsburgh, President National Furniture Warehousemen's Association

CONTRIBUTIONS to public convenience leading to a worthy record of achievement has been the progressive history of the warehouse industry since its inception until this year. Then what happened? Business paralysis set in through inevitable cause. We have all felt this period of depression, some more severely than others. It has conquered the genius of many an executive, tested the loyalty of many a member. Why? Because conditions on which our former relative prosperity was based have entirely changed.

As the success of any organization depends upon the vision of its leaders, let us, therefore, conform our business to the new incoming standards.

Lay constructive plans for 1931.

Conservation should be the key note.

Compare and determine where old methods can be improved; put your finger on spots where time and dollars now being wasted can be saved; consider how operating expenses may be reduced and sales increased, and occasionally read over the Code of Ethics of the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association for refreshment. I exhort you, to use your talents in this direction and you will ultimately bring back some of the profits of the fat years of the past.

The various visits in the field of Field Secretary MacNiven last September demonstrated that with many warehousemen good housekeeping was a lost art. At the time, measured advice was issued from headquarters and certain improvements suggested as a result of the survey, the importance of which was not overestimated. A few of these suggestions, given at random as a reminder of their business getting value, are that we have:

1. Neat-appearing and clean business-like offices.
2. Scrupulously clean warehouses.
3. Neat piling of goods.
4. Clean vans—kept painted.
5. Clean van pads.
6. Clean and neat-appearing employees.

For final thought on the subject I refer you to the excellent association letters and frequent bulletins written during the year by Henry Reimers, executive secretary and close student of the economic conditions of the industry, which you have on file. Re-read them, digest their contents. You will find that they deal more thoroughly and concisely with the financial and business refinements necessary to speed our recovery than the writer could encompass in the restricted space here allotted.

Rate Cutting

By George H. McKeag, Winnipeg, President Canadian Storage & Transfermen's Association

WHILE 1930 has been anything but a good year for Canadian warehousemen I do not think that the depression has hit us as hard as it has warehousemen in the United States. We did not experience the same boom period that they did and therefore have not over-expanded as much and will not suffer in the adjustment period to the same extent.

In the time of storm a ship's captain must keep cool and collected and use his head if he is going to bring his ship safely to port. When a depression hits them, some warehousemen are inclined to lose their heads and jump overboard by trying to get their competitors' business through foolish rate cutting. This only makes things worse and gets them nowhere. A 25 per cent cut in rates means that we have to increase our volume by practically 50 per cent in order to secure the same net as we had at previous rates. This result is the exception rather than the rule. Rate cutting is not the solution to our present difficulty.

This is an opportune time for warehousemen to stop and do some hard thinking and planning for 1931, and if they will I am sure they can improve conditions in our industry. I would suggest that we analyze our balance sheets carefully and cut expenses every way possible without impairing our service.

Do not lay off good trained employees except where it is absolutely necessary. It is better to reduce working hours or days and adjust wages accordingly, and by so doing give employment to as many as possible.

This is an opportune time to clean and paint up warehouse and equipment so as to make them more attractive to present and prospective customers.

We need more business. How are we going to get it in 1931? I admit it is a real problem, but sitting back and talking blue ruin is not going to get us anywhere.

Some warehousemen think the only way to get business is to try and secure their competitors' customers by rate cutting or giving extra service without charge. Their competitor then retaliates by doing the same thing—then where are they? Worse off than before. This is not the solution.

I would suggest increasing advertising appropriation for 1931 and making advertisements more along educational lines. We would be surprised to find by checking up what a small percentage of our citizens have ever been in a furniture storage warehouse and know anything of the services a modern warehouse has to offer. Invite various women's organizations to inspect your warehouses on certain days and pay them according to the number of women calling. Explain your various services and you will be agreeably surprised at results. This is real educational advertising and is going over big in our city.

In conclusion—support your local and national associations. They need you and you need them more than ever. Cooperate with your local competitors and maintain rates on a profitable basis.

Responsibility

By D. J. McHugh, Cincinnati, President National Team & Motor Truck Owners' Association

THE return of normalcy of the trucking industry is dependent on the education of the shipper to investigate the responsibility of his haulers; it is the irresponsible, illegitimate hauler and the short-sighted buyer who has demoralized the trucking industry.

Normalcy will be hastened when the buyer of trucking service insists on dependability and responsibility, which he can expect only when the hauler receives adequate pay for services rendered.

The public will be served best when all legalized transportation units realize their war is against the illegal transporter, rather than among themselves, and gather around the table to smoke the pipe of peace and plan a coordinated attack on this parasite.

Organized study of the problems of one's own industry—leaving the other fellow to mind his own business—would tend to reduce the turmoil and promote the return of confidence, without which business cannot survive.

Repairs

By F. R. Long, St. Louis, Vice-President Merchandise Division American Warehousemen's Association

IT does not seem to me that the warehouse industry is feeling the depression quite to the extent that some other industries are feeling it. Though, of course, it is making itself felt in a very definite way in our industry.

I feel that the close of this year should find us in our industry very thankful and looking forward to a good prospect in 1931.

Some days ago there appeared an article in one of our newspapers published by a great magazine organization. One statement impressed me greatly:

"When a machine clicks it is useless unless thousands of cash registers click in recording sales of the manufacturers' products."

I think it is generally conceded that prosperity comes to our country only when a large percentage of our population is working, and that the use of machines instead of men may prove a boomerang which will only be overcome by industry reverting back a few years and be less efficient in the use of machines, thereby employing more men who will have more money to spend.

During the balance of this winter everyone who possibly can should employ men for all types of maintenance and improvement work.

Soup kitchens are passé. Our population has the right to expect the opportunity, in this country, to earn a living.

When industry realizes the great importance of our people being occupied, and men are re-employed in great numbers, then indeed will 1931 produce conditions that we earnestly desire.

The slogan is good, "To buy the things that you need at this time," but it seems to me that the burden for a return to normal conditions is upon industry to create more and better jobs for our workers.

Warehousemen can help start 1931 by making all necessary repairs to their buildings, renewing equipment, repairing elevators, painting and renewing trucks, and many other ways.

Let's do it.

Sluggards Not Wanted

By Vallee O. Appel, Chicago, Vice-President Cold Storage Division American Warehousemen's Association

ALL prophets have lost caste. More forecasts have been made during the past twelve months than in any twelve months previously, and resulted poorly. Prophets great and prophets small have prognosticated for business, but all have failed. It would seem that business in our land must henceforth rise or fall without the aid of the soothsayers.

Business is not good. We shall all be the better off by recognizing the true situation, accepting it cheerfully, and studiously adjusting ourselves to the problems presented by the change of scene.

Most of our former standards and indices are useless today in planning for tomorrow. Each business executive must analyze his own particular situation and undertake his own specific task. No general rules of conduct are applicable. It is proper to suggest, however, that we strive in our industry as in others to maintain an even keel, turning neither to the extremes of conservatism nor optimism.

Like many other American businesses, the cold storage industry is oppressed with dangerous competition, occasioned in our case by over-expansion in the construction of new units. But they are here and here to stay. Absolutely nothing is gained by grumbling about it. Lower storage rates, unsafe loans, and the sale of our various services at less than cost will not stimulate the production of the commodities we store and thereby increase the aggregate cold storage tonnage in the United States. There is only one pie, its size is limited and it has only a certain number of pieces. You and I are entitled to our share and, according to our deserts, we shall receive it. If we attempt to grab a part of the other fellow's portion by employing unfair tactics and uneconomic principles, the inevitable result will be that we are robbing him, hurting ourselves, demoralizing our entire industry.

While cold storage warehousemen are ever alert to the improvement of their methods and means, it is my feeling that the cold storages of our country are giving nearly 100 per cent in service to their customers. Intense competition has compelled it even though individual initiative might have been lacking. There is no place for sluggards in the cold storage field.

Our problems are manifold and complicated. We alone know them and we alone have the ability to solve them. Present conditions in the general business world have intensified somewhat our difficulties. Grim determination, conscientious effort and honest cooperation in our competition will carry us through today and tomorrow.

Maintain Standards

By William R. Wood, New York, Eastern Vice-President National Furniture Warehousemen's Association

THE furniture warehousemen have been knocked about a bit during the past year—most particularly because of the oversupply of living quarters.

The stock market crash has also hurt our business.

These two causes have lessened the demand for storage and made necessary the sale of household effects—both for reasons of economy.

The wise heads of the business world are not in agreement as to when the depression will be over, but there seems no lack of faith in the ability of the country to come back, as it always has done.

As matters stand, the warehouseman can only wait for the tide to turn, and, in the meantime, hold fast to his standards of service and charges.

"Moral Tone"

By M. R. Niedringhaus, St. Louis, Central Vice-President National Furniture Warehousemen's Association

(By Telegraph)

IT is my opinion that furniture warehousing cannot stimulate business normalcy directly but can bring a vast influence to bear through the constructive moral tone of its individual membership.

Our greatest trouble is anticipating trouble but not doing anything about it when it comes, except grumble.

My sggestions for a general improvement for the coming year are:

First, the constructive mental attitude.

Second, determination to reduce overhead expenses.

Third, a maintenance of present rates, if not advancing them.

Fourth, to avoid reduction of wages.

Fifth, an effort to cement the confidence of competitors.

Retrenchment

By J. P. Ricks, Jackson, Miss., Southern Vice-President National Furniture Warehousemen's Association

(By Telegraph)

AS to how warehousing can stimulate the return of business normalcy I respectfully suggest that the warehousing industry should exert every reasonable effort to maintain present personnel in each organization even though it be necessary to reduce compensation horizontally. I believe this retrenchment policy would be preferable to reduction in personnel, as it would have a tendency to keep purchasing power better maintained and more evenly distributed.

Owing to the increased purchasing power of the dollar, everyone is willing to accept a concession in compensation. It is strongly recommended that all warehouses maintain personnel without reduction in number, if possible.

Wages

By Harvey B. Lyon, Oakland, Western Vice-President National Furniture Warehousemen's Association

(By Telegraph)

AS to what we may do to help the return to normalcy, may I suggest that the members of our National association bend every effort to maintain friendly cooperation in our local associations and prevent the terrific economic waste of price cutting.

Our wholesale costs, unlike those in other industries, have not been reduced. Our investments in plant and equipment are fixed. We should not reduce wages.

It is only by maintaining prices that we can continue to put into circulation our present wage payments and give to the public the kind of service that will justify their continued confidence.

Prompt Collections

By E. C. Lowry, Montgomery, President Southern Warehousemen's Association

THE general opinion in this territory is that there will be a gradual improvement beginning the first part of the year and continuing gradually until fall, when the improvement is expected to be more marked.

As to warehousemen securing additional business, increasing net profits and improving service, it occurs to me that under the present conditions the household goods man could increase his net profits by insisting that his bookkeeping department present and if possible collect immediately all handling charges and first month's storage as soon as goods have been hauled to the warehouse. The collection of all accounts should be given special attention.

Prompt, efficient and continued improvement in service will always increase the business of any household goods warehouseman, and a customer who has received this kind of service coupled with courteous treatment seems to be anxious to recommend the services of such a warehouseman at every opportunity.

The household goods warehouseman's best advertising medium seems to be attractive vans with clean pads and uniformed crew; also clean, well kept warehouse. The addition of side lines such as de-mothing, rug cleaning, etc., will also increase the volume.

In 1931 the merchandise warehouses should be able to increase their volume by getting in touch with some of the manufacturers who, although they have not distributed through public warehouses heretofore, will perhaps do so now due to the low stock kept on hand by the jobbers.

Prompt handling and reporting, more accurate accounting and careful personal attention to each account will keep old accounts and help get new ones.

The merchandise warehousemen over the entire country have already faced a large percentage of loss in their cartage business, due to the operation of the motor freight lines, and as the highways in the South are rapidly improving and motor freight terminals are springing up in the larger cities, I think that the southern warehousemen have more of a problem to solve in the motor freight operator and terminal than most of them realize.

The time has come when they should give considerable thought as to just how they will meet this comparatively new condition. To keep from losing a large volume of their business it seems to me that they must either operate the motor freight lines or operate the terminals and control the motor freight lines. If the latter could be satisfactorily worked out, I believe it would be preferred by the warehousemen. The household goods warehouseman faced a similar problem, but it was solved by the organization of the Allied Van Lines.

Three Dogs and a Moral

FROM the Tall Corn State comes a story which is apropos of current business conditions. It is told by C. E. Dragoun, president of the Iowa Warehousemen's Association, as follows:

Some time ago a farmer in Iowa was asked by a Californian whether he needed farm relief. The farmer smiled and said:

"That reminds me of the time when I was raising dogs. I had three pups with which I wanted to run and experiment. I put them in three kennels. I named one of the pups 'Business Man,' one 'Lawyer' and one 'Farmer.' They were raised under like conditions and fed the same food and drink until they were about half grown, when I decided it was time to try the experiment.

"I therefore missed feeding them for two days and then took them out into the woods, where I turned them loose to watch results.

"Immediately 'Business Man' got busy hurrying around and shortly came out from in under a bush with a rabbit. In about two minutes 'Lawyer' took it away from him—and that darn fool 'Farmer' just sat on his tail and howled."

The moral of that, as Mr. Dragoun phrases it, is——

"Now that most of the farmers have gone to work and are getting along nicely, it seems as though it is the business man who is sitting on his tail and howling because he can't replace his radio with a larger model, or buy one of the new 1931 sport model cars, or worse yet buy another new van, which he doesn't need, just a little bit bigger and better than his competitor's.

"It is time now to use our present equipment; and if this isn't all paid for, it can't be—and neither can we purchase new—by cutting the price just enough to beat our competitor out of a legitimate profit."

Anticipate Wants

By Clarence A. Aspinwall, President Washington (D. C.) Warehousemen's Association and General Treasurer American Warehousemen's Association

YOUR inquiry reminds me of a story that my friend Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, tells apropo of the present depression. It is about two middle-aged golfers, who had worked hard at their game until they had gotten their average score around 95, and were very well satisfied with this result. Last fall after the drought, when the fairways were very hard and the drives long, they took a sudden spurt, and for a while were playing below 90. Later on their games reverted to their original status, and one of them was very much dissatisfied, recalling the period during which he had broken 90—forgetting about the many preceding months when 95 was most gratifying and anything below 100 satisfactory. Kicking constantly about his present bum game, it went off still more. The other player recalled with pleasure the period when he had broken 90, but admitted that it was not altogether due to his superior playing, but to a bit of luck. He kept plugging away cheerfully at his game, trying to remember everything that he had done better during the period of good scoring, and his game in consequence did not fall off.

The moral of the story is that 1929 is not a fair year to use as a measuring stick, and we will be more content with our business lot if we measure present conditions against 1928 and its predecessors.

To improve service in the warehouse field I suppose we should diligently try to anticipate the wants of our customers, and as diligently try to satisfy them.

To get better profits I am wondering if we might not perhaps stop thinking so much about profits and concentrate on giving good and honest value, keeping promises, being fair, and perhaps a little more than fair sometimes in our adjustments, cultivating kindliness and practising courtesy. Sometimes profits, like happiness, is overtaken and captured when we do not pursue it too diligently.

There are problems daily in warehousing, as in other lines of business, but none occurs to me at present as being of major importance. There are interesting problems in connection with motor truck transportation that engage all of us, and they require and will receive frequent discussion, but I have not heard of anyone who has a ready made solution for these problems.

You ask also what are the constructive things that will need urgent attention in 1931. Again, as in my answers to your other inquiries, I am afraid I am not being very helpful. I have no brilliant thoughts as to what will require our urgent attention, other than each one our own individual business.

The late Thomas Nelson Page used to enjoy telling a story on himself. There was for many years on the streets of Washington a colored man who was noticeable for his very dandified clothes, and rather dignified manner of promenading the streets. Lots of us noticed him and wondered who he was. Mr. Page's curiosity got the better of him one day, and he stopped him on the street, and said:

"Excuse me for stopping you, but I am Thomas Nelson Page. I have noticed you walking on the streets many times, and have wondered who you are and what you do."

The colored man replied with a great deal of manner, "I am very glad to meet you Mr. Page. My name is Henry Hawkins, and I make a very good living tending to my own business."

Self-Analysis

Perhaps that is what we should all do very diligently at this particular time. There is an opportunity during this period of depression for a careful analysis of our own institutions, self scrutiny as to shortcomings, and a stiffening of resolutions as to the practice of those things which we recognize as good for business, and which we have urgently recommended to others and frequently failed to practice ourselves. We readily recognize the slow and antiquated processes, the underhand and roundabout practices of the English, French, German or other foreign trader; the outrageous charges and poor service rendered in other lines of business attract our attention and comment, and the unfair, unscrupulous, not to say dishonest, methods of our competitors do not escape our notice, but we cultivate a blind spot in the direction of our own shortcomings.

We haven't had time to think about them for a number of years. Now we have the opportunity, and I sincerely believe that if we will devote the major part of our thinking to detecting our own faults, both of "omission" and "commission," and correcting them, not so much with the idea of increasing profits, but because they ought to be corrected in justice to our craft and to our position in it, we will be rewarded by a reasonable amount of cash profits.

Must Cut Corners

By A. T. Gibson, San Francisco, President California Warehousemen's Association

IF you do nothing more for the industry, you certainly do succeed in getting them away from routine details of their own business and try to make them think about the industry as a whole and business in general.

My forecast of public warehousing is this—that when conditions are tough and very competitive, business interests throughout the country must figure how to cut corners and decrease their cost of distribution. No longer will the excess profits allow the continuation of high-priced branch houses if it can be shown by using public warehouses distribution costs can be cut 30, 40 and even 50 per cent.

No longer will excess profits allow concerns to neglect saving in freight that can be accomplished by taking advantage of correct breaking points for freight.

I think the result to our industry is going to be that we will see less and less of the big storage, and that we will end up by handling more and more very active distribution accounts where the storage feature itself will play very little part. In my opinion the warehouseman who sets his house in order where he can handle clerical details correctly, promptly and cheaply is the one who is going to win out and give the service that will bring to him his share of this type of distribution business.

Many accounts which we are now operating require three people to push a pen for every one that pushes a truck. A good office manager is worth three times as much as a good warehouse foreman for handling this type of business. Never before has our industry required organizations trained to handle infinite details of the other fellow's business with precision, promptness and at a clerical cost to us that is comparable with the clerical cost of mail order houses and large chain store organizations.

It has been my experience that gradually the customers who are requiring us to handle an enormous amount of detail for them are getting in a frame of mind where they are willing to pay for it, providing the warehouseman who is rendering the service is giving them A-No. 1 results, and also providing that they have had enough experience with warehouses throughout the country to have run into warehousemen who are not equipped to do this, and therefore appreciate it when they run into a warehouse company geared up to take care of the changed conditions of economical distribution through public warehouses.

Advertising

By H. B. Holt, San Francisco, President California Van & Storage Association

(By Telegraph)

THE present condition of business in our industry calls more than anything else for a sincere and wholehearted effort to build up and improve our association activities.

The trade organization is the only thing which differentiates a business-like group from a mob, and there never was a time when we needed each other's help more than at present.

Added to this are a need for greater advertising effort to acquaint the public with our facilities for service and a careful study of the opportunities for developing side lines which will increase our business and open new avenues of profit.

Welfare of Employees

By James P. Logan, Denver, President Colorado Transfer & Warehousemen's Association

THE conditions in any particular industry are in a great part a reflection of the past actions of its members. There are times when a general depression will have considerable effect on a group governed by the best of practice and there are industries whose earnings depend almost entirely on conditions of other groups. The transfer and warehouse industry as a whole falls within this category but a great many of our present difficulties are traceable to our own members.

Greed has played a major role. The competitor who by any means strives to corner all the business for his firm is so short-sighted that he cannot see the effect of his actions on the other fellow. He places him with his back to the wall. He has a large investment and a lifetime of effort, and even though his actions have been most ethical in the past he is forced to use every means to protect himself. It is impossible for any business except a strict monopoly to endure without competition and sooner or later new capital that is unfamiliar with the industry makes its appearance. Personally I would prefer to have the competition of those long established in legitimate practice.

We should have a greater interest in our employees by trying to create year round employment and less labor turnover. Assure our help of continuous employment and we will have better and more interested employees. They represent us to the customer. Encourage them to be neat and clean, and welcome their suggestions by some competitive method. Furnish them with group insurance—all or part paid by employer.

We as individuals appreciate the employee who assumes greater responsibilities. Let us as the employees of our customers express this attitude to them. Render little courtesies and services they do not expect and their opinion of the entire industry will improve.

Times of depression build for future prosperity. We should strive now to eliminate bad practices and work for greater cooperation and improvement in the industry. Business conditions will not always remain as they are at present. The hill seems steepest just before we reach the top and it is difficult to see the sunshine beyond. Let us push over the top to smooth, easy sailing that lies beyond and we will soon forget the uphill climb—but maybe we shouldn't.

Survey Costs

By Sidney A. Smith, Tampa,
President Florida Warehouse
& Transfer Association

THE first step our industry should take to make 1931 a better business year is a careful study of the other fellow's business. In other words, we should find out how our industry can serve best. To do this I believe we ought to employ the counsel of an efficient merchandise manager. One who is familiar with the requirements, desires and hopes of the manufacturers or merchandiser, and one who knows something of the cost of merchandising.

Warehousing offers an attractive service from many different angles. In the first place the buildings and equipment used are superior to the facilities of the average manufacturer. The personnel of our warehouses as a rule are much better trained than the personnel of the average shipping department.

Doing business through warehouses eliminates leases, fixed payrolls and many overhead items, such as light, heat, telephone, water, etc., and enables the manufacturer to estimate his costs more closely.

I am confident that a survey would also show that the costs of distributing through warehouses is very much lower than branch warehouse operations.

Carrying to its final conclusion the matter of service would no doubt make it necessary for the warehouseman to rearrange his business somewhat to take care of broken lots, repacking, the operation of credit lists and numerous other items which have come into our business during the past years only in a small way.

We need more information as to the operation and costs in the old channels of merchandising so that we may better serve the merchandising business.

Just as an illustration of the way the warehouse may profit by furnishing these specific services I would like to tell you of an experience which we have had. In July, 1929, we had an epidemic of bank failures in Florida, and immediately following these bank failures we had instructions from several of the shippers with whom we were doing business to cancel all of our credit lists and make deliveries of their merchandise only direct from them.

This was, no doubt, a wise precaution on their part, but it certainly worked a distinct hardship on those who had been drawing from warehouse stocks. To bridge the gap and assist both the storer and purchaser, we called the storer's attention to the fact that we could handle releases against C.O.D.'s or acceptances.

This met with a very prompt and generous response, and we believe it has added considerably to the volume of business which we are handling, and in two or three instances it is the one fact which made it possible to secure business.

There is no royal road to prosperity. It will come by hard work, study and experiment.

Fair Profit

By William S. Conklin, Chicago,
President Illinois Furniture
Warehousemen's Association

SERVICE to shippers and the public will be improved this coming year due to the physical changes which are taking place within our own ranks. A few years ago it was easy to become a warehouseman and put up our own building, whether we were adapted to that line of business or not. Today the banks are not permitted to loan on real estate as they did, and this should allow the demand for warehouse space to catch up to the already over-abundant amount of available space. Many concerns will, no doubt, go out of business due to pressing conditions, which will leave the cream of the industry to look after the business there is to be done. The wheat is being separated from the chaff, and only those companies who can stand the pressure will survive. However, this will result in a big improvement in the caliber of the companies left to represent the warehouse industry.

Better profits naturally will be the goal, yet I feel that being too anxious to increase profits during a readjustment is bad business. I feel our industry should attempt to go along or keep in line with changing conditions. The tendency is to reduce costs, and I believe certain rates can still be reduced and not cause much change in net profits. A stabilized general condition of our own industry as well as every other industry should not be overlooked in our desire to increase profits. Let us be satisfied with a fair profit properly earned, not at the expense of stinting progress or improvement.

From within the ranks of our industry comes a cry of too much expansion of trade organization, which in turn takes from each of us more dues and assessments every year. There is a limit to this sort of spending, and I believe it quite necessary to study the real necessity of so much over-expansion and if possible find ways and means to lessen the load of excessive dues and assessments. Trade organization secretaries frequently become too enthusiastic in their positions and forget there is a limit as to how much expense the members can stand to pay. Sooner or later, the error will be discovered and then too late.

One other problem requiring the attention of everyone is the ever-increasing tax situation which in certain cities and States virtually puts hundreds of organizations out of business. Take the example of a warehouse in a locality that has changed from a side street location to a main street. Ground valuations are at least two-thirds of the entire value of the property. Taxes are based on these physical conditions, and the burden is heavy to the warehouseman. Only this week in Chicago we have been told that more than 30,000 parcels of property have been sold for 1928 taxes. This adjustment of equitable taxation is not only the problem of our public officials; it is the problem of every business man, even you and I. Let us strive to help solve this burden of taxation so that we all pay the right tax and no more.

1931 is going to be examination day, and the fellow who has schemed to "get by" will succeed—he will get clear by and can't "come back." I trust that all warehousemen will be ready for the examination.

Developing Accounts

By V. M. Kolly, Chicago,
1930 President Illinois
Association of Merchandise Warehousemen

THE average warehouseman does not analyze his prospect or customer's business as thoroughly as it should be done. When a warehouseman is asked to quote or when soliciting potential users of warehouses, a thorough knowledge of the prospect's operations is essential. In most cases you will find that your prospect is willing to talk about all details of his business, and frequently we become bored with his affairs and begin to feel we are wasting too much time on a beginner account, having foremost in our mind what revenue the account will produce per month, especially if it strikes us as being a small one.

This is wrong. In my experience I found that many of the so-called small accounts developed and expanded and what we figured was just a little troublesome account proved up to be one of the best. In the first place the prospect takes greater interest in you if you display a genuine interest in his business and his various operations. For an example, when studying a prospect's commodities you may be in a position to suggest a practical and economical change in the packing or style of his cartons or drums.

Only several days ago, in taking a prospect through our plant, I suggested the use of a fibre drum in preference to a steel drum for an article which sold for $35. This means a saving of $1, plus a saving in freight because of the lighter weight of the container.

With the vast and diversified line of merchandise passing through our warehouses, interesting observations can be made and passed along to your prospect. There is nothing that will cultivate lasting and friendlier relations than valuable and practical suggestions. Methods of loading cars, acquainting a newcomer with local conditions, telling him how others operate—not competitors, but people in other lines—which naturally will not in any way betray confidences. All these pointers will be gladly accepted, and you are bound to impress your prospect with the same interest that a banker will do when he advises or cautions his clients and prospects because of his practical knowledge of handling money.

Suggestions as stated above have actually proved helpful in securing and building up accounts.

The steps toward better profits are the complete understanding of costs. Not the idea of taking a day or week's survey, but establishing a cost finding system that will be carried on religiously every day in the year. Only then can facts in cost of space consumption and handling be correctly figured. Slack periods, size of overhead, damage, errors, pilferage, all add to the actual operating cost; and last but not least, the cost of buildings, location, and cost of maintenance of the property.

In our eagerness to procure an account, prices quoted are based on a quick survey and not on one taken over a sufficient period of time, resulting often in plenty of business but with little profit and frequently none. There is no better and convincing argument to use in substantiating a price quoted to a customer than actual figures. Unless your prospect is unreasonable, he will listen and be anxious to learn about your costs if they are properly demonstrated, and in most cases you will find that he wants you to make a profit rather than handle his business at a loss.

The organized warehousemen in the past several years have taken an important step forward through the means of educational advertising. I will venture to say that the educational and enlightenment program planned is cultivating various manufacturers and jobbers to see clearly just how warehouses can fit in their particular business. They are discovering points of economy never thought of before. Even in large establishments you will find some departments using warehouses, while other departments, not having a clear knowledge of how warehouses function, upon investigation were convinced that their product could also be stocked at strategic points convenient to the trade and delivered to them on short notice at a cost lower than they could produce if performed on their own premises. There is a large percentage of business that we have not as yet attracted that can be secured through methods of education.

I am, therefore, a strong believer in advertising in an informative way, and as the individual warehouse is in a position to expend only a limited amount of funds for this purpose, the cooperative scheme appears to be the solution closest at hand. The constant effort will mean more business for 1931 and of a nature that is more diversified, hence more profitable.

"Harder Work"

By C. E. Dragoun, Ames, President Iowa Warehousemen's Association

YOU have hit the nail on the head with your caption which reads "1931 America Forward March." It seems we can't pick up a paper or listen to the radio but that someone is shouting to the world about hard times and the unemployment situation. It has been talked and read so much that the public is commencing to believe it.

Presuming that every paper would talk the other way, every speaker over the radio and at banquets would tell his audience that they are suffering from brain fever, and then in turn every reader and every listener would think, feel and live as he should, do a little work for a change and play golf when he could find the time, if any could be found, I doubt if he would have the inclination or the time to think of business as being quiet.

It is true that volume has dropped off a little, but is it because business is rotten or have things just come back to somewhere near normal, and we have found ourselves over-expanded? So let's put aside the "rose" and "blue" colored glasses which we have been wearing and get out the old clear white "specs" and quit kidding ourselves.

One factor I consider very important and that is the industry should watch coming legislation to see it is not unfavorable. We are, in this State at least, now paying more than our share of taxes, and I would advise other State leaders to watch this closely and not have it slipped over them as the Legislators did over us.

Therefore the solution, as I see it, is simply a little harder work, cut down on unnecessary and extravagant expenditures (but don't quit spending entirely), keep both feet on the ground, and cultivate your competitor as you have never done before.

Individual Study

By T. E. Witters, Baltimore, President Maryland Warehousemen's Association

THE situation at Baltimore is somewhat unique. Some of the warehouses report present business as fair, while others report almost complete stagnation. Some report the year of 1930 slightly better than 1929, while others report a considerable falling off. The views of the prospects of 1931 are equally divided. It is thought that present banking conditions and the serious unemployment will no doubt lead to less consumption, with a consequent falling off in the movement and distribution of supplies of all kinds.

Some of our members, however, think a month or two more will see the end of the present depression, and that the present depletion will stimulate an unusual pickup.

Baltimore warehousemen have been studying this situation with the purpose of helping in any way they can toward a return to normalcy, but it has been found that almost every case needs individual consideration.

Association Support

By Samuel G. Spear, Boston, President Massachusetts Warehousemen's Association

THERE was considerable merit in the old idea of checking up the past and making new resolutions for the future on the dawn of the New Year. These affected our personal habits and morals.

Now we are having to do the same thing with our business habits.

The merchandise division of our industry in New England finds itself this new year with much vacant space, with an overhead like the appetite of a football player just off the training table, and with rates hammered by clever traffic men down to the vanishing point.

What are we going to do about it? Shall we fade away and give up the ghost, or shall we put our fighting togs on and go out to win?

New Englanders have always had to fight and have never been really licked—so we are going after old man business depression with a club.

The great big little word SERVICE is what will do the trick. Security was the word in the old days when whole cargoes of wool, sugar and hemp were tucked away for six months to two years at a time. But now when goods come in tomorrw and go out yesterday the security is necessary but SERVICE is the big idea.

Our service must be improved—but how?

Here are a few thoughts.

1. Perfection of inventory systems.

2. Giving the storer all the facts about his stock that you would need if it were your own.

3. Simplification of methods to cut down duplication of paper work to a minimum.

Fair treatment of our employees, creating good-will which is reflected in their contact with our customers, should be carefully considered as a means of improving service.

Cooperation with our fellow warehousemen, both locally and nationally, is extremely important. If we have temporarily lost money, or fear that we are going to do so, do not make that an excuse for dropping our association affiliations. No business man can afford to be out of touch with the others in his industry. Banks will begin to investigate, storers will wonder, and it is apt to be but the beginning of the end for Mr. Warehouseman when he resigns from his association.

No one warehouseman can stop the encroachment of the railroads in the storage business. Nor can one alone make a dent in the Shipping Board, the War Department or other Government agencies when they directly or indirectly allow unfair competition of war-built properties with private capital invested in warehousing facilities. The powerful Barge Line with its Government subsidies cannot be attacked successfully by any one warehouseman.

A united front must be shown to these powerful agencies.

Any dues that have ever been paid to local or national warehouse associations have been repaid to the industry ten times over by the achievements of the past. And yet there is more work to be done in the immediate future than in any of the past years.

Economize? Yes. But not on necessities. Your associations are necessities.

"Back to Hardpan"

By B. C. Hubbard, Grand Rapids, President Michigan Furniture Warehousemen's Association

APPRECIATING that one man's guess is as good as another's, members of the Michigan Furniture Warehousemen's Association at a meeting in Detroit, Dec. 11, refrained from a lengthy discussion of future prospects. They were a unit, however, in believing the next four months' business would warrant the most drastic measures of economy.

The most prominent underlying cause of the business depression is the almost universal installment buying of pleasure vehicles and other luxuries. The effects have not yet spent themselves, but the warehouseman who has his house in order and the grit to weather the storm will emerge better in every way with his service improved, his men appreciating their jobs, and his financial structure sound.

After all, what has a warehouseman to sell other than service in some form? A close application to business, getting back to hardpan, and arduous personal work of executives, will of necessity result in better profits, improvement of attractive side lines, and a sane meeting of ever changing conditions.

It would seem that long distance trucking is on the threshold of its greatest development, with cooperative spirit and association activities a sign of the times. A few years ago, with inadequate transportation facilities, the problem was within the scope of one man's viewpoint, but now without some avenue of interchange the individual is lost in the network of inferior, cheap competition and the maze of legislation.

The need was never greater for association work than now, and a virile, aggressive organization such as we believe the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association to be, with the full support of its membership, is an absolute necessity.

Inform the Public

By W. A. Morse, Minneapolis, President Minnesota Warehousemen's Association

WE have felt in the Ninth Federal Reserve District conditions affecting business and employment were almost as satisfactory as last year. This is brought about by reason of the fact that in our territory we had not experienced any boom nor did the effects of Wall Street speculation reach the majority of our people.

The warehousing industry during 1930 has felt the pinch of increased competition, but has not felt the lack of business. For 1931 the industry does not look for a year of profit, but rather one in which we hope, by careful management, to minimize the loss.

Warehouses do not compete by and large with themselves as much as they do with the empty buildings in the particular community in which they are doing business. Curtailed business means more empty buildings, and each empty building stands as a menace to a fair price which the warehouseman might secure for his services.

We hear all along the line that prices are coming down, but the industry in the Twin Cities at least has not found a single item in their expenses for the year 1930 which has come down, and, on the contrary, their principal item—taxes—has increased.

It is an old saying, but nevertheless true, that this is an age of cooperation, and those industries which thrive best are the ones which cooperate the most. It is very easy to expound the theory of cooperation and the benefits derived from it, but actual practice brings one face to face with the every-day problems of the industry, and as competition becomes keener, coopeeration diminishes, so that until we can find a method of matching cooperation with competition, the industry will probably remain as it is today, with prices dictated more by our larger customers than by the warehouse companies themselves.

We are in an era when credits are plentiful, but every commodity that any company has to sell is over-produced, and if we may call warehousing a commodity, it is certainly over-produced. Economists have tried to tell certain industries that there is no such thing as overproduction. They have advocated that through the use of advertising a commodity which apparently was overproduced might be presented to a new set of potential customers, and in that way the scope of the natural field for that particular commodity would be increased, and so the over-production would be done away with.

Advertising is not a panacea for all ills, but insofar as educating the public to the use of warehouses, it will perhaps create an enlarged field for the industry. We hope that that which has been done in 1930 will begin to reflect business returns to the warehouses during 1931 and thereby create a new field of potential customers for our industry, and help to relieve the state of overproduction in which we now find ourselves.

My suggestion is that the educational side of advertising be emphasized and that educational films be prepared to be shown before trade associations, colleges, and service club meetings, which will bring conclusive evidence to the public that warehousing is not one of the evils of our present method of distribution whereby the consumer has to pay more money for his products than he really should, but contributes toward the effective and economical means of distribution so that the consumer really pays less than he might were not warehousing used.

Quick Turnover

By Frank M. Cole, Kansas City, President Missouri Warehousemen's Association

(By Telegraph)

MISSOURI warehousemen have not at any time sold United States short and are prepared to play a prominent part in stimulating return to business normalcy by contributing intensive efforts toward improved distribution service.

It is essential now, more than at any time heretofore, to satisfy the insistent demand for quick turnover of merchandise stocks.

With a keen appreciation of our obligation as an integral part of the distribution service of the country, we face 1931 with the determination to meet every demand, and, by joining hands with interested shippers and carriers in the present emergency, to facilitate an early resumption of normal business.

Keep Prices Steady

By Frederick Petry, Jr., Trenton, President New Jersey Furniture Warehousemen's Association

THE furniture warehouse business and the moving business have felt the effects of the depression. It is purely a service business and in times like these it is difficult to make suggestions as to how business can be improved. I firmly believe that the members of the New Jersey Furniture Warehousemen's Association in their individual businesses are making every effort consistently to improve the service given the public. Some of the members in this period of depression have taken on side lines such as moth-proofing, rug and carpet cleaning, etc., to secure additional volume. In certain communities this can be very readily done, but each member in his own community must face the problem as he finds it.

Fortunately for New Jersey members there has not been a general over-expansion in construction of new warehouses throughout the State, and this problem does not confront our members as it probably does in some States. It behooves us carefully to watch capital expenditures until there has been a definite turn in the general businss situation. There will be a recovery, and when it comes, I believe the members of our State association will be in a position to take advantage of any opportunities for new business that may present themselves.

We are in a price market and in 1931 it behooves the warehousemen of this State to cooperate with one another in seeing that a fair return is received for services rendered. We must not be afraid to lose an order, or a number of them, to other members. Prices at the present time are reasonable and they should be strictly adhered to in order to obtain a profit from operations. There has been some tendency to quote lower prices in order to get business and I don't feel that this is either necessary or desirable.

Encroachments

By J. R. Shoemaker, Elmira, President New York State Cold Storage Association

THERE are so many conflicting conditions entering into the picture at this time that expression of views is necessarily individualistic and may not be truly representative of conditions as a whole.

Frankly, I think the entire warehousing industry is facing a very critical situation.

The constantly growing encroachments of the railroads into all branches of warehousing, under conditions which give them advantages that make their competition almost insurmountable to the private warehouseman.

Uncertainty as to the future position of the Governmental agencies, such as the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the Federal Farm Board, etc., toward financing additional warehouse projects that will compete with already existing facilities, as all such will inevitably do.

The absolute necessity for the entire warehousing industry to unite on a program of "setting its house in order," for the one very good reason that if we cannot unite on such a program we will inevitably hang separately.

Vigilance

By H. E. S. Wilson, Hoboken, N. J., President New York State Warehousemen's Association and President Warehousemen's Association of Port of New York

SERVICE is the only commodity the warehouseman has to sell. Service is a word very much overworked. Nevertheless, if the warehouseman will give to the shipper service another warehouseman is unwilling to give, he will get the business. Warehousemen sometimes get in a rut in doing business. They sometimes think their way is the only right way and are not ready to take any suggestions from the customer. Shippers would be willing to pay more if they could get this extra service.

What that service is, is for the warehouseman to ascertain. It may be promptness. It might be some peculiar way of making reports or rendering invoices. If a man has a high regard for a fellow man he will endeavor to find out what pleases that man most and will then try to do that thing; even so must a warehouseman be on the lookout to please his customer.

Spot stocks are now low. Shortly there will be a demand for goods. The shipper will be unable to ship enough direct from his plant. He will need ready spot stocks in strategic points. The warehouseman who is ready to please, who will give the particular service desired by the shipper, will secure this business.

The warehouse company will need executives who are vigilant, who supervise their force of employees. Many customers are driven away by thoughtless clerks. It is easier to hold an old customer than to get a new one.

It is not wise to meet the lowest rate named. At times it is better to lose a consignment, to allow a customer to ascertain that low rates are not always profitable.

It behooves the warehouseman to watch his costs. Just because he has taken a certain commodity at a certain rate for years does not mean that he should continue to store at the same rate if his own costs have risen. Rates must necessarily reflect costs; and if costs advance, storage rates must likewise be increased.

The warehouse business is a peculiar business. It is much more difficult to name the proper rates, much more difficult than for a manufacturer. The manufacturer can figure the costs on a certain article and, as his workmen get more accustomed to manufacturing same, as they become more skillful, he can increase his profit; but the warehouseman must take an average cost to handle a commodity and, knowing his overhead, endeavor to arrive at a price necessary to cover the overhead—which will be a just rate. Knowing this figure, he should insist on his rate no matter what others may do. If each warehouseman will do this, the warehouse business for 1931 will show a greater profit.

The Golden Rule

By W. R. Kissick, Cleveland, President Ohio Warehousemen's Association

THE industry can improve its services to shippers and the public by closer observance of the Golden Rule.

The estimator must be a man who is honest with himself. Your customers will then receive a figure for the work to be performed within at least 10 per cent of the actual cost, and when the customer has accepted your estimate you will have added another name to your list of satisfied customers, which in the last analysis is the foundation of our business structure.

A few of the steps toward better profits will be found in keeping a close watch on overhead expense. By careful, intelligent purchase of all supplies and material. The elimination of lost time by the men in the hauling and packing departments. In the making and keeping of friends (customers).

One problem that requires solution is what is going to happen to long distance removal of household goods by motor van. What will happen to the warehouse industry with the possibility, if not the probability, of the Mayflower and the Greyhound companies establishing terminal warehouses from coast to coast? What can be done to bolster up our packing departments, occasioned by the removal of household goods by motor van? What, in the evolution of things, will take its place?

As to how these problems can be worked out to the betterment of business as a whole, I am not competent to give a satisfactory answer. It is something that has to do with the individual concerns and what they will do to bring about better business.

I do feel that by closer cooperation of those interested in the industry, and by the coordination of the national, regional, State and local associations, something might be worked out that would be of material benefit to the industry.

This could be materially helped by the stablization of business throughout the country.

Keep a close watch on the various State Legislatures to the end that they do not pass legislation inimical to our industry.

And last, let me add that it might be beneficial to bury the crêpe-hanger so that the sunshine of prosperity may again shine upon us all.

Motor Freight

By Ford H. Hotz, Ponca City, President Oklahoma Transfer & Warehousemen's Association

(By Telegraph)

DO not look for immediate prosperity. However, there are two moves, as I see it, that might help the situation.

Now is a good time to add a little extra service to your work while you have time, men and equipment that are not busy. Increasing service is far more profitable and will eliminate the necessity of cutting prices.

If you are not operating a motor freight line, get busy and apply for a franchise. L.C.L. freight from now on will be delivered via motor freight lines. The only way you can recover this business is to operate your own line or to affiliate by pick-up and delivery for one already operating.

Side Lines

By Walter E. Sweeting, Philadelphia, President Pennsylvania Furniture Warehousemen's Association

ONE of the ways to better conditions in our industry is for every warehouseman to be on the alert for every source of new business which can be developed at a profit. This means the expansion of our industry into related fields.

I had always had a repugnance for so-called side lines and it took a long while for me to view the side line as an integral part or department of our business. It finally dawned on me that side lines relating to our business really belong in it. The warehouseman's task is to furnish all services necessary to preserve and protect home and office furnishings.

This expansion can be carried to the point of absurdity by putting in a typewriter repair department, but to me it is not absurd to expand from furniture to the storage of furs and clothing, which now has an historic background in some of the leading warehouses of the country, and next to the fumigating, and later moth-proofing of home furnishings. These are as logical as rug cleaning, which warehousemen have done, either directly or indirectly, for decades.

What more logical than that we should expand our service to the cleaning of furniture placed in our care; go into the home to clean furniture, or clean the new home before the new occupant moves in?

Who knows but what some day the warehouseman will be an interior decorator also? We hang pictures and mirrors now. Why not hang drapes, and do other similar things?

"Systematize"

By Roy Binyon, Fort Worth, President Texas Warehouse & Transfermen's Association

WE of the Southwest feel that we are indeed fortunate in that we live in one of the most rapidly developing sections of the United States. No period of depression can be of very long duration in the face of such continued development. Warehousing will be called upon to assist this development during 1931, just as it was called upon to serve during the period of depression through which we are passing.

Our industry is unique in that, regardless of the economic conditions, it occupies an undisputed position of service to mankind. On the upward swing of the cycle of prosperity we move the newcomer into the territory and handle the merchandise he must consume. On the downward swing we store his household goods, move him to a cheaper home or transport his effects to a place where better conditions prevail.

There can be little argument against the statement that we have reached "bottom." As manufacturers take their losses and prices are reduced, we will see a gradual resumption of buying on the part of the public in 1931. This means that the warehousemen may look for a continual increase in business during the coming months. But we must watch our overhead, systematize our work and make every transaction produce a profit if we are to show a gain. The resumption of buying will be so gradual that every care must be taken lest we overestimate the volume and increase our overhead to the point where a profit is impossible.

Price cutting in our industry does not produce more business, and because our industry is already operating at the lowest possible price consistent with making a profit, I would urge our industry to hold up the price and increase the service rendered, rather than lower the price in an effort to get more business. There is just so much to be had—why not make a profit on it?

It might be summarized by saying that for 1931 we must cut corners, make the spare time count, spend wisely and stick together.

"Stand Firm"

By J. E. Turnquist, Aberdeen, President Washington State Warehousemen's Association

OUR industry as operated today is very complete in its service. However, there is always room for improvement and such improvements and betterments in our service can be best solved by close cooperation between shippers, the public and the storage warehouseman.

The steps toward better profits may be best solved through cooperation between warehousemen by adopting a uniform and fair rate that will bring a reasonable profit. Rates should be worked out so as to be easily explained to anyone using the service, and confidence, self-respect and fairness should be exercised between competitors. Always speak a good word for your fellow competitor.

There are many problems at present that require solution—large amounts invested in warehouses, unavoidably fixed overhead expenses, and many other things that contribute to great expense items. On the other hand, revenues are badly depleted, affected entirely by decreased volume.

How can we overcome this situation?

By raising our rates? No, not at this time.

By lowering salaries, wages, etc.? This is not very desirable.

If it is at all possible let us stand firm and exercise every effort toward bringing volume back to normal conditions. This, I think, is the most essential solution for everyone concerned, and let us hope that it may be solved within our industry in 1931.

"The Greatest Evil"

By H. P. Melius, Milwaukee, President Wisconsin Warehousemen's Association

THERE seems to be plenty of business It may be true that Milwaukee is somewhat over-warehoused, and that there is not quite enough business to make everyone happy, but the writer is of the firm opinion that if those who are engaged in the business would stop to consider that lowering the prices below the other fellow to get the business is the game that everybody can play, but the result would be and is disastrous.

In order to improve the conditions in the warehouse business in Milwaukee and everywhere else it is necessary that the men engaged in the business get together and determine what is a fair charge for the service rendered, and stick to that charge; their troubles to a great extent would soon be overcome.

The warehousing and transfer business should be better during a period of this kind for the simple reason that there is a great deal of changing about in employment, business being more dull in some places than it is in others, and the natural consequences are that people are shifting from one town to another. On account of the depression there should be more storage, and it may be necessary to reduce the storage prices somewhat, the amount of that reduction to be arrived at by the companies engaged in the storage business in the localities they are in.

But it is not necessary to go to price cutting, which is the greatest evil, and which makes us all say that business is bad.

"Hand to Mouth"

By R. E. Abernathy, President Dallas Warehouse & Transfermen's Association

ONE way in which the merchandise warehouseman can improve service to the shippers and the public is to place emphasis throughout his entire organization on the warehouseman's ability to handle "hand to mouth business." The public benefits when merchandise enjoys a rapid turnover. Great numbers of small sales appear to be the logical outlet for the shippers. The warehouseman can give publicity as to his ability to handle this kind of business, and then build up his organization efficiently to insure a profit from such business.

Profits from our industry will be governed by the same basic factors as in past years. Intelligent advertising will play a part. Eliminating the price cutter will be absolutely necessary. Increasing the high standards of efficiency and business ethics within our industry will do most to make our operation profitable.

Charge for Services

By H. B. Plummer, President Houston Warehousemen's Club

THE public warehouse is becoming more of a vital factor in the distribution of merchandise, being called upon to render services performed by jobbers and branch houses. A warehouse must have a wide awake organization, both in the operating and accounting ends of the business. Records must be filed so that any piece of paper pertaining to a delivery can be found at a moment's notice. Also, stock records posted immediately on receipt or disbursement of merchandise. As merchants are buying for their daily requirements, orders moving from a warehouse should be delivered or shipped promptly.

This added service, in connection with hand to mouth buying necessitating a great number of deliveries, has increased materially the labor and clerical expense. I doubt if there is a warehouse in the United States that is not losing money on the handling end of their business.

The writer's solution of this problem would be to assess an in-bound handling charge on arrival of merchandise and an outbound charge per delivery with a minimum charge per delivery. This would take up the loss, and, at the same time, distribute the handling revenue where it should be.

A great number of national concerns have left the public warehouses, establishing their own branches, but are fast coming back to their former homes. This depression period is opening the eyes of the executives as to the excessive expense of a branch house operation over using a public warehouse.

Competition

By Alexander Fleming, President Montreal Branch of Canadian Storage & Transfermen's Association

SO far as warehousing in Montreal is concerned it is hard for me to convey a bright and constructive survey for 1931. One of our members having resigned, the other merchandise and cold storage warehouses here are looking to the future through smoked glasses.

Just when our association had completed a new rate schedule and adopted it, effective Oct. 1, 1930, this member withdrew and circularized Montreal merchants to the effect that the company was prepared to cut handling and storage rates below those quoted in the new rate guide and also to revert to the dangerous practice of absorbing fire and sprinkler insurance charges and liability.

For many years the practice with Montreal warehousemen was to charge rates by first and succeeding months. The association adopted the changing of this practice to the modern manner of assessing separate charges for handling and storage. Free insurance had been successfully cancelled, without exception, prior to Oct. 1.

The action of the offending member has led to indiscriminate rate cutting and has undone all the good work performed by the association for the betterment of the industry.

The demand for storage of general merchandise and cold storage commodities has been fair during 1930, and, with the improvement in the basis and manner of assessing warehouse charges, the individual warehouses are looking forward to 1931, hopeful, with other industries, that the general depression that has been overhanging business conditions will be removed in 1931, and brighter times be in store for all of us. We are hopeful that Canada will recover more quickly than the U.S.A. on account of the development that has shown during the past years in our natural resources, particularly in our mining developments.

John L. Nichols' words again come to my aid, and our slogan should be, for 1931 "More Cooperative Competition," as in that lies, more than most things, our ultimate salvation as warehousemen.

Idle Time

By W. Pickard, President Toronto Cartage & Warehousemen's Association

IN speaking of how we can improve conditions in the furniture moving and storing industry I do not know of any better slogan than "A satisfied customer is the best advertisement." This old phrase still rings as true as ever.

Advertising is of course necessary, particularly in times of depression like the present. We should however broadcast actual facts concerning our facilities and services; making extravagant claims which cannot be absolutely lived up to never reach beyond the first sucker which has fallen for the bait. Truthful advertising pays big dividends in the form of repeat business.

Among the more important problems which we should seek a solution for is the one of lost or idle time. This is specially applicable to the cartage and moving department. All of us have considerable time each year when our motor equipment is at a standstill. Something can be accomplished in this direction by having all motor equipment thoroughly overhauled and painted during the quiet periods.

I believe a similar method to the one adopted by the Illinois association would prove very useful in most localities. I refer to the changing of the leasing periods from May 1 and October 1.

The long distance moving is still a major problem. I do believe this is being solved to a very large extent by the inauguration of the Allied Van Lines. A local committee is working on the proposition at the present time. It is expected therefore something of a practical nature will be in operation in Canada before the spring moving season commences.

The Tariff Fabric

By S. M. Haslett, President Warehousemen's Association of the Port of San Francisco

CERTAINLY commercial warehousing is maintaining, as an essential industry, its proper pace to keep abreast with the newer methods of merchandise distribution. To the public benefit, our industry has been constantly extending its public service and step by step is taking a greater part in the enforced sales methods of placing sold products in the purchaser's hands with the minimum delay required under hand-to-mouth buying. Acting, as we so often do, as the resident agent of the manufacturer hundreds of miles away, our service has become one of utmost importance in the general scheme to so reduce distribution costs as to permit the manufacturer to enlarge upon the territory into which his wares may be introduced.

With these changes in our own mode of operation, we may be inclined to overlook the fact that they likewise change our cost of operation. No business can long endure where it undertakes the ramifications of a retail service at prices that are fair only for wholesale volume. Until all within our industry become equally informed of the direction in which each part of its dollar income is spent, there will be some among us who fail to appreciate that the true public benefit rests in the first instance upon adequacy of service made possible only under a tariff fabric that is sufficient to preserve for all the future, our monuments of public utility.

Our immediate problems for solution are more internal than otherwise. Precisely as we remove the evils of our own making, will those that purchase our services benefit. Our industry is overexpanded until today we are carrying the cost on not less than twenty-five per cent more facility than justified by normal demand.

Moreover, no less important than to preserve competition, is the need not to exceed the limits where further competition sets up an economic waste. We have only one product to sell. It is SERVICE. That implies intelligence, reliability and modern equipment. The public interest demands our assurance of these business virtues, for without them we could take no important part in the upward level of commercial supremacy.

For the betterment of business and as a constructive effort for the year 1931, it seems to me that one of our greatest tasks is none other than to continue our efforts to reach the uninformed producer or manufacturer and bring clearly to his attention the important place we occupy as an economic factor in the distribution of commodities.

No Patent Medicine

By R. M. King, Syracuse,
President Central New York
Warehousemen's Club

THE weeks we have just gone through are more of a readjustment period than a period of depression, for I have unlimited faith in the security of the fundamental business conditions of our country. We have been taking up the slack and we must be pretty nearly finished and can now feel that our effort will be directly transmitted to the effort of moving forward.

With regard to the warehouse industry, I frankly do not know whether we have yet felt the full effects of this readjustment or are just beginning to. The next two or three months will tell. I feel, with some pride, that warehousing has ridden on a more even keel throughout the whole storm than any other line of endeavor, and therefore we should be in a better position to go forward now and do our part in helping to bring about normalcy. Generally speaking, we have not been weakened and we are in a fit condition to meet the ever changing demands of shippers and the industries.

As to what we can do as an industry to improve our service, I say "Be ready to service any legitimate demand that comes within the scope of our ability, providing such demands are accompanied by willingness to pay a fair rate for value received." If we can so serve, then the step toward better profits will follow.

There are going to be many problems to solve, as there always have been, but they can all be solved by close cooperation, toleration, and an application of the Golden Rule. There is no "patent medicine" that will cure all. Close attention to business, a high regard for the real values of life, a sense of responsibility toward our fellow men and a firm faith in the future, will put us on the high road before we know it.

The Business Press Points the Way

THE "1931 America Forward March" return-to-business-normalcy movement inaugurated by a group of leading business magazines, including Distribution and Warehousing, is attracting nationwide attenton. Government officials have endorsed it, industrial leaders are backing it, and the red, white and blue placards and stickers—similar in design to the illustration on page 15, showing Uncle Sam with his sleeves rolled up, prepared to tackle the job ahead—are being used all over the country: the placards in offices and on windows and vans, and the stickers on business letters.

Placards, seven inches wide and eleven inches deep in size, and in the national colors, may be had while they last, without cost, on application to Distribution and Warehousing.

Colored stickers, two inches high and an inch and a quarter across, may be obtained at the cost price—25 cents per 100 or $2 per 1000.

Paper window stickers, also in colors, printed on 100-lb. white stock, size 9 by 12 inches, with space for imprint, may be had for 25 cents a dozen, or $7.50 per 1000, which is the cost price. These may be used also for mailing.

Campaign buttons, celluloid faced, with the slogan in three colors, may be had for $1 per 100. This is the cost price.

Remittances should be made with all orders.

Send for placards, stickers and buttons. Their use will help banish pessimism, will stimulate confidence. They are symbols of the thinking business man's conviction that industrial brightness awaits America around the turn of the new year.

H. C. Herschman, general president of the American Warehousemen's Association, writes:

"It is not only the team work of one industry but of all industries and the public in general to 'Forward March,' as your program for the year among your various magazines has so thoughtfully sloganed."

A. V. Mason, general manager of the Terminal Warehouse Company, Milwaukee, writes:

"We think your '1931 America Forward March' movement is a splendid undertaking, certain to give added impetus to a return to 'business normalcy.' . . . It is our impression that the business situation today is somewhat psychological, which is unfortunately being dwelt upon, rather than dissipated, by many publications of unquestionable standing. This is unfortunate, as it has tended to surround business generally with an acutely conservative attitude, which directly retards not only local but national and international commerce."

The "1931 America Forward March" insigne "is the best thing of its kind we have seen anywhere," writes Robert F. Miller, executive vice-president of the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America. Mr. Miller asked for permission, which was of course granted, to reproduce the Uncle Sam illustration on the front page of the Jan. 1 issue of the association's paper, News Flashes, which goes to 4000 executives in the food manufacturing field—including officers of many companies which distribute through warehouses.

Says Secretary of Commerce Lamont:

"We all realize that the present situation is to a considerable extent the result of a state of mind. I believe that efforts such as you are making will be helpful."

Lincoln Fireproof Storage Co., Los Angeles, requested 25 "Forward March" placards.

Harold Alsdorf, moving and transfer, Mt. Vernon, Ohio, requested placards.

Brown's General Trucking, Islip, N. Y., ordered 400 stickers.

B. G. Costich & Sons, Rochester, N. Y., requested 5 placards and inquired regarding sticker prices.

Empire Freight Co., Boston, requested 12 placards and ordered 1000 stickers.

Garber-Buick Company, Saginaw, Mich., requested a supply of placards.

Jurgensen Motor Transfer, Wilmington, N. C., received 6 placards on request.

Rockland Motor Express, Nyack, N. Y., requesting placards and asking about sticker prices, wrote: "The idea 'Forward March' is good and ought to be spread among the people. We will do our share."

Rogers Company, Westerly, R. I., requested placards and inquired about sticker prices.

Saratoga Transfer & Storage Co., Saratoga Springs, N. Y., received 12 placards on request—"for our vans and windows, etc."

C. E. Spicer & Sons, Marion, Ohio, requested 6 placards.

K. E. Sutherland, Owensboro, Ky., received 3 placards on request.

Swormstedt Transfer Line, Columbus, received 6 placards on request.

W. J. Maier Terminal Warehouses, Inc., Huntington, W. Va., requesting 25 placards, wrote: "We want to do everything possible to forward such a movement. We can place quite a number of these posters in this and surrounding cities, and our trucks, operating over the territory of southern West Virginia, southern Ohio and eastern Kentucky, should give quite a bit of publicity to such a movement."

B. Frank Johnson, secretary of the Texas Warehouse and Transfermen's Association, used the "Forward March" insigne to illustrate the cover of his Dec. 5 bulletin to members.

JOIN this business procession which business magazines have organized to restore business normalcy. What politician can't or won't do, the business press can and will. Become "Forward March"-conscious. Think "1931 America Forward March." Talk "1931 America Forward March." Act "1931 America Forward March." You can't lose!

In Federal Barge Lines Operation

Free Storage and Handling Still Continue

By R. W. Dietrich

I HAVE just read the speech by the chairman of the Inland Waterways Corporation, General Ashburn, to the convention of the Mississippi Valley Association, on Nov. 24, as reported in the December issue of Distribution and Warehousing.

The General referred to the complaint of the American Warehousemen's Association against what it considers unreasonable, unduly prejudicial and unduly discriminatory practices of the Federal Barge Lines, as something that reminds him of "a nigger who is scratching when he don't itch," and as something at which "It is to laugh, as the French say."

And so there was presented to the convention the spectacle of a highly placed Government official deriding the efforts of a large and representative organization of business men, who are citizens and taxpayers as well, to protect the legitimate interests of its members against the selfish usurpation of their functions by the Governmentally owned and operated corporation over which the General presides.

We might reply in the same note of levity, but we will content ourselves by reminding the General that part of the taxes of the warehousemen go to pay the losses of his corporation and the salaries of its officials and the warehousemen are entitled to fair and considerate treatment.

IN the Inland Waterways Corporation's 1929 report to Congress, General Ashburn mentioned the protests and complaints of the American Warehousemen's Association about the free storage, free service, and unfair treatment, by the Federal Barge Lines, and practically dared the warehousemen to bring their complaints to the Interstate Commerce Commission, before which tribunal, he stated, they were "properly justiciable."

The warehousemen did complain to the Commission, which entertained the complaint and held a hearing at Memphis on Sept. 30, and, although the case is not yet decided, the General publicity states "It is to laugh."

But the Commission evidently does not consider it a laughing matter.

And apparently neither did the Barge Lines' witness at the hearing consider it a laughing matter, while under cross examination.

Nor did the learned counsel for the Barge Lines consider it a laughing matter; otherwise they would not have fought so hard and earnestly.

General Ashburn then went on to state, at St. Louis, that "the complaint might just as well not have been filed, because such free-storage-in transit was abandoned by the Barge Line before the complaint ever came to trial."

Now let us see about this:

On Sept. 29, one day before the Memphis hearing, the Barge Lines made effective a tariff, making a charge of "one and a quarter cents per hundred pounds for 60 days stopping in transit"—in other words, making a charge for the privilege of stopping.

And so free storage and free handling still continue.

The warehousemen do not object to the privilege of storage in transit, or stopping in transit; railroads all over the country allow storage in transit, to goods stored with public warehousemen.

THIS article by R. W. Dietrich, New Orleans storage executive who is chairman of the American Warehousemen's Association's committee on traffic and transportation — river and lake ports, is a reply to the St. Louis speech of Major-General T. Q. Ashburn, chairman of the board of the Inland Waterways Corporation, before the Mississippi Valley Association in November.

General Ashburn in his talk stated that the Government-owned Barge Lines had abandoned free storage in transit except at the Twin Cities and Dubuque.

As spokesman for warehousing in the fight to end Federal competition with the storage industry, Mr. Dietrich does not agree with the Government official that "It is to laugh"—and maintains that free storage and free handling still go on.

But the Barge Lines give free storage and free handling and at the same time confine the privilege of storage in transit to goods stored in their premises.

In other words, a shipment of sugar is stored in the Barge Lines' warehouse at Memphis; it is subsequently sold in Nashville; the through rate from New Orleans to Nashville would be protected and in addition the sugar would have had free storage and free handling. But—

If the sugar would be stored in the warehouse of one of our members at Memphis, the through rate would not be protected. Consequently our members do not now get this business.

For a long time the Barge Lines allowed storage in transit to sugar stored with our members at Memphis; the owners of the sugar paid the handling and storage charges; the Barge Lines had the differential against the rail lines of 20 per cent which the law allows; and our members enjoyed a large business.

Suddenly the Barge Lines withdrew the privilege to store in transit from our members and confined it to their own premises and that of the municipal warehouse of Memphis.

Why did the Barge Lines first allow this privilege to our members and then withdraw it? General Ashburn states:

"It is the policy of the Federal Barge Line to confine operation of its transit arrangements to wharf warehouses located on the river bank equipped to economically discharge freight from barges and served on the back side with railroad tracks."

How can the question of economical or non-economical physical handling of freight whether on a river bank or otherwise affect the conferring or withdrawal of a privilege like that of stopping in transit?

To confer such a privilege puts no expense on a carrier except to make a clerical record—that so many packages of freight went to such and such a warehouse on some date and moved out on such and such a date and the Barge Lines have to record such exercise of this privilege of transit in their own warehouse.

When the Barge Lines coupled an exclusive transit privilege in their own warehouses with free storage and free handling they deprived the public warehousemen of the opportunity of carrying on their legitimate business. The Barge Lines, by confining their transit to their own warehouses and allowing free storage and free handling at their

ITS OPINIONS ARE BASED ON CLOSE CONTACT WITH THE MORE THAN 400,000 SUBSCRIBERS REACHED BY THEIR PUBLICATIONS IN FAR-FLUNG FIELDS OF RETAILING AND INDUSTRY.

CONFIDENCE begins to replace fear and indecision. Business sentiment grows more favorable.

Those two great muscles, steel and copper, that parallel and aid in the support of the business backbone, have increased in strength. More of our soiled financial linen has been laundered and, while locally a little unsteadying, has not precipitated a further general liquidation of stocks.

The automotive industry stretches a cordial hand to increased buying by way of the automobile shows, and the great merchandising channels find their inventories exceptionally low.

The consensus of opinion seems to be that we have touched bottom by rolling our wheels along it rather than with a decided thud, and that we are again gathering momentum. Whether we return to Better Business by air or afoot, the return will apparently be steady and well tempered. The nausea of the long fall will counsel prudence in the upturn.

Distribution and Warehousing feels that the course of improvement is best personified by the cadence of marching shoulder to shoulder. The greater interdependence of the present calls for such concerted action.

"1931 AMERICA—FORWARD MARCH"

THE COURSE OF BUSINESS FORECAST FOR JANUARY

BUSINESS	SALES	RETAIL STOCKS	COLLECTIONS	COMMENTS
AUTOMOTIVE	Anticipatel increase of 40% in Jan. over Dec., with decrease of about 30% from Jan. '30 on passenger cars. Trucks 35% and 10% respectively.	Passenger cars slightly higher—trucks about the same in Jan. as in Dec. Trucks slightly less, and passenger cars quarter million less than Jan. '30.	Passenger cars about the same, trucks slower in Jan. than in Dec. Passenger cars somewhat slower and trucks slightly improved over Jan. '30.	Passenger car field grows more optimistic, and, as money loosens up, truck field will improve.
DEPARTMENT STORES	Normal seasonal decrease of 50% to 55% from Dec. About equal to Jan. '30.	Normal reduction following holiday selling, and about 10% lower than Jan. '30.	On a par with recent months.	The tendency toward expenditure in usable merchandise will continue through January.
HARDWARE	Substantial seasonal decline from December, and about 10% under Jan. '30.	About 10% under Dec., and 25% lower than Jan. '30.	Better than Dec. and slightly slower than Jan. '30.	Recent firming of quotations on several basic lines instilling greater price confidence.
INSURANCE	Better in all lines over Dec., and a particular improvement, especially in the cities, in all lines over Jan. '30.	.....	Collections are hard, and little immediate improvement is anticipated.	The accumulation of contracts deferred until after the first of the year will make a substantial showing.
JEWELRY	Normal decrease of 70% to 75% from Dec. Slightly less than Jan. '30.	Retail stocks at lowest point in a long time, much lower than Jan. '30.	Collections, by retailers, better than in Dec.; from retailers, active. Both about the same as Jan. '30.	A better financial position anticipatel for the retailer than in past twelve months.
LUMBER	About the same as in Dec., and 15% to 20% lower than Jan. '30.	Stocks in Dec. '30 and Jan. '31 at lowest point in several years. 30% under Jan. '30.	Little change.	Price and stock inquiries from railroad and automotive concerns are lending encouragement.
MACHINERY METAL PRODUCTS METALS	Some measure of improvement in the iron and steel business seems assured.	Improvement in many metal-working and machinery lines will get under way with more tangible evidence of betterment in business sentiment.	.....	The low level of recent demand, and extraordinary pressure on inventories, suggest damming up of requirements that must soon be released.
PLUMBING AND HEATING	Slight improvement over Dec. (with seasonal allowances), but below Jan. '30.	Retail stocks will continue low.	Slightly better than Dec., and decidedly better than Jan. '30 because of better credit basis.	Stabilization of prices and a restoration of confidence in building industry necessary to give a decided turn for the better.
SHOES	Dependent upon weather. Rubber and heavy goods retarded, but should show exceptional business in Jan. General increase of 10% over Jan. '30.	Reduction in stocks universal, about 16% under Jan. '30.	Business 89.5% cash—10.5% credit. Will continue normal.	Orders will be placed for shoes for Easter selling.

Proposal to Place Warehousing Under Federal Supervision

Suggested Bill, Originating with the Industry, Provides for Filing of Tariffs and for Licensing of Merchandise and Cold Storage Firms. Action Unlikely at Short Session of Congress.

By HORACE H. HERR

DISTRIBUTION AND WAREHOUSING'S
Washington Bureau,
1163 National Press Building.

EVIDENCE is not lacking here that general revision of the Federal warehousing Act may be sought in the not distant future. In and out of Congress there are those who believe that economic developments since the World War, especially those incident to the newer national policies toward waterways development and Government intervention in the agricultural marketing activities, justify rather fundamental realignments between the warehousing industry and the Federal Government.

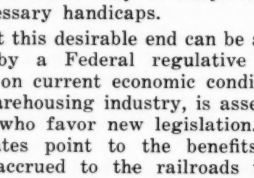
While it is quite obvious that no comprehensive legislation dealing with the problems inherent in closer relations between the two can be considered in this short session of Congress, interest in the subject is increasing. The activities of the cold storage division of the American Warehousemen's Association, through its committee on law and regulation, have not passed unnoticed here. The annual convention of the association, at Atlantic City in January, will be watched with considerable interest for expressions of the industry's attitude toward the present Federal Warehousing Act and suggestions for further legislation.

While the tentative legislative proposals drafted by A. V. Mason, of the Terminal Warehouse Company of Milwaukee, have not been brought to the attention of H. S. Yohe, chief of the Federal warehouse administration, he has heard informally of the movement within the cold storage industry for a comprehensive survey of present Federal regulative measures. In the absence of specific proposals, Mr. Yohe refrains from expressing an opinion as to the merits of the agitation within the cold storage group. However, in his annual report, issued in December, Mr. Yohe made no recommendations bearing on extension of present laws.

As represented here, the Mason legislative proposal which will come before the annual convention in Atlantic City contemplates a substitute for the present U. S. Warehouse Act so as to secure for the cold storage industry that measure of Federal regulative cooperation that would tend to stabilize the industry. Obviously, as the Federal Government, through the activities of the Federal Farm Board and the cooperative marketing associations (financed, in part at least, with Federal funds), become more and more an important factor in the warehouse and storage field, normal conditions as they had developed under private ownership are disturbed. It is argued that the Federal Government cannot escape the moral obligation to make readjustments as between the Government and private warehouses to the end that the latter may be subjected to no unnecessary handicaps.

That this desirable end can be attained only by a Federal regulative system based on current economic conditions in the warehousing industry, is asserted by those who favor new legislation. These advocates point to the benefits which have accrued to the railroads through the Transportation Act and the regulatory activities of the Interstate Commerce Commission. They held it a reasonable expectation that an analogous regulatory program would bring something like uniform rates for uniform service in warehousing, and would eliminate the unfair practices which, in the last analysis, always are a charge against the public.

Further argument favoring general revision and expansion of the Federal Warehouse Act, goes to the desirability of standardizing the warehouse receipt. In the past two years the warehouse receipt has taken on exceptional importance as a loan security. It is submitted that the percentage loan value ought to be stabilized. That is, that the Federal Government ought to indicate a percentage, say 65 per cent, or 75 per cent, as the legal load maximum from which deviation would be permitted only in the face of emergencies and then only under Federal approval or sanction. There has been noted a disposition among bankers to favor in their loan transactions the negotiable receipt issued by the warehouse holding a Federal license. This places the non-licensed house at a disadvantage. A system of licensing for the entire industry, with supervision by the Department of Agriculture through a warehouse commission of suitable personnel, could, it is submitted, place all concerns within the industry on a "parity of preference" in so far as warehouse receipts enter into the banking situation.



That the Mason proposals are tentative and that they do not now have the approval of the cold storage division of the American Warehousemen's Association, is understood here. The attitude of the association depends on action of the Atlantic City convention, and the Mason draft of a tentative bill will serve the purpose of giving the convention a concrete program for discussion.

Should the convention decide to espouse the Mason proposals, with changes as might be agreed upon, there would be no chance of getting consideration for the legislation in this session of Congress. As the session adjourns on March 4, only about one month would remain of the session following the Atlantic City convention. As this situation is important, the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee of the House and the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate would hold public hearings, and these probably would extend over quite a period. Consideration of the measure would, therefore, go over until the next Congress.

While no Senator or Representative has indicated such an intention, the proposed bill might very well be introduced late in this session for the purpose of challenging attention and arousing discussion so that the educational campaign in connection with the proposals might be prosecuted during the year, so that Congress would have a rather definite idea of "what it is all about" by the time Congress convenes in December, 1931.

Inasmuch as a measure of this importance does not meet unanimous acceptance, any attempt to obtain such legislation is bound to meet with formidable opposition even though a majority of the Congress may favor it.

The proposed bill to which illusion is made in the foregoing Washington correspondence is being printed in booklet form by the A. W. A. cold storage division for distribution to the members in advance of the Atlantic City convention late this month. As outlined at a recent meeting of the Warehousemen's Association of the Port of New York, it is "An Act to Provide for the Licensing and Supervision of Public Storage Warehouses," and the desired ends are:

1. To provide a substitute for the United States Warehouse Act and the Haugen bill.

2. To provide Federal supervision of the industry.

3. To protect the industry from "dangers" to negotiable receipts "resulting from U. S. Warehouse Act and Haugen bill."

4. With cooperation between the industry and the Department of Agriculture, the industry's problems would be less acute, and standards would be elevated and influences stabilized.

The high lights of the proposed legislation, according to the outline before the New York association, are that the industry would be tied up more intimately with the Government; that every cold storage and merchandise warehouse would be licensed under bond by the Department of Agriculture, thus insuring stability and responsibility of the warehouses; that warehouses would have to file tariffs with the Department of Agriculture, thus eliminating discrimination and rate cutting; that a warehouse commission would be set up within the Department of Agriculture, this commission "composed of at least two warehousemen, to stand between the industry and the Department to administer the Act"; that loans in excess of 75 per cent of value of goods would be unlawful except during public emergency; and that the law would augment and support the efforts of the Federal Trade Commission trade practice committee.

Section 1 of the proposed bill defines the terms warehouse, warehousemen, receipt, and products, the latter being "either agricultural or other products."

Section 2 provides for bonding and licensing, the minimum amount of bond being $5,000.

Sections 3, 4 and 5 cover the issuing of licenses by the Secretary of Agriculture, and Sections 6, 7 and 8 deal with inspections and fees.

Section 9 provides that storers of products in licensed warehouses must adhere to the Act and to the rules of the standard warehouse receipt.

The provision that loans in excess of 75 per cent would be unlawful except during public emergency comprises Section 10.

Section 11 provides that negotiable and non-negotiable receipts would be issued by licensed warehouses "and only for goods actually in storage."

In Section 12 is described what every licensed warehouse receipt must contain. This conforms generally with the current receipt being used by public warehouses.

Section 13 reads: "In case of negotiable receipt outstanding, no other receipt can be issued except original is lost or destroyed; then only in compliance with statutes of the United States. If no satutes cover, then warehouse may demand other security from storer to indemnify warehouse against loss."

Section 14 makes provision for the licensed warehouse to deliver stored goods to holder of receipt when (1) warehouseman's lien is satisfied; (2) negotiable receipt is surrendered, and (3) delivery of goods is signed for.

Section 15 provides that the licensed warehouse "shall endorse on negotiable receipt each whole or part delivery and cancel negotiable on complete delivery."

Section 16 covers the keeping of records and the filing of annual reports, with the Secretary of Agriculture, on condition of warehouse, contents, operation, and business, as required.

Section 17 provides for filing schedules of storage rates and service charges and would make it unlawful to deviate from these. Notice of changes would have to be filed thirty days in advance.

Section 18 provides for Federal inspection of goods, without cost to warehouses.

Section 19 provides for Federal publication of results of investigations and of revocation of licenses and the reasons therefor.

Examination of all warehouse records is provided for in Section 20.

"There shall be no conflict," Section 21 reads, "between this Act and any existing laws in States or District of Columbia. The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to cooperate in enforcement of all existing warehouse laws."

Section 22 covers offenses for improper and unlawful use of licenses and for malicious use and manipulation of receipts, etc., with provision for imposition of a fine of $10,000, "or double value of goods over this amount," or a year in prison. Operating a warehouse without a license, or violating the rules of the Act, would be punishable by a $2,500 fine or six months in prison. False representation as to grading or classification of goods would be punishable by a $500 fine or three months in prison.

Section 23 provides for proper marking of cold storage products for identification, while under Section 24 the malicious tampering with marks or tags would be unlawful.

Section 25 provides for appointment of a warehouse commission, of at least three and not more than five, to include one man from the cold storage industry and one from the merchandise warehouse industry, to act in quasi-judicial capacity in determining issues under the Act and to report to the Secretary of Agriculture. An appropriation of $200,000 to enforce the Act, pay expenses, rent and salaries of the commission, etc., is provided for in Section 26.

If any portion of the Act is declared invalid, Section 27 states, no other part of the Act shall be impaired or made invalid.

Concluding, Section 28 provides that the proposed Act would supersede and annul the United States Warehouse Act approved Aug. 11, 1916, and its amendments.

Mr. Mason, the author of the bill, wired the Port of New York association that he deemed the measure important because of the Government's apparent determination to foster agricultural and producing interests through broadening powers under the U. S. Warehouse Act. Such extension would ultimately work to the detriment of warehouses not operating under the Warehouse Act, he declared.

It was important also, Mr. Mason declared, because of a growing demand, on the part of bankers, for negotiable receipts issued by licensed warehouses.

Another reason cited by Mr. Mason was that it was essential "to protect State uniform warehouse receipts Acts and avoid conflict with such a Federal law as was proposed" at the last Congressional session. Mr. Mason's telegram continued:

"U. S. Warehouse Act compels warehousemen licensed to certify quality and grade of merchandise. Warehouse industry cannot afford to assume such indeterminate liability. For twenty-five years warehouse industry, particularly cold storage, has been on defensive against unwarranted and prejudicial legislation, and our proposed Act is to have same take place of U. S. Warehouse Act.

"It will give the industry the benefit of steadying, stabilizing influence which will come from such a law requiring warehouses to file rate schedules, etc., which was thought could be done through Federal Trade rules but unfortunately that is not possible.

"It will definitely remove the warehouse industry from the zone of injury through use of public funds by Government for new plant construction.

"It will provide a warehouse commission which would administer the proposed Act and bring with it moral and other benefits, thus preparing regulatory and supervisory legislation on its own motion. The industry is in the hands of men of ability but, because of absence of legal supervision, is being slowly but surely undermined by rate cutting, unfair practices, secret agreements, etc. The industry has never had a period, except during the World War, under Government supervision, when it could be deemed stabilized and steady.

Have You Quit Ox-Cart Shipping in This Airplane Age?
Cutting Costs by Studying the Shipping Department

By H. A. Haring

THE tourist in Europe, and in some of the older parts of our own country as well, is impressively led by guides to the thick stone walls of houses and cathedrals. Thicknesses of two feet, four feet, even five, are pointed out by the guide who often exclaims:

"They knew how to build in those days!"

For their day, undoubtedly they did. But, as an example for a modern man, most certainly they did not; for, since we have mastered the principles of bridging and the use of steel girders, we build far better with less material and less labor. Our homes offer more of comfort, with less work for our womenfolks to maintain them, and cost us less to construct in the first place, just because scientific design has solved all the impossibilities of massiveness and hugeness of building material.

We use lighter and thinner stuff and we achieve a degree of comfort unknown to preceding generations.

Obvious as this fact may be in the building of our homes, it is yet true that in the packing of goods for shipment many concerns have not grasped the principles of scientific design. They persist in using ox-cart packing cases in an airplane age, not having learned—or at least not having adopted—the principle that less weight and less thickness of material often gives more strength to the container and greater safety to the goods.

For, contradictory as it may appear, the fact remains that a heavy packing case may not be the best, even for such ponderous shipments as machinery and automobile engines.

Just as cartons made of paper and pulp have displaced boxes of wood for a host of commodities, so, too, cumbersome, wasteful and heavy boxes have given way to economical and light-weight containers of wood, without sacrificing any desirable quality.

The old theory that thickness and weight of the lumber determined strength for the box was quickly exploded when the United States established its Forest Products Laboratory at the University of Wisconsin. Here it was early demonstrated that thinner lumber, and less costly, when made up into boxes of balanced construction, when properly assembled, produced boxes and crates not only cheaper but absolutely stronger and more serviceable.

The Government's engineers, with their elaborate testing equipment, next proved that when a metal strip or wire tie is used around the box as a reinforcement, even thinner lumber yet may be used without losing either strength or efficiency. To multiply the metal strips or wire ties by two, using two rather than one, makes possible an even greater reduction in the thickness of lumber used, with no adverse effects.

So thoroughly proven are these statements, despite their apparent contradiction of what might be expected, that the railroads have accepted the new designs of boxes into their Freight Classifications, as they did the cartons more than twenty years ago. Now, after a few years of use, these carriers report that claims for loss and damage are actually less with the thinner box—not, of course, due to its thinness but owing to its balanced construction and its design to withstand strain and stress in a manner impossible for the rigid box. In a word, the new box absorbs all the shocks of transportation in the box members. Shocks are not transmitted to the contents. The box itself cushions the goods.

THEREFORE by quitting ox-cart methods, the shipper may save thousands of dollars each year in the cost of packing his goods and, at the same time, save additional sums through cutting down damage to his shipments. He also may gain that more intangible thing: good-will of customers because their goods always arrive in good condition.

The early investigations of the Government's laboratory clearly demonstrated that "the details of construction have far greater influence on the strength of a box than the species of wood used and indicate the need for intensive studies of the design of shipping containers." The purpose of any container is to withstand the hazards of transportation for the commodity. The nature of the commodity shipped, therefore, becomes a fundamental consideration in designing a container. The protection required varies from so simple a thing as holding together such a commodity as a batch of railway spikes to so elaborate a protection as that needed for delicate X-ray tubes. Each commodity, then, presents its own problem.

Further Authoritative Articles by H. A. Haring

DURING the past few years Distribution and Warehousing's contributing editor, H. A. Haring, has become nationally known as a constructive and dependable writer on subjects associated with distribution through the public warehouse.

The benefits accruing to sales and traffic managers, and to storage executives, are not by reason of his articles in Distribution and Warehousing alone. Informative texts serving to acquaint Business America with this industry's strategically economic position in the country's scheme of distribution are constantly appearing, under Mr. Haring's own name or one of his several noms de plume, in various business journals. He is a prolific writer whose thoughts and comments about warehousing are contributing in a significant way to the welfare of the distribution world.

In view of the importance of these writings of Mr. Haring, inaugurated in Distribution and Warehousing about five years ago, it is believed that our readers will be interested to know that this recognized authority on the industry will continue as this journal's contributing editor throughout 1931.

Mr. Haring

Article No. 70 of Mr. Haring's "Distribution. Its Economic Relation to Public Warehousing" series appears in the current January number. The subjects of his texts to be published in issues to come, although not necessarily in the order as here set down, are as follows:

Developing New Business

THE 62nd article of Mr. Haring's "New Business for Warehouses" series begins on page 50 of this January issue. These texts, too, will be continued during the year just commenced. Many a timely tip leading to fresh accounts and good profits has been picked up by the storage executive from these articles since publication of the series was begun several years ago. As in his "Distribution" writings, Mr. Haring presents facts gleaned through careful investigation, and many warehousemen look upon these "New Business" articles as constituting one of this magazine's most helpful editorial features.

DISTRIBUTION

Its Economic Relation to Public Warehousing

Herein lies the real reason why ox-cart methods have persisted. The manufacturer or the shipper has not taken time to elaborate his packing as he has his product. The shipping department has been overlooked. Only too often it has been allowed to devise its own methods—without supervision, without help, without expert assistance of any sort. The purchasing department has procured such materials as were requisitioned. But no one in the whole concern has given an hour's real thought to packing. Everyone has just taken for granted that a certain percentage of losses and claims is inevitable.

This is not true. Damage to goods, together with pilferage in transit, can be eliminated; and, by a contradiction that is striking, the cost of packing at the same time be greatly reduced.

Scrutiny Essential

YET aid lies ready at hand. Most of it, moreover, is available without cost.

Mention has been made of the government's laboratory at Madison, Wis. The railroads, too, have established a Freight Container Bureau, with offices in New York City, which cooperates with manufacturers and especially with trade associations in the effort to perfect containers for their commodities. In addition to these sources of aid, the associated container makers—box, carton, gummed labels, wire-bound, steel drums, etc.—have set up many forms of enterprises to point the way to shipping economies. Individual manufacturers, in many instances, offer expert advice through their engineering departments.

Although all this proffered assistance may not be wholly disinterested—probably is not—the fact remains that through one or more of these agencies the shipper may quickly bring into his shipping room the best experience of America. It is sheer foolishness for anyone to let the packing department go on without a scrutinizing study.

Wooden boxes and crates are today something of scientific design. The thickness and weight of the wood are important. These factors become, however, of minor value when the shipper learns the rudiments of nailing—the style, size, manner and spacing—or when he is initiated into the mysteries of edge joints and metal fasteners, or when he learns the unsuspected strength of rotary-cut lumber and plywood. Cleats and reinforcements open up a whole new world of information, not only for strengthening the container for unusual hazards and protecting it against pilferage, but also for producing better packing at less cost—less for materials and less for labor in assembly.

One of the most common experiences from such a test is to learn that crating has been needlessly expensive from (1) the use of an excess quantity of material, and (2) superfluous blocking because the principles of bracing have not been understood. It is nothing unusual so to redesign the crate as to save 50 per cent in amount of material used, to cut the shipping weight of the container by an equal percentage, and to reduce the time needed for assembly and packing by an appreciable amount.

Or the investigation may result in the use of "nailless" packages. A "shipping room without a hammer" is not, today, at all uncommon. Nor does this necessarily mean fibreboard containers. For large shipments and for machinery parts of all sorts it means some form of wire-bound container.

Wire-Bound

THE wire-bound container is a light-weight box which utilizes rotary-cut lumber, sliced lumber, or thinly-sawed lumber, in combination with cleats, wires and staples. Unlike the sides of nailed boxes, the sides of wire-bound containers are always of the same thickness as the top and bottom. Usually the ends also are of the same thickness. All this thin material of the outside has a springiness which absorbs the shocks that would, with a more solid construction, be transmitted to the goods. This springing action enables the wire-bound box to withstand severe handling, while the wires and staples hold the parts together in a manner such that pilfering is difficult.

Such a box is delivered to the shipper in mat form ready to be assembled in about the manner that a fibreboard box is set up. The mat is merely folded into position and the ends stapled to the inner surface of the side and bottom. To close the box the only thing necessary is to twist together the binding wires by means of a special tool.

For the wire-bound box the species of lumber used and its thickness are of secondary importance. For holding the load intact it makes no particular difference whether the material be soft-wood or hardwood, or whether it be ⅛ or ⅜-in. stock, provided that the box itself has been properly designed for whatever material is used and provided that wires or bands of proper size and number are used. For, with this type of container, the wires or bands are expected to perform the work, the lumber being hardly more than a sheathing to protect the contents in other ways. The main point is to have the right number of wires or bands, properly spaced and properly stapled, and of appropriate gauge.

Thickness of the bands is increased as thickness of the lumber is decreased. And, in general, it has been found that thick wood with less strength in the metal serves no better than thinner wood with stronger steel. The excess of wood is merely a waste, the added gauge of steel costing far less for materials and labor than the wood thereby displaced.

Economies

THE wire-bound container is particularly proof against the pilferer. The end members of the wire-bound box are on the inside of the cleated framework. They can not be removed without destroying the sides. The binding steel, either wire or band, is stitched or stapled continuously to the sides, top and bottom. Even ordinary wire, as used for this purpose, is annealed so that it will break if untwisted. It is sure to break if an attempt is made to retwist it. The steel bands, as employed for containers, are locked by devices that cannot be opened. The only easy way, in short, to break into the steel-bound box is to cut the steel. But a broken end, or a cut wire, or any splicing, is the immediate cause of suspicion and will lead to detection.

It is a recognized lesson of transportation that the best sort of insurance against petty thievery is the container which can not be readily opened and easily reclosed without leaving plain evidence of tampering. For this purpose all forms of the wire-bound container are excellent.

The economies of scientific design of the container may be summarized as follows:

1. Loss and damage are reduced.
2. Petty thievery is prevented.
3. Containers themselves cost less.
4. Assembly of the container and packing of the goods are speeded up. Less labor costs follow.
5. Freight bills are lowered because less weight is shipped to carry the same goods.
6. Good-will with customers is increased through:
   a. Goods arrive in better condition.
   b. Loss of goods in transit, failure to arrive, etc., greatly reduced.
   c. Settlements eliminated.
   d. The well designed container has greater value for re-use or re-sale.

That loss and damage are reduced is abundantly shown by the attitude of the railroads. They unhesitatingly approve the scientifically designed container and repeatedly have declared that losses, and claims for loss, drop wherever such containers have been adopted.

Experience

MANUFACTURERS, too, have a like experience. The Williams Oil-O-Matic Corporation adopted a scientific design of container in 1927. With a shipping volume of probably a million dollars a month for oil burners, stoves

DISTRIBUTION

Its Economic Relation to Public Warehousing

and refrigerators, they are able to say at the end of three years:

"All the grief due to failures in shipping containers has been eliminated from our business. Claims have become nil during three years of domestic, and two of foreign, shipping."

From their shipments by express, numbering from 50 to 100 a day, exactly one claim has resulted in three years!

Yet, as compared with their former packing, the new method gives 65 pounds less shipping weight to each of their refrigerators, 40 pounds less for an oil burner, and 50 pounds for a stove. Inasmuch as the freight for their goods is paid by their dealers, the savings in freight tolls benefit the company only indirectly. It totals, however, some $40,000 a year—approximately one dollar on each shipment as an average. The corporation does, on the contrary, profit from the fact that a man in their shipping department can now pack 6 oil burners in an hour, as against 2½ formerly; 8 refrigerators in the time formerly required for 3. The net saving from this payroll economy is more than one dollar per shipment, the savings in freight not being theirs, as stated.

The Bryant Heater & Mfg. Co., whose product is similar in shipping characteristics, reports that it has eliminated 75 tons of "dead shipping weight" a year by a redesign of their containers. They have also cut $7,600 a year from costs, that sum being almost exactly one-half of their former annual cost. In other words, the cost of their shipping department was cut in half within a single year.

This company tells:

"Another natural consequence of making a crate from less material is the saving in bulk. Five times as many of the new boxes can be stored in a given space as was possible before the adoption of this type of container, thus releasing valuable floor space for other purposes. Our packers are able to seal the new crates and boxes in less time than they could drive the nails required to close the old-style containers, and the use of hammer and nails is now practically eliminated. Even our company's 'first aid man' has a favorable word to say, because he reports a lessened number of accidents to workers, formerly occasioned by saws, splinters, loose boards with nails, hammering, etc."

Freight Savings

EVERY extra pound above the necessary weight required adequately to protect the contents must be paid for, not at the low rates for lumber, but, instead, at the higher charge specified for the contents of the package. Somebody pays this excess toll on all packages. No one can afford the luxury of boxing traditions from an ox-cart period in this airplane age.

The accompanying table, "What Extra Pounds in Boxes Cost," presented herewith has been compiled from actual cases. It shows what extra pounds cost for transportation. The savings here indicated "per box," in the last column, if multiplied by the number of boxes to a railroad car, and then by the number of carloads shipped in a year, will often run into thousands of dollars. In many cases the amount that may be saved by a scientific box will exceed the cost of the container.

A manufacturer of electrical equipment, by redesigning his containers, achieved savings by the use of flat steel bands. These bands are drawn about the container under tension and are sealed without nails. Containers of this type hinge almost entirely on the use of a steel band because the boxes could not be made so much lighter and still possess adequate strength if it were not for the great reinforcing power of the steel.

For switch panel boards, weighing net 90 pounds each, this manufacturer shows the following results:

	Old Container	New Container	Savings
Weight of container (lbs.)	51	26	25
Cost of material.	$1.39	$0.76	$0.63

In addition to which savings, the new container is stronger, due to its scientific design to fit the commodity as assembled for shipment. The new container also costs the electrical manufacturer less to assemble and pack. It thus saves more money than shown in this exhibit. The new crate makes a far better appearance.

Other manufacturers have had experiences of like trend. Each is interesting in its details. Three are given.

Scientific design takes into account, also, the possibility of using other varieties of lumber, different type of package, new methods of shipping, unusual materials for interior packing, and improved fastenings and bracings for the box. No possible improvement or economy escapes the laboratory that sets out to redesign a container.

One of the automobile manufacturers, for instance, studied the lumber for crates in export shipment. Inasmuch as the factory must pay freight to the port, usually New York, any reduction in the dead weight of the crate would benefit the maker. Scientific study of the problem brought the contradictory fact to light that by using a species of lumber which weighs less but costs $1.50 a thousand feet more, a great economy would result.

The new lumber, weighing 520 pounds less per 1,000 B.F., cost initially $1.50 more. The total of this slight difference was $15,247 for the first year—this figure indicating the quantity of lumber used for export crating. But, by saving 520 pounds per 1,000 B.F., the manufacturer achieved a saving in freight to the port of New York of $70,480 in a year. This spells a net saving of $55,233 in cash, plus the indefinite gain of now using a lumber which the men found easier to work and wherein the defects were smaller and the general appearance was better.

Another manufacturer, who makes ridge rolls of patent composition for roofing purposes, had been in the habit of buying up second-hand barrels as packing cases. Into each barrel went 40 rolls of the ridge roll, with sawdust to fill up the spaces and also to complete lading of the upper half of the barrel, because to pack it full of rolls made the barrel too heavy to handle.

Under the former method the costs were:

Average cost of barrel	$0.50
Cost of sawdust	.28
Labor of packing	.12
Cost for 40 rolls	$0.90
Average per roll	$0.0225

The new packing placed 30 rolls in an open crate of wood, with corrugated partitions to hold the rolls apart. Its costs are:

Crate and partitions	$0.55
Labor of packing	.08
Cost for 30 rolls	$0.63
Average per roll	$0.021

But, the new method requires far less space to store the material; the new packing is easier to handle on account of being smaller and easier to get hold of; it stacks readily. It weighs 24.6% less. There is no messy sawdust to litter the floor.

A maker of washing machines redesigned a crate, of wood, that had always been made from standard lengths of lumber. The shipping superintendent had designed it through the long method of trial and error and had found one that seemed to carry the electrical machine safely. Yet engineering methods gave quickly a crate which requires 20% less lumber; uses lighter material and therefore weighs 25% less; is far stronger; and does not demand bolts to fasten the contents in place by lagging the machine to the frame. With all these advantages, the new crate costs 40 cents less when completely assembled and packed.

A glass maker who ships plate glass to the automobile makers uses now a returnable box. Formerly this plate glass was shipped 100 pieces to a box at a cost of $5 for material and packing. The freight was $0.53 a box. Therefore the cost per piece of glass was 5.53c. The old boxes were destroyed by the receiver.

The newly designed box is collapsible and returnable. Each box carries 50 pieces of plate glass and each is designed for 12 round trips. The cost for material and packing, labor, and freight both directions, amounts to a total of 2.5c. per piece of glass. Test shipments have proven, however, that the returnable boxes may be used more than 12 trips, and, at the receiving end of the trip, the consignee reports that they can be unloaded in one-third the time and that breakage of glass is reduced. The saving, to the glass manufacturer, is $8,100 a year.

For any manufacturer to make savings such as those indicated is a real achievement. It stands on a par with new economies in production. In production each step of progress is hailed as an advance in management. It gets talked about throughout all the plant, because some one is proud to announce that costs have been whipped another cent. But, inasmuch as packing the goods for shipment is thought of as a part of distribution, and not of production, little attention has been given to it.

The savings, however, make just as big a showing in the year's profit and loss. They are important, especially in this day of rising costs in distribution.

Help to do the same for any product lies ready at hand. The manufacturer who wishes to do it may reduce his costs of packing. If he stubbornly overlooks the opportunity he deliberately holds his concern to ox-cart methods in this airplane age, as ridiculously as though he were to allow an architect to build the factory of stone walls four feet thick instead of skeleton steel.

In a Cigarette It's Taste, but— in Stationery It's Distinction

By HUBERT E. NELSON

LETTERHEADS and other stationery are your major pieces of business equipment and the utmost as to details and construction of their make-up should be watched. From the experiences of a large group of experts, these following facts have been established:

The fewer the items brought into your design, the more effect it will have.

Do not fill the entire top portion of your letterhead with printing.

Give your first consideration to the name of your company; place your full address next, and then your line of business.

Names of the company officials, your telephone number and your slogan are of next importance.

For perfection in the use of proper display, balance, color attractiveness and type expressiveness, it is best to consult your printer or your artist.

Be sure to select a good grade of paper —a plain bond to express a straightforward business character, or a ripple finish to carry the impression of solidity or soundness of the venture.

Look for these things in your letterhead bonds.

Cleanliness, splendid erasing qualities, well known water mark, uniformity of srength with moderate cost.

Envelopes should always match the letterhead, as they create the first impression. They should always match in color as well as in finish. Your return address, in full, printed in the upper left-hand corner on the front, should have the type and the color of ink corresponding to the letterhead.

spice of life may be seen on a bright day from the private office of David L. Tilly of the New York Dock Co.

It is a wide, sun-flooded room with desks and a mahogany table for board meetings, all commanding a priceless view of the port's broad expanse and the East River with its steady stream of boats passing in and out.

How anyone can do any work in such a scene is mystifying until Mr. Tilly explains.

"You see," he tells you, "when I look at the harbor from this window, I don't see what you see at all. I look at that boat puffing along over there and I want to know where it came from, where it is going, what it is loaded with and how much."

Industries Seek Continuation of Federal Trade Practice Rules

Attorneys for Business Groups Argue Against Proposed Revisions—Cold Storage Set-Up Is Involved

By Fred W. Perkins

DISTRIBUTION AND WAREHOUSING'S
1163 National Press Building.

THE trade practice rules adopted by the commercial cold storage industry, in a trade practice conference sponsored by the Federal Trade Commission, are involved in the Commission's present efforts to revise or withdraw its approval from certain portions of the codes set up, under its auspices, in more than a hundred lines of business. The commercial cold storage trade practice conference was held in Washington on Oct. 10, 1929.

Attorneys representing 128 trade associations appeared before the Commission on this past Nov. 25 and argued in favor of retaining the rules, for all industries, as they were adopted and approved, so long as they are not plainly in violation of the anti-trust laws. Otherwise, it was asserted, "business conduct will be put back ten years."

Back of the Federal Trade Commission's "hedging" is another and more powerful arm of the Federal Government—the Department of Justice, which is known to take the stand that some of the rules of trade associations, approved by the Federal Trade Commission, come dangerously close to being formulae for infringement of the anti-trust laws. Obviously there would be embarrassment to the Department of Justice in prosecuting for acts that had received the "go ahead" of another Government agency.

The historic policy of the Government, prior to the creation and development of the Federal Trade Commission, was to refuse advance comment on the legality or illegality of practices which might break the statutes for the regulation of business. The Federal Trade Commission brought in a new way of doing things. While with one hand it exercised certain punitive powers, the other hand was empowered to extend the grasp of fellowship to industries asking for its ministrations. Now, according to the policy that is being followed, the helping hand has been extended too far and too extensively, and is being drawn back so that it will not get in the way of the punitive hand.

FOLLOWING the arguments of the attorneys on Nov. 25, Garland S. Ferguson, Jr., chairman of the Commission, said that most of the proposed changes have been decided upon because a majority of the Commission thought some of the rules which had been approved for the regulation of competition went so far that they would "amount to restraint of trade."

Not all the codes adopted by the 128 industries have been actually revised. Changes really have been made, it is learned, only in the codes adopted in trade practice conferences that were presided over by Mr. Ferguson and by Commissioners William E. Humphrey and Charles H. March. The codes with which Commissioners C. W. Hunt and Edgar A. McCulloch had most to do have not yet been worked over, and the same applies to the codes adopted under the supervision of former members of the Commission.

While the Commission is divided on the wisdom or practicability of withdrawing its past approbations, it is thought to be probable that, if the present policy is followed through, the glass of official scrutiny and the knife of official revision will be applied to all the codes adopted since trade practice conferences began in 1919.

The arguments against the changes took up most of the day on Nov. 25. A tangible result was that Chairman Ferguson promised consideration for the plea by one of the attorneys that, in every case where changes in previously-approved rules are contemplated, the interested industry be given a chance to state its case as to why the rules should stand.

Mr. Ferguson promised consideration in other ways, but repeated and emphasized the statement of Commissioner March that the Commission should not "be so liberal with these rules as to get business into trouble."

Another aspect of the case was brought up by Commissioner Humphrey.

"We do not strike out rules," he declared. "We simply withdraw our approval. That does not prevent the industry from going ahead and operating under its rules, as it wishes."

"Will the Commission then bring a proceeding against us for following such a rule?" asked Sol A. Herzog, of New York, one of the three attorneys representing the Congress of Industries formed by the American Trade Association Executives. This question was not answered definitely.

"Some of these rules," declared Mr. Herzog, "may restrain competition, but they will not restrain trade. The Commission is guilty of inconsistency in some of its rulings, and has no right to substitute a guess or hypothesis, as to an industry's intentions, for Court rulings. These rules, unless they are clearly illegal, should be permitted to stand, in the language of the industry, and should be recognized by the Commission as being expression of fair trade practices."

It will be difficult to get acquiescence to the changes from any industry that does not know the reason for them, asserted William E. Lamb, of Washington, another attorney for the affected industries. He declared that since 1926 industry had been looking to the Commission for guidance as to fair trade practice, and in knowing what are the bounds of law that should not be overstepped.

"It is not necessary to write rules to govern all men," he said. "Rules are necessary only for the few who will not obey. The agreements which resulted in these rules were intended for the protection of the purchaser as well as the seller."

E. Barrett Prettyman, of Washington, also an attorney for the industries, argued that "Government is not restricted to the sole function of apprehending and punishing violators of law. While a policeman may be a familiar representative of the Government to the mass of the people, yet equally familiar is the postman, likewise a representative of the Government, whose function it is to promote and facilitate social intercourse and business enterprise.

"We should approach the consideration of trade practice conferences from the standpoint of the effort of the Government to promote and improve conditions among the people, rather than from the standpoint of the criminal Court room or the specific prohibitions of statutory enactments.

"The Federal Trade Commission was not created as an adjunct to the Department of Justice. It was not limited in the scope of its activities to police duty among the industries of the country.

"Fair methods are essential to the preservation of the competitive system; unfair methods are one of the chief means by which monopoly is created and maintained."

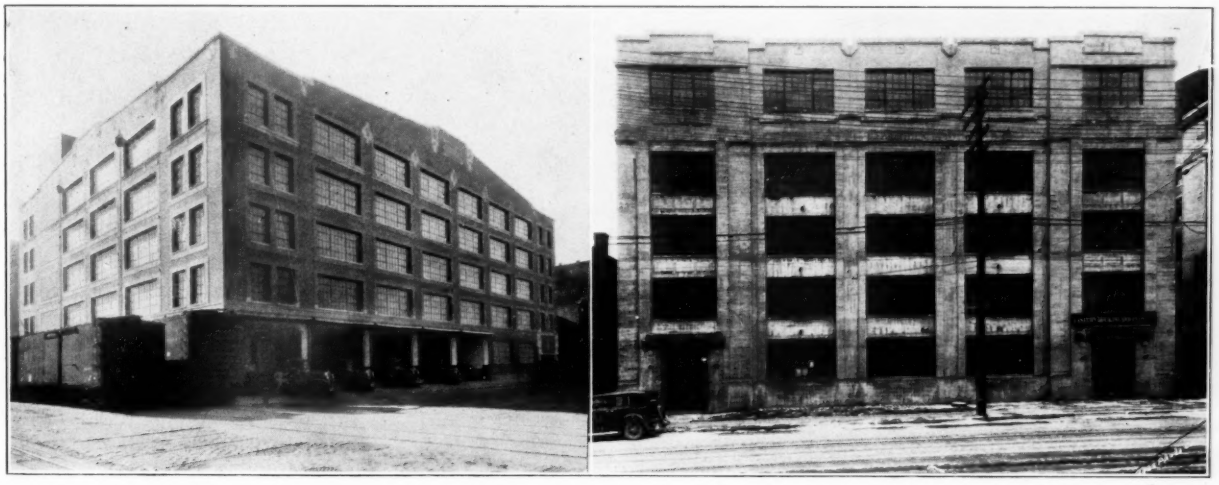
Mr. Prettyman said that he and the other attorneys represented 128 American industries, embracing hundreds of thousands of individual businesses, which desired to be fair and wanted no unfair or deceitful competition. These business men, he continued, wanted the system of trade practice conferences continued because:

"They see what oppressive and deceitful methods have wrought in the destruction of competitive business in other industries and want the Commission to take notice of the possibility and to furnish effective warning to such as may be similarly inclined in their own industries.

"They are surrounded by the uncertainty of the anti-trust laws. Practices which restrain trade are illegal without a penalty but agreements which tend to unreasonable restraint of trade are illegal with a penalty. Caught between the destruction which threatens from unsound practices on the one hand and on the other hand by the destruction which comes from incarceration if their agreements to abandon or avoid these unsound practices fail to fit the views of the Courts, and overwhelmed by the destruction which comes from their own uncertainty in any event, these men turn to the chance of recording in the open, in the Government files, their practices, and seek the good offices of the Commission in that respect.

"In the proposed revisions the Commission has indicated an inclination to relinquish all its activities except the routine chastisement of the scattered unruly members of business, and to make of itself an adjunct to the Department of Justice. The proposed revisions will in practical effect destroy the trade practice conference movement."

Expansion Proceeds on Initiative of Warehouse Executives Unafraid



Crooks addition, Kansas City

Todd warehouse, Indianapolis

HERE are two views which illustrate that times are not bad for all. The executives of the Crooks Storage Warehouses, Chicago, have not considered conditions unpropitious to erect in Kansas City the addition shown at the left, while in Indianapolis an experienced storage executive. Frank A. Todd, has picked out a period of so-called depression to launch his own company, with headquarters in the structure at the right.

The Crooks firm's new plant, described in these columns last month, is a five-story and basement brick and concrete structure, sprinklered, located diagonally opposite the company's building at 1104 Union Avenue. It is served by a fourteen-car switch off the Union Pacific and 'Frisco railroads and is equipped with elevators which are automatically controlled and self-leveling and with largest type automatic scales.

The initial home of the new Todd Fireproof Warehouse Co., of which Mr. Todd is president and manager, is a modern fireproof structure, sprinklered and steam heated, at 209 West South Street, on the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad and in the center of the jobbing, manufacturing and shipping district of the Indiana city. Mr. Todd recently resigned as manager of the Indianapolis Warehouse Co. to start the business which bears his name, and has associated with him A. C. Elwood as vice-president and J. B. Todd as secretary-treasurer.

I. C. C. Would Control Freight Forwarders

Report to Congress Cites "Urgent Need"

BY STEPHENS RIPPEY

DISTRIBUTION AND WAREHOUSING'S
Washington Bureau,
1163 National Press Building.

AN "urgent need" of legislation to subject freight forwarding companies to the regulatory provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act has been found by the Interstate Commerce Commission as a result of an investigation of these concerns undertaken by its Bureau of Inquiry.

The Commission told of this need in its annual report which, covering the past fiscal year, it submitted to Congress on Dec. 4.

It is probable that as a result of the Commission's recommendation a bill will be introduced at this session proposing to carry it out. As this is written no bills appear to be in the offing, although it was indicated that Chairman Parker of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce would introduce a bill after he had had a chance to study the Commission's report.

The Commission's investigation was instigated by Johnston B. Campbell, a former member of the Commission who is now practising law, and who represented a number of small exporters and importers. Mr. Campbell said it was becoming more and more difficult for the small forwarders to remain in business because of alleged unfair practices by the large forwarders, some of which are owned or controlled by the railroads.

The Commission's specific recommendation to Congress was extremely simple, merely placing the freight forwarders under the jurisdiction of the Act. It follows:

"WE recommend, therefore, that the Interstate Commerce Act be amended so as to require that the rates, rules, regulations and practices of forwarding companies which are engaged in interstate commerce shall be just, reasonable, non-discriminatory, and not unduly preferential or prejudicial; to require such forwarding companies to file with us and strictly observe published schedules of their interstate rates and charges; and to provide penalties for departure from such schedules, or for the granting of concessions, rebates, or the like to any shipper by means of any device, and to provide that the administrative machinery of the Interstate Commerce Act shall be applicable for the enforcement of the duties so imposed."

This request for legislation to control the forwarding companies is the first public pronouncement the Commission has made as to the progress or result of the investigation by its Bureau of Inquiry. Inquiries by this Bureau are surrounded by the strictest secrecy and it has not been possible to obtain any information as to the probable attitude of the Commission, nor as to the probable recommendations of the Bureau.

"During the past few years the business of forwarding companies has expanded rapidly, and many new concerns have entered the field," the Commission said in its report to Congress.

"Our investigation has disclosed, also, that several of the more important of these forwarding companies have some, directly or indirectly, under the domination of railroad companies, subject to our jurisdiction. In general, this domination has been brought about through the medium of subsidiary or affiliated holding companies.

"It appears to be a phase of the intense railroad competition now prevailing for traffic between the important centers of population and business. Our investigation has further disclosed that owing to this keen rivalry for traffic the forwarding companies do not adhere to their published rates.

"It is common practice on their part to grant concessions from these rates where necessary to secure the business, and this is done in various ways and through various devices. Even cash payments to industrial traffic managers are not unknown.

"The result is that shippers of less-than-carload freight, more particularly in the larger cities, are today confronted with a situation similar to that which existed in respect to railroad rates prior to the enactment of the Act to regulate commerce, and even thereafter until the amendatory legislation of 1903 and 1906.

"That is to say, there is no stability in the rates of the forwarding companies, and a shipper has no means of knowing definitely what rates his competitors, or even he himself, will have to pay these companies from day to day for the carriage of less-than-carload shipments.

"This situation has become intensified by the fact that to the competition of the forwarding companies with each other there has now been added the competition of the railroad companies under whose domination they are rapidly coming, and by the further fact that the forwarding companies, due to this domination, in many instances are no longer dependent wholly upon their own financial resources.

"It is possible that to some extent the evils of this situation can be reached through the Elkins Act or the provisions of other statutes which we administer; but the indirection with which railroad domination of the forwarding companies has in general been brought about presents obstacles to such action. A more effective way of dealing with the situation is to extend our jurisdiction over the forwarding companies.

"Our investigation has disclosed that the business of the forwarding companies is in such a general state of chaos that many of them, and the rail carriers which dominate them, favor legislation of this character as the best means of stamping out practices which have resulted in serious depletion of revenues and unequal and unjustly discriminatory treatment of shippers."

The possibility of railroads doing a freight forwarding business themselves, by setting up separate departments within their own corporate structures, rather than by organizing holding companies for the purpose, was suggested by several members of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee during hearings held last April on the resolution authorizing the Commission to investigate holding companies.

When asked whether the railroads could act as their own freight forwarders, collecting less-than-carload freight at points of origin and delivering them at store doors at points of destination, Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman declared this would be "well worthy of consideration."

He said he was not sure whether railroads at present could engage in the forwarding business under their charters.

"It may be that a railroad company could engage in the forwarding business itself if it had suitable power for that purpose, and perhaps that is a thing that it ought to do," Mr. Eastman said.

Representative Carl E. Mapes, Michigan, said his thought was that the railroad companies could organize separate departments and solicit L.C.L. freight in the same manner that forwarding companies do.

"Well, there are various possibilities in this situation that I do not claim to have thought through at all," Commissioner Eastman replied. "They involve the relation between railroad transportation and transportation by motor truck, and it is quite possible that there are various improvements that can be made in connection with the operation of the railroads, in connection with motor trucks, that ought to be made and would be in the public interest."

Railroad Charters

Representative Homer Hoch, of Kansas, asked:

"If the railroad companies desire to render this service, is it necessary from a legal standpoint to have a forwarding company created in order to render the service?"

Commissioner Eastman said his answer to this question could be only a guess.

"One reason why I hesitate to answer that question," he continued, "is because the railroad powers granted by the States differ to such an extent. Some railroad charters are very narrow and limited. I should doubt, for example, whether any of the railroads incorporated in Massachsetts would have any such power.

"Their powers there are quite carefully restricted, and I think new corporate authority would be necessary to go into any such business as this. I want to say this, however, that it often is the practice to make the charter of a railroad company apparently quite narrow; that is, confine it to a railroad business, but then the general power is granted to hold the securities of other companies, and the minute you grant that power, unrestricted power, you have practically enlarged the powers of the railroad company indefinitely, because if there is anything that it can not do under its charter powers, a corporation can be organized with that power, and the railroad company can hold its stock."

The next day, however, Mr. Eastman said that on thinking over the situation he had come to the conclusion that there might be some difficulties in the way of railroads operating their own freight forwarding departments.

"Now, on thinking it over," he said, "assuming that the charter powers of the railroad companies would permit them to engage in that business, it seems to me that there would be some difficulty in individual railroads undertaking to embark in that business, because, of course, it involves shipments very often to destinations off of their individual lines.

"However, I think it would be possible for railroads to cooperate in such an undertaking just as they now have in the case of the express business. The express business is now very largely in the hands of the Railway Express Agency, which is controlled by the railroads jointly, and that Railway Express Agency has, I understand, quite broad charter powers. It is quite possible that the Railway Express Agency might be able to undertake this forwarding business for the railroads jointly.

"However, that would inevitably result in a policy, it seems to me, of a monopoly of that business combined with public regulation. The policy in the past has been one of free competition in that business. Any one could engage in it that wanted to, and it was not subject to regulation.

"The complaint that these small forwarders seem to have now is that the control of one of the large forwarding companies directly or indirectly by a railroad is going to interfere with the sway of free competition, and that they are likely to be injured in the conduct of their business as small forwarders. That really is the question that is presented by the control, direct or indirect, exercised by the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. over the National Freight Co.

"There would seem to be, in other words, two possibilities there. One, a policy of monopoly and regulation, and the other a policy of free, open competition, such as has prevailed in the past."

Completed Household Goods Warehouse of Thomas Bros., Brooklyn

THE Thomas Bros. Fireproof Warehouse, one of the oldest established moving and storage companies in Brooklyn, has completed an addition constructed to its depository, doubling the present capacity.

This warehouse, with the addition, will form a fine example of economy and quality in construction. It was designed by George S. Kingsley, architects in warehouse design.

The building is of reinforced concrete, flat slag, with architectural treatment of face brick and ornamental terra cotta, the main entrance being an effective piece of creative design. The structure is provided with individual rooms for furniture and other storage, each room being a fireproof unit with fireproof door.

The Barney-Ahlers Construction Corporation of New York, which has erected numbers of warehouses, built both the original building and the extension.

FROM THE LEGAL VIEWPOINT

By

Advance Inspection May Avert Liability

VARIOUS courts have held that a common carrier sued for the loss of shipped goods is protected by the presumption that, where goods pass through the hands of successive custodians, in apparent good order, any loss is presumed to have occurred while they were under the control of the last custodian. For this reason of the law all warehousemen should exercise great care to carefully inspect goods before receiving them from a common carrier.

For example, in Julius Klugman's Sons v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., 42 F. (2d) 461, a customer sued a common carrier, a truckman and a warehouseman for the value of expensive furs which the plaintiff proved were stolen from the crate either while the shipment was in transit or while it was in the warehouse.

Prior to the discovery of the shortage, the box had been in the custody successively of the Oceanic Steam Navigation Company, as ocean carrier, P. H. Keahon, Inc., as truckman, and West Eighteenth Street Warehouse Corporation, as warehouseman.

The box had been covered stoutly with canvas prior to shipment, and careful scrutiny revealed that the canvas on the bottom had been cut and neatly restitched. The reasonable inference is that the thief extracted the furs by cutting the canvas and removing the bottom boards, later nailing the boards back in place and sewing up the canvas; but there was no evidence to indicate at what stage of the journey the pilfering had taken place.

In holding the warehouseman solely liable, the Court said:

"In my opinion, no case has been established against either the truckman or the carrier, the two defendants which resisted liability. As for the truckman, the box was in its custody for short periods of time only. The manner in which the furs were stolen out of the box would indicate that considerable time must have been spent in the process. The pilfering must have occurred while the box was at rest in a secluded place for a substantial time. . . . As for the carrier, the most that can be said is that the loss might have occurred while the furs were in its custody. It is equally possible that the theft took place later, during the week while the furs were in the warehouse. The damage suffered by the plaintiff is undoubted, but as between carrier and warehouseman there is no indication as to where the loss occurred. The burden of proof is on the plaintiff [customer] to show non-delivery by the carrier. . . . The final custodian who has received the goods in apparent good order, without noting any defect, should not complain if an unexplained loss is attributed to him rather than to prior custodians; in many cases a careful inspection by him at the time the goods were turned over to him would have revealed the defect, if any then existed, and would have saved him from liability."

Liability of a Contractor

GENERALLY speaking, a general contractor will not be held personally liable for the negligence of a sub-contractor unless in the contract with the owner the general contractor agrees to assume all responsibility, or the character of the work is inherently dangerous. So held the higher Court in H. W. Van Slyke Warehouse Co. v. Vilter Mfg. Co., 291 Pac. 1103.

The facts of this case are that a contractor and a warehouseman entered into a contract in which the former agreed to furnish, deliver and erect, in the warehouse building, refrigerating and cold storage equipment consisting of machinery, pipes, connections and the like. The contract contained clauses as follows:

"Erection. A skilled erector to superintend the erection of the machinery and apparatus herein specified will be furnished by contractor.

"Labor for Erection. All other skilled and unskilled labor necessary for the erection will be furnished by the contractor."

While one of the sub-contractor's employees was using an oxyacetylene welding torch and welding the joints in certain pipes the blaze from the torch set fire to the warehouse, burning it down and destroying the goods stored therein.

The warehouseman sued the contractor to recover the total value of the warehouse and the destroyed goods. The counsel for the contractor argued that the latter was not responsible because the damages were caused by a sub-contractor who was completing a sub-contract to install and weld the pipes. However, it is interesting to observe that the higher Court held the general contractor liable for the negligence of the sub-contractor, saying:

"Where the work is inherently or intrinsically dangerous in itself and will necessarily or probably result in injury to third persons, unless measures are adopted by which such consequences may be prevented, and in other like cases, a party will not be permitted to evade responsibility by placing an independent contractor in charge of the work."

Manager's Signature Obligates Employer

IT is good policy always that a manager who signs an agreement include in the body of the contract the name of his employer; otherwise the manager may be held personally liable. Of course if the evidence indicates that the manager intended to sign the contract in his managerial capacity, the employer is obligated.

for example, in Williams v. Carnation Co., 287 Pac. 50, it was disclosed that a company's manager signed a note without including the name of his employer. However, it was understood that the employer and not the manager was to be liable.

Later, the holder of the note attempted to collect the amount from the manager. However, the higher Court held the employer liable on the contract, saying:

"The fact that this contract was 'accepted' by the company's manager without adding after his signature words indicating his representative capacity, does not, when considered together with all the other facts shown by the record, require a holding that the loan was not made to the company."

Powers of President

IT is well settled law that a corporation is bound by contracts made by its employees who act within the scope of the employment and who have proper authority to make such agreements for purchase. While an ordinary employee must have proper authority from an authorized manager, or the directors of the corporation, the president generally is conceded to possess power to bind the warehouse corporation in all business transactions pertaining to the corporation's business.

For illustration, in the leading case of Grummet v. Fresno Co., 181 Cal. 509, a higher Court said:

A corporation can act only through its agents, and the president of a corporation, as the agent and corporate representative, has the power, in the ordinary course of business and in furtherance of the corporate interests, to execute contracts and to bind the company in so doing. He is, by virtue of his office, recognized as the business head of the company, and any contract pertaining to the corporate affairs, within the general powers of such officer, executed by the president on behalf of his corporation, will, in the absence of proof to the contrary, be presumed to have been done by authority of the corporation."

THE delivery of an incomplete bill, note or other instrument, where the document is delivered with blanks left for the insertion of the amount or terms of agreement, or where a signature on a blank paper is delivered with the intention of having a complete instrument written over it, confers presumptive authority on the person to whom it is delivered, and on subsequent holders, to complete the instrument by filling the blanks, or by writing the instrument, as the case may be, in the way apparently contemplated by the signer, with matter in general conformity with the character of the writing. This rule is just as applicable to a non-negotiable instrument as it is to a negotiable instrument. The latest case on this subject is Cassetta v. Baima, 288 Pac. 830.

The facts of this case are that a man named Baima gave to another a signed note containing blank spaces and no date. The latter sold the note to a man named Cassetta, who filled in the amount of $700, the date and rate of interest. Later, Baima refused to pay the note and Cassetta filed suit. Baima attempted to avoid liability on the ground that only the person to whom he had delivered the note could lawfully fill in the blanks. However, it is interesting to observe that the higher court held Baima liable for payment, saying:

"An instrument payable to order can only be transferred by endorsement; such endorsement is necessary in order to carry the qualities and incidents of negotiable paper to the endorsee. As in the case of the transfer of other instruments, the title of the transferor may be conveyed by an assignment in a separate instrument, on the instrument itself, or by mere delivery. In such cases, however, the transferee is vested with such title only as his transferor has, and is not protected against equities which exist against such transferor."

Surrendering Goods in Attachment Suit

THE principle is well established that a warehouseman is liable in conversion for delivering goods upon the claim of a third party, except under valid legal process in a suit in which the owner is himself a party and then only after due notice has been given the owner. For example, a warehouseman is liable if he permits an officer to take possession of goods stored by the wife of a husband who is sued. Moreover, failure of a warehouseman to issue a warehouse receipt is deemed negligence on his part.

In Branch v. Bekins Van & Storage Co., 290 Pac. 146, a woman named Mrs. C. U. Branch ordered a warehouseman to remove her household goods from her home and place them in the warehouse for storage. When the goods were removed, the driver of the van obtained a slip or permit indicating the identity of the contracting owner, "Name, Mrs. C. U. Branch." This permit also contained the following notice: "Mail receipt to Curtis Hotel, Mpls., Minn."

Having received no warehouse receipt for the storing of goods, Mrs. C. U. Branch sent the following letter to the warehouseman:

"On March 31st or April 1st, we stored our household goods at your warehouse. We gave you an address to forward storage receipt, but to date we have not [received the receipt] from your company. Will you kindly forward storage receipt at once? Please forward to 238 Plymouth Bldg., Minneapolis. Yours very truly, [Signed] Mrs. C. U. Branch."

The warehouseman, in reply to the foregoing inquiry, sent a letter addressed to her at the Plymouth Building, Minneapolis, informing her that the goods had been attached and sold at public auction for $140. This was her first information regarding the attachment or sale. Upon receipt of the letter Mr. Branch promptly wired the warehouseman, on June 18, as follows:

"What amount required release furniture? Will wire funds. Wire. [Signed] Charles U. Branch."

The warehouseman replied by wire the same day:

"Everything sold public auction probably month ago."

Mrs. Branch sued the warehouseman for the value of the furniture. The warehouseman proved that soon after he had accepted the goods for storage an officer of the law came to the warehouse with an attachment notice in the name of C. U. Branch for a debt owed by this party. The warehouseman sent notice of the attachment to C. U. Branch in care of the Curtis Hotel, Minneapolis, but it was returned. However, as the goods belonged to Mrs. C. U. Branch and were stored in her name, the Court held the warehouseman liable, saying:

"The appellant [warehouseman] was negligent in failing to exercise diligence in notifying the owner of the goods concerning the attachment. This renders the storage company liable. . . . The plaintiff was entitled to a warehouse receipt for the storage of her household goods. Apparently the appellant [warehouseman] neglected to issue or deliver this receipt. Had this receipt been delivered, the property in the custody of the warehouseman would have been exempt from attachment. . . . Since the plaintiff in the present case, who is both the bailor and owner of the household goods, was not a party to the action in which the attachment was issued, the surrender of the property by the appellant [warehouseman] will furnish no defense to the action for conversion."

Negligence— What Is It?

VARIOUS courts have held that a warehouseman is liable in damages where stored goods are damaged or lost as a result of negligence on the part of the warehouseman or his employees. Legally, the term "negligence" is defined as any carelessness which would not have been used by the average prudent warehouseman.

For instance, in Traders' Warehouse Co. v. Barganier, 31 S. W. (2d) 321, it was disclosed that a warehouse burned and destroyed certain goods stored therein. The owner of the destroyed merchandise sued the warehouseman for its value and proved that the warehouse was not equipped with water hose of sufficient length to reach the place where the fire originated and that the warehouseman did not use ordinary care in supplying the warehouse with water hose of sound and perfect material. The higher Court held the owner of the goods entitled to recover damages, saying:

"A warehouseman shall be liable for any loss or injury to the goods caused by his failure to exercise such care in regard to them as a reasonably careful owner of similar goods would exercise."

Power of Attorney

GENERALLY speaking, a warehouseman is justified in delivering stored goods to one who is the person lawfully entitled to the possession of the goods, or his agent; or to a person who is either himself entitled to delivery by the terms of a non-negotiable receipt issued for the goods, or who has written authority from the person so entitled either endorsed upon the receipt or written upon another paper. So held the higher Court in Wood v. Crocker First Nat. Bank, 291 Pac. 221.

In this case a woman gave her son a general power of attorney to transact business for her. Soon afterward the son took possession of goods stored by his mother and disposed of them without her knowledge. At the time the son took possession, the bailee was not informed that the mother had granted the power of attorney. The mother sued the bailee to recover the value of the goods. In holding the bailee not liable the Court said:

"It appears from testimony that Baldwin Wood [son] signed checks against his mother's account as her attorney in fact; that he borrowed money in her name, signing notes therefor, as such attorney; that this was all done by authority of a general power of attorney which he held and which he exhibited to the bank. . . . It is obvious that Mrs. Wood was a person lawfully entitled to the goods. It is obvious that Baldwin Wood was her agent."

Consignee's Right to Recover Excess

IT is settled that if goods are shipped f.o.b. the consignee ordinarily is entitled to recover from the transportation company any excess freight charges. Moreover, if the goods are shipped f.o.b. the consignee's location, and the latter pays the excess freight charges, he is entitled to recover from the carrier notwithstanding the fact that the consignor previously remits this amount to the consignee.

For example, in Consolidated v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 39 F. (2d) 661, it was disclosed that a consignor shipped merchandise f.o.b. his plant. The consignee paid to the railway company excess freight charges on the shipment and sent these bills to the consignor, which allowed the former credit on his account for the amount of the total freight charges. Later the consignee sued to recover $21,818 from the railway company.

Counsel for the railway company contended that the consignee was not legally entitled to recover the excess charges, as the latter had been credited with this amount by the consignor. Notwithstanding this contention, the higher Court held the consignee entitled to recover the excess charges, saying:

"The contention of the defendant [railway company] is bottomed upon the fact that, while the plaintiff [consignee] paid the freight charges to the delivering carriers, it remitted the freight bills to the consignor of the shipment, and received credit for the full amount of the freight charges. It is then insisted that, while the plaintiff [consignee] did physically pay the charges in the first instance to the carriers, it did not ultimately bear the freight charges, and consequently was and could not have been damaged. . . . It is clear the consignor makes no claim against the defendant [railway company]. The consignee paid the rate found to be unreasonable. It was unlawfully required to pay such rate, and undoubtedly it suffered loss."

"Secret Lien" in Tennessee

LEGAL EDITOR, Distribution and Warehousing: You are, no doubt, familiar with the laws in Tennessee covering the "Conditional Sales Contract." This gives the vendor a secret lien on the property, covered in the sales agreement, which lien has been held superior to a warehouseman's lien for his services and storage charges.

We frequently have lots of furniture replevied by installment houses, and they refuse to pay our charges, on the ground of their prior lien, which action is upheld by numerous decisions of Courts of this and other States. In an effort to eliminate this hazard, which is proving costly to warehousemen, we have had our attorney prepare a form letter which we plan to mail to every installment furniture house in the city, when we receive a lot of goods which we think might be subject to replevin at some later date. This letter gives the installment houses notification that we intend to accept the goods for storage.

We would appreciate your consideration of our problem, and would like to have your opinion as to whether the mailing of such a letter to the furniture stores would place us in position successfully to demand payment of our charges, in cases where goods were replevied under terms of the "Conditional Sales Contract."—Arrow Transfer & Storage Co.

Answer: If the seller holds a conditional contract of sale or mortgage which was properly recorded before you accepted the goods for storage, under the Tennessee laws, he can recover possession of the goods providing he did not give his consent to your storing them. In some instances mere consent of a holder of a mortgage is sufficient to justify a Court in requiring the holder of a mortgage or lien to pay storage charges before recovering possession of the goods.

The holder of the mortgage notified the warehouseman that he intended to foreclose both of the mortgages. This Court held the warehouseman entitled to full payment of the charges on the property on which the mortgage was not recorded, and payment for storage from the date the notice was received on the other goods of which the mortgage was recorded.

Under these circumstances it is my opinion that a letter such as you intend to send to installment furniture houses should be sufficient to put them on their guard so that you may collect storage charges from them before delivering any goods on which they have liens.

Sometime soon I expect to write an article for Distribution and Warehousing discussing all phases of late higher Court cases involving warehousemen's liens.

Selling Goods for Charges

LEGAL EDITOR, Distribution and Warehousing: We had a contract to deliver a load of household goods to a woman for $150 at a certain dwelling house address. When the truck arrived they found the windows broken out and otherwise in an unfit condition to put furniture into and the shipper nor any representative was there to receive the goods, pay charges or give other instructions for disposition of the goods.

After waiting several hours the goods were placed into a warehouse in our name with expectation of adding the delay charge, according to contract, the warehouseman's charge and handling, to the contract transportation charge. The shipper later arrived, and writes that when the goods are delivered at address given the amount of $150 will be paid with no extra.

We want to know what procedure is necessary to permit sale of goods for the satisfaction of the charges in case shipper insists on refusing to pay the same. —Swormstedt Transfer Line.

Answer: Whether or not you are entitled to an additional fee over and above $150 depends upon the agreement signed by the owner of the goods. It seems that, if he signed the long-distance moving contract, the paragraph 3 of the General Conditions should make him liable for full amount of the additional charges therein specified. If would be impractical for you to attempt to sell these goods without securing the services of an experienced lawyer in Indiana, as no general attorney can correctly inform you regarding the laws of all States, and the technicalities associated therewith on this subject. The law must be followed strictly, otherwise you would be liable for conversion. However, from experience it is my opinion that you are entitled, under the circumstances, to sue the owner and recover the full amount of the contract.

Sale of Property Allegedly Stolen

LEGAL EDITOR, Distribution and Warehousing: We have a case where a lot of boxes was stored by a party who was later followed to our place by detectives who believed the contents of the boxes to be stolen property.

We refused them inspection of the contents of the said boxes because they did not have a Court order.

Storage charges for more than a year have now accrued and we would like to know if we can sell the contents of the boxes if it is stolen property.—Guaranty Storage Co.

Answer: There is no question but that the owner of stolen property can recover it, without payment of any charges, from any person who possesses such property. Various Courts have gone so far as to hold that the owner of stolen property may recover it, with all improvements which have been made, without payment of any charges. The evidence that you refused to permit the detectives to inspect the merchandise may be used as proof that you had ample warning that the merchandise was stolen. However, this proof is not necessary in order that the owner may recover the merchandise. Of course, if you sell the goods and the purchaser is required to give up possession to the owner, such purchaser can in turn recover from you the amount paid for the merchandise.

Lien Right on the House-to-House Job

LEGAL EDITOR, Distribution and Warehousing: Our law gives us a lien on furniture that has been in storage until such time as all charges, including delivery charges, have been paid. I cannot find that a moving company has any lien on furniture moved from house to house within the city. This places us in a peculiar position of not being able to demand our money while the goods are in our possession. If the customer refuses then to pay, it would seem that we would have to take it through the Court in order to collect.

If this is the case, does this mean that there is no legality in insisting on a C. O. D. moving job? I wonder if you would let me have, from your Legal Department, some information on their experiences?—The Toronto Cartage and Warehousemen's Association.

Answer:: To begin with, many higher Courts have held that, unless a specific agreement is made, a person who orders work performed impliedly consents to pay cash. Therefore, any person who performs services with respect to a particular article, or a lot of merchandise, may retain possession of such goods if the owner refuses to pay for such services when the goods are ready for delivery.

Of course if you give up possession of the goods you automatically lose your rights to a lien, and the fact that you again have opportunity to take possession of the goods does not renew the lien. In other words, when once the goods have left your possession the common law lien is terminated.

By common law you have a lien on goods which you deliver and for which your customer refuses to pay.

Leakage in a Brine System

LEGAL EDITOR, Distribution and Warehousing: What is our legal liability to operating a cold storage warehouse in the damage to any merchandise that may be caused by accidental leakage in the brine system, or breakage in the direct expansion, permitting the escape of ammonia, which might seriously affect such commodities as butter and eggs, the damage not being due to negligence but by accident to any of the refrigerating equipment?—Central Warehouse Company.

Answer: Regarding your liability for injury to commodities, such as butter and eggs, stored in a cold storage warehouse and resulting from leakage of the brine system, or escape of ammonia, the law is well settled that a warehouseman is merely required to exercise ordinary care to prevent injury to stored merchandise.

In other words, you are required by the law to make reasonably frequent inspection of your equipment, and these inspections must be made by competent inspectors, so that any defect would be readily discovered and repaired. However, if the defect is inherent or of internal nature that would not be discoverable by the application of ordinary care and inspections on your part, you would not be liable. Of course, if you issue receipts in which you guarantee that the stored goods will not be damaged you would be held liable, but I presume that you do not issue receipts of this character.

Skyscraper Mart in St. Louis to Have Terminal Warehouse Facilities

THE St. Louis Mart and Terminal Warehouse Building, to be erected by the St. Louis Mart, Inc., at Twelfth Boulevard and Spruce Street at a cost of $5,000,000, will have a gross floor area of approximately a million square feet of floor space on its nineteen stories, and its warehouse section will have a capacity of 112,500,000 pounds of merchandise at one time. The structure will be a monumental one of architectural design, and is illustrated herewith.

The $5,000,000 Mart and Terminal Warehouse Building to be erected in St. Louis

The warehouse section, of flat slab reinforced concrete construction, will have all walls and ceilings finished in white enamel. Ten freight elevators, with 9 by 17-foot platform, will have a safety capacity of 10,000 pounds each, and one 10 by 25 feet a safe capacity of 18,000 pounds. The elevators will be distributed to assure maximum efficiency in handling freight in and out.

Loading platforms along Thirteenth Street and return on Twelfth Street will accommodate fifty trucks at a time. Three railroad tracks on the Poplar Street side will provide space for twenty-five cars at one spotting, or about 100 cars in and 100 cars out in one day.

There will be a complete sprinkler system, fire alarms, etc., requiring two 40,000-gallon tanks weighing some 750,000 pounds when filled. These tanks are located on the nineteenth story.

Distributing Corporation

The Manufacturers' Distributing Corporation, now entering upon its business career in Kansas City, recently bought a block of ground in the southwest industrial district. A one-story brick building of 12,000 square feet of floor space was included in the purchase.

The new concern will represent manufacturers in warehousing and selling their products.

Conveyorizing the Warehouse

By Carleton Cleveland

THE conveyorizing of the public warehouse brings one up flush against a serious problem, primarily because of the floor space needed to accommodate the conveyor equipment. To be sure, each and every installation presents problems, and it is well known that "the conveyor must be designed to fit the purpose and take into consideration the particular kind of work it is called upon to do."

One way to eliminate the monopolization of floor space by conveyor equipment has been found in the use of the overhead tramrail and the apron type floor conveyor. Both of these equipments have found favor in Chicago warehouses—the former in the warehouse of the Consumers' Sanitary Coffee and Butter Stores; and the latter at the Western Union warehouse, where it is used for handling equipment and supplies used by the Western Union Telegraph Co.

This apron conveyor consists of a double strand of steel roller chain connected by steel slats moving—flush with the floor—at a speed of from thirty to fifty feet a minute, and is used for carrying boxes and materials to a spiral chute which discharges them into the shipping room on the floor below. So strong is this conveyor that material weighing up to 5000 pounds is trucked across it while the conveyor is in motion. This feature alone is of considerable import, as on a warehouse floor such a conveyor might have to cross a main trucking aisle or runway, or may have to be run along a shipping platform.

Another conveyor equipment which has proved a great time and labor saver at the Western Union warehouse is the pusher-bar elevator. With a gravity roller extension reaching, as shown in the accompanying illustration, through an opening in the warehouse wall, across the freight platform, and into a freight car, incoming stock may be unloaded and conveyed to an upper floor with a maximum of speed and a minimum of handling. In fact, a carload of cartons containing printed matter, toilet rolls, or similar supplies is unloaded in about twenty-two minutes. Materials shipped in bags and bales can also be handled on the pusher-bar elevator.

The operation of the overhead tramrail system not only does away with the annoying traffic of trucks on the floor space, but also eliminates much of the labor of tugging and lugging of trucks —a burdensome feature in warehousing. Trucking drains the stored-up energy of the worker; but worst of all, it is a slow process and limits the number of items which can be handled per day per man.

The tramrail equipment found so helpful at the warehouse of the Consumers' Sanitary Stores is electrically operated, having a speed of from 200 to 300 feet a minute. Push trucks are wheeled into an opening at one end of a framework which comprises a tramcar, where they are securely locked. These tramcars are designed in "twins or triplets"; that is, they are arranged so that either two or three trucks may be carried. The accompanying illustration shows a three-tram-car equipment.

From the starting point on the floor, where the trucks are loaded or unloaded from the tramcar frame, the tram rail inclines slightly—sufficiently to lift the moving truck so that the wheels, or rollers, are free from the floor. As the electrically-propelled car moves along the aisles or runways, a man may walk beside it and load the truck, or hop aboard and ride if the distance to the next pick-up is reasonably great. As the car nears the unloading station, the tram rail declines so as to allow the wheels of the trucks to touch the floor. The truck may then be wheeled to its destination—shipping room, loading platform. or even into a waiting truck or freight car.

Not only does the use of such equipment speed up the work, but it also cuts down the pay roll. In the case of the Consumers' Sanitary Stores warehouse, eight men do with the tramrail equipment what it formerly took twenty-four men to do without it.

A Social Note of Minor Importance

WELL, Jan. 4 ushers us the 2nd anniversary of our getting wedded to a crimson-tressed Canadian lady. Thus far, we report, we have weathered the vicissitudes, at the same time absorbing considerable knowledge, & we enter upon the 3d yr minus undue trepidation. Ye Ed.'s personal immediate slogan is:

"1931 American Forward Lurch."

Conventioners Will Be Asked

ON the eve of the storagers' convention at San Antonio & Atlantic City we submit for the consider'n of persons interested the recent statement attributed to Fred Bell, director of exhibits of the Am'n R'way Assoc'n, to the effect that—

Hotel "room entertainment," a by-product of prohibition, seriously hampers the success of conventions; that, since prohibition, delegates have found more pleasure in going to their rooms & "there engaging in social activities not listed on the convention programs."

A type-setter with a sense of humor would have set it up "buy-products," is Ye Ed.'s serious thought.

& if such entertainment has hampered any conventions we have attended during the past 11 yrs the delegate-participants forgot to mention it out loud.

We will ask some of them at San Antonio & Atlantic City about being hampered.

Ye Ed. Offers a Sporting Bet

A 2-cylinder van has been added to the equipment of the U. S. Storage Co., Wash'ton, D. C. Van Wicked Mott, sec. of the co., is the progenitor.

We recall a letter which Van wrote us when he got wedded. Van had no objection to our mentioning that he had got wedded but he warned us that we should not publish anything such as that soon there would be a lot of little vans rolling around. Well, we took Van seriously & did not publish anything like that, & now what happens? Now what happens is that Van already begun to double-cross us.

The last time Ye Ed. was to Wash'ton we was to Van's home for dinner, which was elegant on a/c it was cooked by Van's better ½, & afterward it was Ye Ed. who washed the dishes, on a/c that Van does not know how. What Van will do, on a/c that he does not have dish-washing guests to dinner all the time, will probably be to teach his boy to wash dishes at the age of about 6 mos. If anybody, Van inclusive, wants to wager vs. that, we will bet with him on it.

$5 Are Contribbed Toward New Bridge

THEREFORE we will get down to serious writing & tell you about a storager who owes Two Bits some money for advertising. We will not say how much it is, but he sent us a $5 check on a/c, & we will quote to you from his businesslike communic'n:

"I cannot pay more at present as money is scarce right now. My own living expenses are terrible and I can hardly get along. I will try to send you another $5 when I sell a motor truck in January. I cannot pay you more at that time as my daughter will be leaving for New York to take a post graduate course in Art, and that costs a heap of money.

"I thought I could send you a check when I collected money on a long distance moving job to California, but it will take all I can rake and scrape to install a moth vault, which we badly need. Then, too, we had to build an addition to the garage for the new Studebaker and build a concrete bridge over the creek in front of our house, as well as a new road, so we could get in and out better without having to back up and turn.

"We got a long distance job to Florida, too, but I can't send any of that money because my son is going to college. Although the lads of today are very economical about hats and garters, still a coonskin coat costs the old man a lot, and even junk-yard Fords come right high by the time they are decorated for college use.

"I might send you the money collected on storage accounts, but the Missus and I have planned a trip to the State fair next month, and after working hard all these years I think she deserves the trip. We can't go until the last week, though, as she is having our house redecorated and refurnished, taking out all red plush and putting in over-stuffed cane and mahogany. This is a terrible strain on my finances.

"Then, too I had to have a new well closer to the house, and the new barn has to be paid for, our home being on a farm. All the farmers around here are in hard shape financially, with fresh turnips 10c a bunch and strawberries 75c a quart, and with the price of gasoline so high it is just hard to get by.

"Another thing which has hurt us considerable is the epidemic among the married women to have their plain gold wedding rings platinized and set with diamonds, and everybody is having their tonsils and teeth removed and there is a right smart touch of stomach trouble, too.

"Please be patient with me and I'll do the best I can. I aim to pay you as soon as I can spare the money, so don't worry a bit."

Ye Ed. & ancestors was all born in New England & the family conscience is strong so we sent back the $5 to help pay for the bridge over the creek.

"Two Bits" Finds a Storager - Poet

WE will conclude this Two Bits with an original poem which, yclept "The Song of Irish," was manufactured by Frank E. Holmes, the Jamaica, N. Y., storagers:

Oh, who may know the heart of us
Unless you be a part of us?
There'll be no reason for the misty gleamin' of our eye.
And you may never hear with us
The steps of those once dear to us
Who walk across our dreamin'
from their mansions in the sky.

You'll never like the way of us
Unless you come and stray with us
Across the fels where faeries dance the tunes we know so well.
When moonbeams on the eyes of us
Nor all the laughin' lies of us
Can bring us back the glories of the stories that we tell.

And maybe it's the child in us,
A pagan something wild in us,
That sets our eyes to seekin' silver cities in the sun
When old age mem'ries waken us,
A croonin', grievin' ache in us
For something we'd forgotten—something that we should have done.

But let the war drums beat for us,
And who can stop the feet of us?—
The saga of the Irish,
long ago and evermore.
A thousand hills run red of us,
The reckless, valiant dead of us
Who gather in the sunset when the Irish go to war.

The grubbin' world takes toll of us
But cannot cage the soul of us,
Who's singin' shall go ringin' down dim ages yet unborn.
And may the burnin' sins of us
Be lost behind the brins of us
When we salute our Maker on the shinin' Judgment Morn.

New Business for Warehouses

Storing Automobiles for Local Dealers

AS winter settled over the country, approximately the first of November, efforts to stem the tide of unemployment became general. The steps taken in each community are well known.

Of industries none did its share more promptly than the manufacturers of automobiles. It was to these men apparent that sales for 1931 would hang on general prosperity, and, if by giving employment to more men, they could hurry up the business lag, the benefit would be greater to themselves than to anyone else.

Therefore, the news was filled with plants taking on two thousand additional men, three thousand, even more in one instance—all this being done three months earlier than usually occurs in this industry. For, as a rule, after August the payrolls drop and continue low until January, when production begins for the new models.

This winter, however, the factories are starting up for the sake of giving work to men who need it. To describe how the automobile makers are scheduling their work is beyond the purpose of this publication, for, with the new models still incomplete, it has taken rare skill and much courage to start production. Only such parts can be made up as are known for a certainty to be included in the new models. The plants, therefore, will not begin to turn out completed cars in a steady stream, to be shipped off each evening, as has been their custom. They will accumulate partially built cars.

Detroit, as a result, is being stored full of partly assembled cars. As quickly as models are determined upon, these will receive the missing assembly and will then go out to dealers in numbers hitherto unheard of. This January will see more cars finished than any previous January, and the same will be true in the four months that follow.

To store these cars in Detroit is out of the question. That city has not the capacity. The factories themselves have quit storing cars. Now they lack space and of course they will not build warehouses for a single year's use. Their policy, moreover, is to move cars away from the plant as fast as assembled. There is only one place to ship them.

That is to the jobber and dealer.

THOSE makers with developed foreign business plan to consign as large quotas as possible to foreign parts, chiefly to their own assembly plants abroad. This is possible for the reason that foreign demand is not quite as keen as the domestic market for latest models. America can tell at a glance a 1930 from a 1931 car. The older model can be sold only at a recession in the price. But abroad, conditions are easier for last year's car. Therefore, just so far as they can, the makers will ship to their export connections the cars manufactured during the early winter months.

Removing this burden of overstocks from America will help. It cannot, however, wholly solve the problem. The output of our factories is greater than the foreign market will absorb.

Anyone can see what will happen. Cars will be forced on dealers ahead of normal schedules for delivery. Instead of their 1931 quotas trickling to them late in February, after the shows, and hardly getting heavy before the end of March, dealers this winter will be stuffed with new cars in January. February and March will see the dealers in desperate shape for space.

What arrangement the manufacturers will make to carry their dealers is not known. So far as we can learn, only two makers have announced a policy, neither of them being General Motors or Ford, whose number of cars is of course the real burden on the market.

One thing is certain. The dealer will be held to payment of cash upon delivery of new cars. Somehow he must dig up the money. That means that he will borrow, hypothecating the cars themselves for a loan.

A Change in Method

THIS condition will be a drastic switch to methods abandoned in 1924 and 1925. Those years marked the beginning of real help from the maker to the dealer. General Motors, especially for Chevrolet and Buick, and Ford and Studebaker have more and more aided their dealers by delivering cars evenly through the selling year. For approximately ten months these companies have carefully used quotas in order that each dealer would always have cars to sell but would never be overstocked. Prior to 1924 their habit had been to shove cars as fast as they could compel the dealer to unload them, sometimes even shipping ahead of order, or even without orders, and then obliging the dealer to accept and pay for the cars. If he refused, he would lose his franchise as a dealer.

Of recent years this policy has disappeared. The makers have found it pays to let the dealer make money; and, as one means to this end, they have not overstocked his place.

The manufacturers' own desperation this winter will alter this policy. They are undertaking a program of output ahead of their own best judgment, chiefly in the hope of relieving unemployment. Much of the brunt of this plan will be theirs to bear, but it is already apparent that the dealer and jobber of cars will not escape a share. These outlets will be obliged to accept deliveries far above quotas and much ahead of schedule.

Were it the custom to give datings in the automobile industry, the situation would be simple. In that case the dealer would merely be allowed "an additional 60 days" and the manufacturer carry the account that much longer. With the requirement, however, of paying spot cash before breaking into the freight car, the dealer's position is not comfortable. He always has borrowed to meet these payments. This year he will have to borrow for three months' longer time and he will have insurance to pay for a similar period.

Dealers Lack Space

DEALERS, with very few exceptions, cannot store these cars.

For some years they have reduced their storage space in conformity with the quota system. The factories shipped cars only about as fast as they could be sold. The dealer's aim was to have on hand about the number of new cars he could expect to sell in thirty days. By thus controlling his stock he kept down the inventory; and, to accomplish this, the factories have established elaborate systems of inspection and control, under which they have advised the dealer how to control his stock.

In this way the dealer has been taught to limit his space for storage. Now, with larger stocks staring him in the face, he will be staggered. This does not refer to jobbers and distributing branches or to manufacturers' own stock. We are speaking only of dealers.

Heretofore when a dealer has been pushed he has hired empty barns or anything he could find that would give protection to a car. Beginning with 1929 the finance companies began to object to this form of storage, on the ground that it was overly hazardous. They have insisted on full protection for the stock; or, as an alternative, have levied higher charges for insurance and for the moral risk of theft.

The year 1930 saw a further tightening of these restrictions. Old barns are now taboo. Dealers, accordingly, during the past two years quite generally enlarged their places of business sufficiently to accommodate about one months' supply of new cars. The result may be seen almost anywhere, merely by examining the dealer's premises.

Further expansion, for this winter's sudden influx of more cars, is hardly justified. The condition will probably last only a single season. Moreover, dealers everywhere have larger stocks than usual of trade-ins, as the outcome of conditions in 1930. They require all the space they have to exhibit and store these second-hand cars.

Up and down the country, therefore, dealers will be short of space, more in small cities and towns than in the large centers.

Financing

THE finance companies which handle instalment paper for the customer also deal in loans to the dealer. They advance him 85-90 per cent of the wholesale price of the car, on a loan that matures when the car is sold. But these loans have a limit of sixty days, sometimes ninety. The idea is that a dealer ought to dispose of the car within that period. Quite possibly some method of renewal or extension will be worked out for the present winter so that this difficulty will disappear.

Every manufacturer has allied himself with one of these finance companies for the benefit of dealers. The financing is quickly arranged, simple to install and the loans high in ratio to wholesale price of the car. But—and there usually is a "but"—before benefiting from such an arrangement the dealer must comply with a lot of formalities which amount to pledging his soul to the finance company. The cost, moreover, is high. The rate of interest is high, the insurance against damage and theft is costly, and the incidental expenses eat into profits.

Dealers have clung to this method of borrowing money merely because it is simple to carry out. They have paid the cost with grumbles.

One reason why the method is simple is that the dealer has been allowed full possession of the car. His position is much like that of the individual who buys a car on time—he has possession; no one knows whether he owns it or not. The fact that title remains in some other concern is not obvious. This very fact of the dealer having possession of the stock increases the hazards, especially the moral ones, and accounts for the high cost of insurance. And, now that the ordinary sixty or ninety days must be extended another three or four months, the cost of insurance will mount even higher. The risk will be much greater.

For, unknown to the public, bootlegging in new automobiles is an organized business from which the makers suffer large losses. A man sets up as a dealer, more commonly as a sub-dealer, and signs a franchise for 100 cars a year. He stocks up heavily, to the joy of the factory's district manager, paying for all the cars by borrowings from the manufacturer's own finance company. Then the bootlegger quietly sells cars at cut prices, or on any terms he can make, just so that he disposes of his whole stock quickly—say within two months. Then, before the finance company realizes that he has sold cars for which his title is not clear, he disappears.

Closely akin to this fellow whose plan is rotten from the beginning is the dealer who merely does not make a profit. Automobile dealers are largely either garages or men who have graduated from garages. Either class is lacking in astute business methods more times than not. They fail to earn profits. Then come desperate measures to pay out—and, first to be tried, is to "sell the goods to some insurance company." Hence the automobile dealer presents special risks to the finance company. This is one reason for strictly limiting the length of a loan to them.

Bank Loans

THE finance company deals with the retailer from a distance. It is not practicable, as a rule, to warehouse new cars for small dealers and have the notes and collateral a thousand miles away in some city office which closes Saturday at noon and takes all the holidays. The finance companies, generally speaking, are compelled to allow the dealer full possession of the car, protecting themselves principally by an iron-clad contract which pledges the dealer's soul. But, the scoundrel seldom seems to have a soul and is not deterred by a terrible-looking contract. He trusts to being able to "outsmart" the finance and insurance companies!

The reputable local dealer pays for all these losses. They form part of his high costs for interest and insurance.

If the local dealer only knew how to do it he could borrow for less cost from his local bank. He does not know. He therefore continues to get loans by the simpler route to the finance company, even with its high cost. And the reason he does not know the better way is that neither his banker nor his warehouseman has told him the story.

For this reason he becomes a source of new business to the warehouse—just as available in a tiny city that has a warehouse as in New York City or Los Angeles.

New cars in the warehouse are instantly available for sale. They may even be shown to prospective customers, but not demonstrated. They are kept clean; they are safe from theft; they may be insured at low rates. If anything happens to them, the bank looks to the warehouseman in addition to the pledge of the borrower.

From any viewpoint the banker cares to take, he gets one added element of protection. Most of all he knows that the dealer cannot slip anything over on the bank; there is no possibility of bootlegging or skipping the town. No car is released from the warehouse until the bank orders it out, and the bank can arrange for payment of the loan in advance of issuing the release.

There is no need of filing a mortgage or chattel with the clerk of court, as the finance company must do for full protection. The dealer does not have possession of the car. The bank controls title so long as the car reposes in the warehouse. The shipment from factory may even be "care of the warehouse," so that the dealer never has title for a day. The bank absolutely controls the property, shielded from chattel; and proof, also, against attachment. Even if the dealer goes into bankruptcy, the bank's loan is safe. A new car will always sell for more than the wholesale price. No price cut ever wiped out the whole margin of the dealer's discount, which runs from 18 to 25 per cent.

Any local dealer who once understands how to finance his new cars through a warehouse will never return to the finance companies—at least so long as he is doing business honestly! No local banker who once sees how to do the financing will allow local dealers to pay interest out of town.

The banker makes good interest; the dealer saves. Both avoid inconvenience and embarrassing delays.

Enter, Opportunity

AUTOMOBILE storage for jobbers and factory branches has not always been profitable for the warehouses.

Storage for local dealers is quite the other way.

For one thing, local dealers are not in position to barter for rates as the factories do. They pay full rates both for storage and for handling. Their storage is more dependable—not two entire floors in February and nothing by the end of March. They tend to hold an average space month after month.

There has always been good reason

Distinction Between Liability of Owners and Hirers of Trucks

Thirty-sixth of a Series of Legal Articles

By Leo T. Parker
Attorney-at-Law

IN all legal controversies involving liability of the owner of a motor truck for injuries resulting from the operation of the vehicle, the important question for decision of the Court is: Did the relation of master and servant expressly or impliedly exist between the injured person and the owner of the truck?

Frequently discussion arises whether the hirer of a truck is liable in damages for injuries to the driver, or for injuries to third parties caused by the driver, when the truck owner is engaged to haul merchandise at a stipulated price per load or per unit of quantity or weight. If the relation of master and servant does not exist between the driver and the hirer of the truck, the latter is not liable. This question of the law is thoroughly considered in the recent case of Southern Surety Co. v. Shoemake, 24 S. W. (2d) 7.

The facts of this case are that the owner of a motor truck was engaged to haul merchandise. No fixed amount of goods was ever agreed to be hauled; no specified time was fixed in which the truck owner was to work or stop hauling. He was paid only for the quantity of merchandise he actually delivered. In other words, the employee or owner of the truck did the work according to his own ideas and methods; he employed the necessary help; he worked when and as he pleased, and he chose his own hours and times of labor.

One day the owner of the truck was injured while performing his regular duties. He sued the hirer of the vehicle. The lower Court held the employee entitled to a recovery, but the higher Court promptly reversed this decision, saying:

"No better test can be applied than to say that the relation of master and servant exists where the master retains or exercises the power of control in directing, not merely the end sought to be accomplished by the employment of another, but as well the means and details of its accomplishment; not only what shall be done, but how it shall be done. . . . He [employee] was not under the control of Horn [hirer] in respect to the details of the work. . . . The quantity to be delivered and the times of delivery were as Shoemake [owner of the truck] willed, and, if no merchandise was delivered, he was to receive no compensation."

ANOTHER well-established point of the law is that if the owner hires his vehicle and the driver on a daily payment basis, and the hirer directs the driver in the manner in which the work shall be performed, the owner of the vehicle is not liable for injuries received by the driver, or effected by him.

If, however, the owner of the vehicle furnishes the driver and agrees to perform certain work, and the hirer does not have the right to exercise absolute control over the driver, the owner of the vehicle is responsible for the injurious acts of the driver.

For instance, in the recent case of Peters v. United, 277 Pac. 156, it was disclosed that the owner of a vehicle hired it, with its driver. While driving the vehicle it accidentally ran over and seriously injured a person. The latter sued both hirer and owner of the truck.

It is important to know that, as evidence was presented showing that the hirer had only the right to direct the driver where he should drive, and had no right to discharge him, the Court held the owner of the vehicle solely liable, stating the following important law:

"To escape liability the original master must resign full control of the servant for the time being, it not being sufficient that the servant is partially under the control of a third person; and it is necessary to distinguish between authoritative direction and control and mere suggestions as to details or the necessary cooperation where the work furnished is part of a larger operation. . . . When a master hires out, under a rental agreement, the services of an employee for the operation of an instrumentality owned by the master, together with the use of the instrumentality, without relinquishing to the hirer the power to discharge such servant, to go where and perform such work as the hirer directs, the legal presumption is that, although the hirer directs the servant where to go and what to do in the performance of the work, the servant remains the servant of the general employer."

Also, in another leading case, 209 Pac. 243, it was shown that the owner of a motor truck hired a vehicle and its driver to another. The hirer superintended the loading and unloading, but exercised no control over the truck or driver while on the road. The Court held the owner of the truck liable for negligence of the driver, saying:

"While the evidence shows that Geiger [hirer] possessed and exercised authority to control the conduct of Pratt [driver] in the work of loading and unloading, nevertheless, so the evidence shows, Geiger never assumed the right to direct and control Pratt."

In considering litigations of this na-

The Law and Public Warehousing

Announcing Further Articles by Leo T. Parker

A VALUABLE and major editorial feature of Distribution and Warehousing is the series of legal articles by Leo T. Parker, an attorney-at-law practising in Ohio. These texts, inaugurated in this magazine about three years ago, have created wide interest because of their authoritative character.

During 1931 Mr. Parker's series will be continued monthly. The subjects he has selected for discussion will be covered thoroughly and completely with a view to imparting worthwhile information useful to warehousemen in avoiding litigations as well as in winning lawsuits in which they may become involved.

During the past year Mr. Parker has been carefully analyzing the many legal inquiries which have been submitted to him by readers of Distribution and Warehousing, and upon notes which he has kept he has based the titles set forth below. In the coming articles he will, as in the past, cite leading higher Court cases in various localities, to substantiate each statement of the law presented, and will allude to decisions particularly adapted to illustrate the points emphasized in legal controversies.

The subjects of the articles to appear in months ahead—not necessarily in the order in which the titles are here published—are as follows:

"From the Legal Viewpoint"

DURING the year, of course, Mr. Parker will continue to conduct his "From the Legal Viewpoint" department each month. Without cost to our readers, he answers queries which they submit. Accompanying his published replies is his running comment relating to current legal controversies and Court decisions.

ture it must be kept in mind that they fall into three classes:

1. Those in which the Court hold as a matter of law that the general employer is liable.

2. Those in which the Court hold as a matter of law that the special employer or hirer is liable.

3. Those in which the Court hold that the question is one for the jury to determine.

In other words, the Court may hold the owner of a truck not liable if the evidence indicates conclusively that he relinquished full control of the vehicle and its driver to the hirer. If the testimony discloses positively that the owner of the truck retained complete control of the driver, then the Court may hold the owner liable. But if the testimony results in uncertainty as to who is legally liable, then a jury must consider all of the testimony and decide whether the owner relinquished full control of the truck and its driver, and render a verdict accordingly.

For example, in Umsted v. Scofield, 263 Pac. 799, it was disclosed that the wages of an employee were paid by his employer and he was told to do "anything the hirer wanted taken care of." On the job the hirer directed the employee as to what was to be done, but not as to how to do anything. The Supreme Court said:

"The jury might have inferred that the instructions given by the hirer were merely directions as to the result to be accomplished."

Under these circumstances the hirer would not be liable, because any person who is having work or hauling done may require the owner of the truck to accomplish certain results, or finish the work in a prescribed manner, although the hirer would have no right to control the driver as to how he accomplishes the results.

Therefore it is quite apparent that frequently it is necessary for a jury to decide the question of whether the hirer has assumed legal control of the driver.

Another important point of the law is that it is the right to exercise control, rather than the mere fact of its exercise, which is decisive. In other words, if a hirer has the right to direct the driver exclusively how he shall do the work, the former is solely responsible; but if he assumes such right without authority of the owner, the owner and the hirer may be held jointly liable on a decision by the jury.

Reducing Liability

UNDER various circumstances warehousemen may make contracts which may relieve the former from liability for negligent or injurious acts of their employees.

For illustration, the owner of a motor truck is liable for injuries sustained by a stranger who is permitted by the driver to ride, or for injuries sustained by others who are injured while rendering the driver assistance, providing the testimony indicates that the owner of the truck knew or, by the application of ordinary care should have known, that the driver was accustomed to permitting strangers to ride or render assistance.

If, however, the driver of a motor truck signs a contract in which it is agreed that he will not permit strangers or other persons to ride on the truck or render assistance, and the warehouseman exercises care to know that his driver abides by this agreement, the employer is not liable for injuries resulting from failure of the employee to obey the contract. Moreover, employment contracts are valid by the terms of which employees agree to accept a specified sum for injuries not resulting from the employer's negligence, providing of course that such contracts do not violate compensation or other similar laws.

The latest case in which is discussed contracts restricting the liability of motor truck owners is Harvey v. Meadowlake Co., 27 S. W. (2d) 299. In this case the Meadowlake company entered into, with a truck owner named Rather, a contract substantially as follows:

"This contract made and entered into the 31st day of July, 1928, by and between the Meadowlake Company of Sherman, Tex., hereinafter called the first party, and E. B. Rather of Sherman, hereinafter called the second party.

"The truck owner understands that he is not an agent or employee of the company, nor does the said truck owner represent or act for the said company in any way whatsoever. By this contract the truck owner, an independent contractor, acts merely as a carrier to transport for the company's patrons.

"The company is granted the privilege of painting its name or any matter pertaining to its business, if the former so desires, on the body of the truck being used by the truck owner in the performance of this contract."

It will be noted that Rather was to furnish his own truck and to pay the expenses of its operation and repair. He received his compensation based on the quantity of goods he delivered. If he delivered no goods, he received no pay. It is true he was to work every day and to observe certain hours. Also, the company had its name painted on the side of the truck.

While driving the truck, Rather struck and injured the occupant of another automobile, who sued the company for damages. The lower Court held the company not liable and the higher Court sustained this verdict, saying:

"It was expressly stated in the contract that Rather [motor truck owner] was in no sense an agent or servant of the company. Hence his authority and his duties as well were regulated by the terms of that contract. The company had no right to demand that he do anything in its interest not provided for or implied in the writing. Nothing Rather was to do was left to the will or direction of the company."

Rented Vehicles

FREQUENTLY the question arises whether the owner of a motor truck is liable in damages for injuries negligently caused by a driver to whom the vehicle is hired or loaned.

First it is important to know that generally a motor truck owner is not liable for injuries caused by the negligent acts of an experienced adult driver, such as a friend, a relative or other person to whom the vehicle is rented or loaned, if the accident occurs while the borrower is using the machine for his own personal business or pleasure, and not by direction of the owner.

On the other hand, liability will arise where the owner entrusts a motor truck to the hands of an inexperienced or incompetent person, whether adult, child, servant, friend or other person. The liability of the owner is founded not alone on the fact of ownership, but on the combined negligence of the owner and the driver—negligence of the former in entrusting the vehicle to an incompetent driver, and of the other in its operation.

Therefore it is quite apparent that a motor truck owner who rents or loans the vehicle without its driver is expected by the law to investigate and determine whether the renter or borrower is an experienced and competent driver.

In the leading case of Waddle v. Stafford, 230 Pac. 855, a higher Court stated the following important law:

"It is the duty of a man to see that his automobile is not run by a careless, reckless person, but that it is in the hands of a skillful and competent person."

Obviously a motor truck owner is liable if the testimony proves beyond a reasonable doubt that he may have by the exercise of ordinary care determined that the person to whom the vehicle was rented or loaned is an incompetent or reckless driver.

For instance, in the leading and higher Court decision of Mechell v. Churches, 206 Pac. 6, it was disclosed that the owner of a motor vehicle loaned it to a person whom he knew intended to drink intoxicating liquor. The borrower became drunk, and when driving steered the machine into collision with another automobile, effecting serious damages. The owner of the borrowed car was held liable for the resultant damages, and the Court said:

"We consider it not only common sense, but common law and justice, that one cannot loan [his automobile] to an-

Next Month

THE law of delayed payments and bankruptcy will be discussed by Mr. Parker in his next article, to appear in the February issue.

Intentional fraud, concealment of assets, previous irregularities, illegal transfers of property, ownership of consigned goods, Federal and State laws—these and other phases will be considered.

other, knowing that other to be . . . in such condition that he would be reckless and incompetent."

Incompetency

VARIOUS Courts have attempted to distinguish between a competent and an incompetent motor vehicle driver. It has been held that it is the legal duty of a motor truck owner to ascertain with reasonable assurance that a prospective employee, or a person to whom a vehicle is rented or loaned, is physically and mentally normal and experienced in driving motor vehicles.

In one case, for example, a person whose eyesight was impaired and who wore no eyeglasses was held incompetent. In another case a person who had corrected his impaired eyesight by wearing the proper kind of glasses was held to be a competent driver. A highly nervous person probably would be held to be an incompetent driver of a motor vehicle.

Without doubt persons who are insane, intoxicated, under the influence of drugs, deaf, paralyzed, or naturally reckless, are incompetent drivers. Usually, however, a person who is granted, under State law regulations, a license to drive motor vehicles is deemed to be competent, unless the employer knows that actually he is incompetent. Extreme old age, youth, or physical weakness is strong evidence of incompetency to drive.

As previously stated, the owner of a truck is not liable in damages for injuries negligently caused by an adult borrower or hirer of his vehicle, providing he is a competent driver and is operating the vehicle solely for his own business or pleasure at the time the accident happens.

Yet confusion on this point of the law results in many owners of trucks daily subjecting themselves to excessive damages by permitting minors to operate vehicles in violation of State or city laws.

The statutes of many States make it unlawful for the owner to permit any minor to operate a motor vehicle unless accompanied by a licensed chauffeur or an adult who is a competent driver. Therefore in localities where this law prevails, a truck owner may be liable for injuries effected by a minor where the injury is effected while the vehicle is being used in violation of the statutes, although negligence of the driver is not conclusively proved.

For illustration, in the leading case of Paschall v. Sharp, 110 So. 387, it was shown that a minor under 16 years of age, while driving a vehicle on the public highway in violation of a State law, ran into another vehicle, seriously injuring the occupant. The injured person filed suit against the owner of the vehicle which was being driven by the minor. The Court, in holding the owner liable, explained the law as follows:

"Any person under 16 years of age is conclusively presumed incompetent to drive an automobile on the public highways . . . and any person who allows such a vehicle to be operated by a person, a minor, under 16 years of age, upon the public highways of this State, unaccompanied by an adult person, is guilty of negligence as a matter of law."

Contrary to the opinion of the majority of persons, unless a restrictive law clearly specifies that a minor may legally operate a vehicle when accompanied by an adult, the owner of the vehicle is liable although an adult experienced driver is present when an injury is inflicted by a minor driver.

For instance, in the case of Repczynski v. Mikulak, 157 N. E. 464, it was proved that an adult was in an automobile when a minor driver had an accident. As the State law which prohibited minors from driving motor vehicles did not specify that minors may lawfully drive when accompanied by an adult, the Court held the owner of the vehicle liable.

It is interesting to observe that many State higher Courts have consistently held that motor truck owners are responsible for injuries effected by minor drivers, although no State or city law prohibits minors from driving motor vehicles.

In a recent case (91 Misc. Rep. 248), the Court said:

"It is generally held where a master knowingly retains incompetent servants in his employ and to do his bidding, he becomes liable for their negligence."

On the other hand the law is well settled that the owner of a motor truck is not liable in damages for injuries caused by a minor who, without authority and knowledge of the owner, takes the vehicle and uses it for his own pleasure. In other words, neither an employer nor a parent is liable for wrongdoings of a minor, unless the former was aware, or by the application of ordinary diligence should have realized, that the minor was likely to effect an injury.

Relatives as Drivers

INASMUCH as many warehousemen, and other motor truck owners, permit competent members of their family to operate the vehicles, it is well to know that the former are not liable unless the injury is effected while the vehicle is being driven strictly, or nearly so, in accordance with instructions. This rule of the law applies to pleasure vehicles as well as to motor trucks.

However, the owner of a motor vehicle, whether used for business or pleasure, always is liable for the negligent acts of a relative if testimony is introduced proving that the latter was serving as agent or employee of the owner when the accident occurred. Moreover the employment or agency may be implied under proper circumstances.

Recently the Supreme Court of New York, in the case of Cohen v. Neustadter, 222 N. Y. S. 602, explained the law to the jury, as follows:

"The liability for the acts of another is not dependent entirely upon the strict relationship of master and servant, but upon any relationship of similar nature, and where one acts for another at his request, express or implied, for his benefit, and under his direction, the master is responsible."

Common Liability

OF course all employers are expected by the law to exercise reasonable care in maintaining the equipment, with which employees work, in good condition. Therefore the owner is liable who negligently permits the mechanism or other parts of a motor truck to get out of repair and the driver or his helper or a stranger is injured as a result thereof.

On the other hand it has been frequently held that a truck owner is not liable for injuries sustained by a driver where it is disclosed that the latter was aware of the defective condition of the mechanism which caused the injury and failed to notify his employer that repairs were required.

However, if the defect is of such character that the driver failed to discover it, then the Court will investigate the circumstances surrounding the accident, to determine whether or not the employer exercised "ordinary care" to inspect or have inspected the mechanism with the object of discovering and remedying the defect.

In the leading case of Fowler v. Caroline, 133 S. E. 188, the higher Court explained that before an employer is liable for injuries sustained by an employee: (1) the instrumentality causing the injury must be defective, or (2) the employer must know of the defect, or be negligent in not discovering it and making the needed repairs, or (3) the employer gives assurance to the employee that the instrumentality is safe, or (4) the work must be done under the supervision of the employer and according to his instructions, or (5) if the employer, having either express or implied notice of a defect, promises to repair or procure a reasonably suitable instrumentality and fails to do so.

As the liability of a truck owner for injuries is based on his own negligence, or that of an authorized employee, these rules apply practically with respect to injuries sustained by strangers, who are not trespassers, and also to employees.

Survey of Furniture Moving Industry in Cleveland, Ohio

By S. C. Fulton

THE household goods warehousing industry generally will be interested in this survey, as it was taken in a city of diversified interested. The conditions in Cleveland, as regards housing and home ownership, are very good—probably close to the top of the list as compared with other cities regardless of size or location. This condition naturally holds families to their homes for longer periods, thus reducing the movings per capita.

The questionnaire used in conducting this survey comprised twenty-eight queries pertinent to the moving industry generally. Personal calls were made on 170 firms and individuals whose names and addresses appear in the telephone directory as movers. Inquiry discloses, however, that if all could be reached who actually do operate vans and trucks in the transportation of furniture and household goods in Greater Cleveland the list might reach 300. The largest group of so-called unofficial movers arises from the industrial depression. Practically every man who did hauling for factories has during this period joined the already overcrowded moving industry.

Virtually every person called on expressed interest in the survey and cooperated to make it representative. There were some who could not be reached personally, of course, but outside inquiry produced sufficient data to make these reports valuable to the survey.

WORTHY of mention is the length of time some of these firms have been engaged in the moving business. For three-score years one company has been serving an ever-increasing demand for honest and reliable service. Another started three years later, in 1873. Both of these older brothers in the industry have striven to maintain standards of service in which they have been joined by many other juniors—who, by the way, have earned their spurs, some forty years ago. Then, also, there are the many whose record of service dates twenty-five to thirty years back.

Contrasted with this class of moving firms are the ice-delivering and coal, ash and rubbish-hauling movers who may be found at various street intersections or cruising about some sections of the city.

The "sublime" and the "ridiculous" —each doing to his respective clients that which one could do for the other.

In the interest of public safety and for the protection of our highways—both of which are important—in Ohio there is rigid enforcement of regulations governing loading during the spring months. Reputable movers, along with other industries, cooperate to conserve the roads.

Would not the public health and welfare also be improved if legislators everywhere would see to it that laws were written and enacted which would divide all these movers of furniture, ice, coal, ash and rubbish into three distinct classes and license them to (1) deliver ice, (2) haul coal and ashes and rubbish, and (3) move household goods and furniture?

Divisions

According to the survey, there are, in Greater Cleveland, moving firms whose size and capabilities completely cover their field of operations.

For purpose of discussion, all the movers would seem to divide as follows:

1. Engaged in the industry are large companies which operate a score of vans and maintain a chain of fireproof storage warehouses situated at strategic points throughout the city. Others operate a dozen vans and one or more fireproof storage warehouses, and still others have six or more vans and one fireproof storage warehouse.

2. Companies which operate two to four first class vans each completely and properly equipped to do the finest class of work, but who "farm out" their storage business.

3. Here we find the fellow who is in business with and for himself. He is thoroughly honest and dependable, but mostly of limited responsibility. He usually operates one large van.

4. This group comprises the most numerous of the movers—the man who has one smaller van and a canvas-covered truck and does moving, expressing and general hauling. The equipment generally is very poor.

5. Deliveries of ice and haulers of coal, ashes and rubbish. In all, 344 regular vans and 108 open or canvas-covered trucks were found. There apparently is no class or condition of equipment omitted, as units costing $10,000 to $12,000 down to $25 each were in evidence.

The backbone of the equipment is first class, costing from $6,000 to $8,000 a unit. It is maintained in good, safe, road-worthy condition and is used for both local and long distance work.

Locally we find 36 firms operating on union basis, and 134 non-union.

WITH THE ASSOCIATIONS

HERE is presented in tabloid form the Association news that is of general interest to the industry as a whole. No effort is made to publish complete reports of all Association meetings; the dissemination of such information is logically the work of the officers and the committee chairmen. What is presented here is in effect a cross-section review of the major activities so that Association members may be kept advised as to what "the other fellow" elsewhere in the country is thinking and doing. When annual or semi-annual meetings are held, more extended reports will occasionally be published.

Southern Elects E. C. Lowry Its 1931 President

THE Southern Warehousemen's Association held its annual meeting on Nov. 20 and 21 in Atlanta and elected officers and directors as follows:

President. E. C. Lowry, president Alabama Motor Transfer & Warehouse Co., Montgomery.

Vice-presidents, C. E. Boineau, president Columbia Brokerage & Storage Co., Inc., Columbia, S. C.; Fred A. Bryan, president Chattanooga Transfer & Storage Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.; J. P. Ricks, president Ricks Storage, Inc., Jackson, Miss.; and R. B. Young, president Savannah Bonded Warehouse & Transfer Co., Savannah, Ga.

Secretary, T. F. Cathcart, president Cathcart Van & Storage Co., Inc., Atlanta.

Treasurer, John J. Woodside, Jr., president John J. Woodside Storage Co., Inc., Atlanta.

Sydney Green, Atlanta, resigned as executive secretary and was succeeded by his former assistant, Mrs. Lorena Welsh.

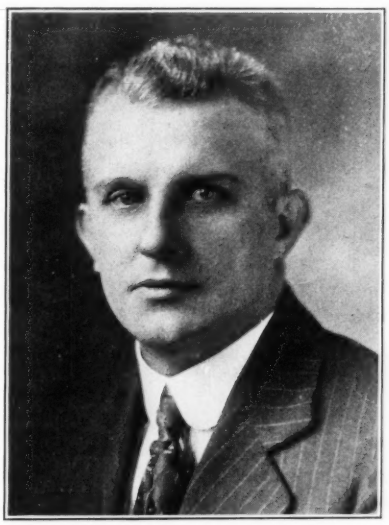
Directors, W. T. Callahan, treasurer John E. Withers Transfer & Storage Co., Inc., Miami, Fla.; W. H. Dearing, secretary John H. Poston Storage Warehouses, Inc., Memphis; E. L. Hess, president Hess-Strickland Transfer & Storage Co., Inc., Birmingham, Ala.; J. L. Wilkinson, secretary Carolina Transfer & Storage Co., Charlotte, N. C.; and H. C. Leeson, assistant manager Rowe Transfer & Storage Co., Knoxville, Tenn.

The opening session of the convention, held at the Henry Grady Hotel, was featured by the report of Mr. Wilkinson as the retiring president; a resume of the free storage situation created by the Government-operated Federal Barge Lines, by Mr. Dearing of Memphis; and an explanation of the proposed Federal Trade Commission conference set-up, by Chester B. Carruth, Chicago, statistician of the merchandise division of the American Warehousemen's Association. Approximately a hundred storage executives were present from all parts of the Southeast.

Not since the panic of 1880-83 has southern business been through quite such a year as 1930, Mr. Wilkinson said in his report, and he considered it remarkable that the association had come through without loss of membership and with a record of continued accomplishment. Featuring the latter, he declared, were the contacts made by the executive secretary with the manufacturers and distributors in southern cities.

The most serious competition came not from without but from members who failed to maintain ethics or to operate on a business-like basis, Mr. Wilkinson said.

E. C. Lowry



Montgomery executive chosen president of the Southern Warehousemen's Association

As executive secretary Mr. Green outlined the contact work commended by the president, declaring it would show more returns as business returned to normal. For the association, a year of general business set-back had been one of constructive development which would have its effect in the coming "happy days."

At the conclusion of Mr. Carruth's talk a resolution was adopted favoring the holding of a Federal trade practice conference for merchandise warehousing and the adoption of a code of ethics under the supervision of the Federal Trade Commission.

The afternoon program was opened with a talk by Mr. Ricks on "What the Merchandise Warehouse Offers the Distributor."

M. E. Hopkins, district sales manager for the Kellog Sales Co., told the group that his firm had turned from broker to warehouseman as distributing agent because of the economies possible. Increased business could be obtained in 1931 only by hard and constructive work, he declared, and loafers must be weeded out of warehousing just as out of other industries. He predicted better business for the coming year.

George Knapp, regional manager of the Atlantic Sales Corporation, discussed "Cooperation Between the Manufacturer and the Warehouseman," urging the warehouseman not to have too many "pet ideas" on methods of handling articles entrusted to their care. Most manufacturers, he pointed out, had well defined methods of packing, storing and controlling their distribution, all as a result of careful study, and the surest way for warehousemen to lose business was to throw the monkey wrench of pen ideas into such arranged machinery.

A closing discussion on the industry's problems centered largely on uniformity of hauling and storage rates. It was generally agreed that rates were too diversified but that uniformity was difficult to attain.

At the second day's session an invitation by Henry Reimers, Chicago, executive secretary of the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association, to attend the National's San Antonio convention in January.

W. T. Callahan, Miami, discussed "Warehouse Efficiency Under Modern Conditions," urging that greater attention be paid to the employees, declaring that 75 per cent of a company's earnings came through the people working with the executives. He advocated group insurance for employees.

Carl F. Wittichen, Birmingham, also discussing the efficiency topic, stressed need for retrenchment in warehousing to meet the needs of changing times. There would not be, following a decade of prosperity, a gradual return to the 1914 standards of salaries and cost of living, he declared, and the warehouseman must steel himself to meet this. He recommended:

1. Utilization of less expensive storage space on side streets instead of "palaces" on main thoroughfares.
2. Gradual reduction in salaries and wages in keeping with reduced cost of living.

3. An effort to secure reduction of taxation, through local, regional and national warehouse organizations.

Only by reducing overhead and operating expenses, Mr. Wittichen said, could warehousemen hope to overcome losses in reduced volume of business.

Col. A. B. Barber of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States outlined the efforts of the Chamber's Transportation Department to have highway regulations made uniform throughout the States. It had been successful in twenty-five of the States, he said.

Perry T. Knight, chairman of the Georgia Public Service Commission, pointed out the need for national legislation and uniformity of States' legislation to bring about reciprocity in regulation of interstate motor transport.

S. S. David, Chicago, closed this session with a talk on the need of trade associations and their work.

The final gathering was devoted to the activities of the Allied Van Lines, Inc., of the N. F. W. A., discussion being led by Mr. Reimers, A. V. L.'s general manager. He indicated that the agency's total volume of business for its third year of operation should total about $2,500,000.

Considerable work was now being done along the lines of standard containers for furniture, Mr. Reimers said, and this move might lead to cooperative hauling with both the railroads and A. V. L. participating.

George C. Harris, Birmingham, southeastern regional vice-president of A. V. L., reviewed the agency's development in that section and said there had been a steady and gratifying increase in volume in spite of the business recession.

The convention closed with a banquet.

Powell Again Is Chosen President of Buffalo Local

AT the annual meeting of the Buffalo Furniture Warehousemen's Association, held at the Hotel Statler on Dec. 9, officers for 1931 were elected as follows:

President, Joseph W. Powell, president, Cold Spring Storage Co., Inc.

Vice-president, Charles F. Cook, secretary, Dye Fireproof Warehouse, Inc.

Secretary, Kneeland B. Wilkes, treasurer, American Household Storage Co.

Californians Discuss Commissions for Tips

THE ethics of paying commissions to real estate agents and apartment house proprietors for providing business leads was discussed at the November meeting of the northern division of the California Van & Storage Association, held at the Athens Club in Oakland.

Harvey Lyon, president of this division and vice-president of the N. F. W. A., reported that the directors of the National had adopted a resolution against the practice, at their meeting at Chicago in October. The California association previously had adopted a resolution condemning the procedure. Several members spoke in approval of the attitude of these organizations.

After a considerable discussion regarding an increase in the storage rate in fireproof warehouses it was agreed to ask the various local round tables in the division to consider the problem, this to be followed by further discussion in a division meeting. It was stated that the California operators were giving lower rates for such service than those in any other State. Speakers said they believed it to be the only State with a basic rate of one cent a cubic foot.

Johns Again Heads the Dakota Carriers

AT the recent annual meeting of the Dakota Motor Carriers' Association, with which warehouse firms are identified, G. G. Johns, DeSmet, So. Dak., was reelected president and O. H. Shade, Mitchell, So. Dak., was reelected secretary-treasurer. R. C. Mills, Sioux Falls, So. Dak., was elected first vice-president; F. J. Marx, secretary of the Dakota Warehouse Co., Watertown, So. Dak., vice-president heading the truck operators' division; and J. M. Harty, Bismarck, No. Dak., vice-president heading the bus and taxicab operators' division.

D. J. McMahon, Fargo, No. Dak., and F. M. Skjold, Minot, No. Dak., have been designated field secretaries for North Dakota. South Dakota field secretaries are yet to be selected.

Buehler Heads Denver Local

WILLIAM H. BUEHLER, president of the Buehler Transfer Co., Denver, has succeeded E. H. Ferrin, president of the Ferrin Van & Storage Co., as president of the Movers and Warehousemen's Association of Denver. B. F. Hough, of the Amick Transfer & Storage Co., the association's former secretary, is now vice-president. The secretary-treasurer is Raymond W. Johnson, operating executive of the Johnson Storage & Moving Co.

The Denver local has combined its office at 1608 Broadway with that of the Colorado Transfer and Warehousemen's Association and it is now operating as a mutual clearing house under the supervision of W. C. Vandegrift as executive secretary of both organizations.

Zech Heads Detroit FWA

AT the annual meeting of the Detroit Furniture Warehousemen's Association on Dec. 12, Frank X. Zech, secretary of the Wolverine Storage Co., Inc., was elected president, and Robert G. Greenman, proprietor of the Sprague Storage & Moving Co., was reelected secretary.

Detroit Van Owners Contact Legislators

COMMITTEES of the Detroit Van Owners' Association are making a canvass of the city to secure the abolition of contract rates in the moving business and securing the uniform adoption of the hourly rate as a basis of charges. Every operator in Detroit is to be reached, according to A. N. Morris, executive secretary.

Because of continued depression in the moving business, the association is striving to hold fast to its standards of price rates and ethics. The membership is being advised that any abandonment of the principles for which the association stands will lead to expulsion.

Members are approaching the State legislators with a view to building opposition against any bills which may be introduced at the next session of the Legislature, in January, to increase taxation on motor vehicles. The association is opposing also attempts to bring contract haulers under the control of the Public Utilities Commission. It has been contended that many contract haulers are in reality common carriers and should therefore come under the regulation of the Commission, which exacts heavy annual fees from truck operators.

Meanwhile, continuing its warfare against unethical furniture movers, the association brought its first defendant into Court on Dec. 1, but failed, on technical grounds, to secure a conviction.

Snyder Is Elected Chairman of Board of Indiana M. T. A.

THE Motor Truck Association of Indiana, Inc., held its thirteenth annual meeting, on Dec. 5 and 6, at the Hotel Severin in Indianapolis. One feature was the retirement of Tom Snyder, Indianapolis, as secretary, a position he had long held. He felt compelled to give up this work because of the demands on his time in connection with developing the Central Union Truck Terminal system. However, Mr. Snyder, who is president of the Warehouse Distributing Corporation, will continue to be an active figure in the activities of the association, as he was made chairman of its board of directors.

Charles A. Reeve, secretary of the Ballard Ice Cream Co., Indianapolis, was elected president. Succeeding Mr. Snyder as secretary is C. W. Abraham, of the Abraham Transfer Co., Indianapolis. W. S. Frye, president of the Frye Transfer Co., was again chosen treasurer.

The vice-presidents elected are: Henry L. Dithmer, president, Polar Ice & Fuel Co., Indianapolis; H. L. Oliver, president, Delaware Trucking Co., Muncie; W. T. Collins, president, W. T. Collins & Son, New Albany; Charles E. Travis, president, Vincennes Transfer & Storage Co., Vincennes; J. H. Becraft, owner, Becraft Transfer & Storage Co., Kokoma; B. J. Bartlett, president, Bartlett Transfer & Storage Co., Huntington; Walter Wetzel, of the Lamasco Transfer Co., Evansville; H. H. Hedges, secretary, Terre Haute Union Transfer & Storage, Terre Haute; Clem Wickett, president, Motor Distributing Corp., Richmond; Ray Shook, president, F. & S. Transit Co., South Bend; O. N. Hesler, president, Hesler Transfer Co., Elwood; Walter Ardapple, secretary, Joe Ardapple Storage & Moving, Lafayette, and Volney Lay, president, Lay Trucking Co., La Porte.

Elected to serve with Mr. Snyder on the board of directors are the retiring president, Bert O'Leary, Indianapolis; Ed. Feldman, president, Feldman Transfer Co., Richmond; C. W. Haight, president, Quick Service Express, East Chicago; J. O. Killion, president, Killion Motor Express, Washington; J. D. Dungan, Indianapolis, and John Robinson, Terre Haute.

Minnesota T. O. A. Reelects McReavy as Its President

AT the recent fifth annual meeting of the Minnesota Truck Owners' Association, which has numerous warehouse executives among its 1,800 members, J. E. McReavy of Minneapolis was reelected president and T. A. Horrocks of Minneapolis was reelected secretary. Vice-presidents chosen are J. D. Ryan, St. Paul; C. W. Knauff, Alexandria; M. A. Murphy, Virginia, and A. R. Thoeny, Winona. Among about sixty directors elected are the following identified with warehousing:

F. A. Thompson, manager Thompson & Wulff Transfer & Storage Co., Albert Lea; B. Capretz, owner Austin Transfer Line, Austin; N. F. Russell, president Bridgeman-Russell Co., Duluth; F. A. Sheridan, president Duluth Van & Storage Co., Duluth; R. H. Hall, president Security Storage & Van Co., Duluth; L. B. Hiler, owner Hiler Transfer & Storage, East Grand Forks; James H. Ryan, manager Ryan Brothers Transfer & Fuel Co., Hibbing; L. J. Jessup, assistant manager Jessup Transfer & Fire-Proof Storage Co., Mankato; Joseph R. Cochran, president Cameron Transfer & Storage Co., Minneapolis; George R. Turner, secretary La Belle Safety Storage Co., Minneapolis; W. A. Morse, treasurer Security Warehouse Co., Minneapolis; A. W. Trenholm, Jr., secretary Northwestern Terminal Co., Minneapolis; Paul W. Frenzel, vice-president St. Paul Terminal Warehouse Co., St. Paul; E. L. Murphy, Sr., president Murphy Transfer & Storage Co., St. Paul; Oliver T. Skellett, president Ballard Storage & Transfer Co., St. Paul.

It was announced that the executive committee, comprising the officers and twelve members later to be selected, would conduct a campaign to call a thousand members.

Secretary Horrocks in his report suggested the need of a fact-finding body when the Minnesota Legislature meets in January. He pointed out that half the Senators and a third of the House members were new, and it was the association's job, he declared, to present to them such facts as would best picture the importance of the motor truck industry.

Resolutions adopted included one recording appreciation of the actions of the motor truck committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in instituting a better-driving campaign and in further development of State trucking organizations. Speakers included Tom Snyder, Indianapolis, secretary of the Motor Truck Association of Indiana, and Joseph H. Hays of the Iowa Truckers' Association.

McConnell Is Elected President of Merchandise Group, Illinois

THE Illinois Association of Merchandise Warehousemen at its annual meeting, at the Chicago Athletic Club on Dec. 9, elected officers and directors for 1931 as follows:

President, George M. McConnell, president Railway Terminal & Warehouse Co., Chicago.

First vice-president, Roy C. Griswold,

George M. McConnell

Chicago executive elected president of the Illinois Association of Merchandise Warehousemen chairman of board Griswold-Walker-Bateman Co., Chicago.

Second vice-president, E. L. Valentine, partner Valentine Transfer & Storage Co., Aurora.

Treasurer, W. G. Morgan, manager Soo Terminal Warehouse, Chicago.

Directors, Elmer Erickson, vice-president, Midland Warehouse & Transfer Co., Chicago; E. H. Hagel, superintendent Western Warehousing Co., Chicago; W. W. Huggett, vice-president North Pier Terminal Co., Chicago; V. M. Kolly, Crooks Terminal Warehouses, Chicago, and the association's 1930 president, Alfred H. Millward, president Wakem & McLaughlin, Inc., Chicago; H. F. Partridge, Currier-Lee Warehouse Co., Chicago, and Wellington Walker, president Griswold-Walker-Bateman Co., Chicago.

Wilson V. Little, Chicago, executive secretary of the merchandise division of the American Warehousemen's Association, continues as secretary of the Illinois association, and Chester B. Carruth, Chicago, the division's accounting consultant, continues in that capacity for the Illinois body.

Hubbard Reelected President of Michigan Furniture W. A.

WITH Michigan's truck operators confronted with the certainty of a stiff fight against enactment of adverse statutes at the coming session of the State Legislature, the Michigan Furniture Warehousemen's Association at its annual meeting, at the Hotel Tuller in Detroit, on Dec. 11, decided to reelect officers. The 1931 personnel follows:

President, B. C. Hubbard, Grand Rapids, president Richards Storage Corp., Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo and Muskegon.

Vice-president, Arthur A. Leonard, president Leonard-Detroit Storage Co., Detroit.

Secretary-treasurer, H. H. Hardy, secretary Fireproof Storage Co., Lansing.

Directors, George L. Walt, president Lansing Storage Co., Lansing; Frank X. Zech, secretary Wolverine Storage Co., Inc., Detroit; H. G. Beebe, secretary, Union Truck & Storage Co., Jackson; L. R. Blodgett, president Blodgett Packing & Storage Co., Grand Rapids; Charles J. Foster, owner Cadillac Storage & Transfer Co., Cadillac.

Reports by individual members indicated storage business good, trucking business poor, and collections slow. The association held four meetings during the year, and the president's annual report indicated that the ethics of the association had been well maintained.

The meeting went on record urging the legislative committee of the association and individual members to contact their local chambers of commerce, the Michigan Manufacturers' Association and senators and representatives with a view to securing the exemption of household furniture and used office furniture from any bill designed to regulate the operations of contract haulers.

Another resolution opposed any legislation which would increase the cost of truck operation.

President Hubbard pointed out that the industry in Michigan faced drastic measures in the form of taxation and regulation from the forthcoming Legislature. He said there was a movement to bring all contract haulers under the control of the Public Utilities Commission, and that the association would have to stir itself to keep furniture haulers from further imposts.

Vice-president Leonard pointed out the bills were framed on such general lines that furniture removers would be included in their proposed provisions, although such was not the intention of the framers, who, he said, were concerned chiefly with the transportation of commodities for the retail market.

Secretary Hardy, member of a State Tax Commission appointed by the Governor to investigate Michigan's tax system, said the Commission had had under consideration the question of trucks, their dimensions and power, and whether many haulers were not in fact common carriers and therefore subject to the control of the Public Utilities Commission. The tax body, he said, had not as yet made a report, and it was therefore impossible to make any counter-movement.

While the meeting was in progress the Interstate Commerce Commission was holding an inquiry in Detroit bearing on rates and the diversion of business from the railroads by passenger and freight automobile traffic. Officers of the Pere Marquette Railroad and the Detroit & Cleveland Navigation Co. testified that business had decreased due to highway competition.

Mr. Leonard, who attended the hearing, said there appeared to be considerable feeling against truck companies, particularly those which were "bootlegging" transportation by avoiding taxation and regulation as contract haulers. He said he thought the railroads were not anxious to secure the moving of furniture as part of their operations, and that it would probably be possible to arrange for the exemption of furniture movers.

Coughlin to Be New York FWA's 1931 President

AT the December meeting of the New York Furniture Warehousemen's Association the nominating committee, headed by Louis Schramm, presented its 1931 slate to be voted on at the annual meeting on Jan. 5. For president the committee selected J. H. Coughlin, manager of Lee Brothers, Inc. He will succeed Thomas F. Murray, president of Day & Meyer, Murray & Young, Inc. The committee's other choices are:

For vice-president, Louis Schramm, Jr., secretary of the Chelsea Fireproof Storage Warehouses, Inc. For secretary and treasurer, the present incumbents—respectively William T. Bostwick, president of the Thomas J. Stewart Co., and William R. Wood, secretary of the Liberty Storage & Warehouse Co. For director for two years, George Kindermann, president of Julius Kindermann & Sons, Inc. For directors for three years each, the retiring president, Mr. Murray; John G. Neeser, president of the Manhattan Storage & Warehouse Co., and John D. White, president of Chas. D. Strang, Inc., Brooklyn.

The annual meeting on Jan. 5 will be held at the Hotel McAlpin.

The Great Neck Storage Co., Great Neck, Long Island, was elected to membership at the December gathering, and approval was given to the firm's application for membership in the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association.

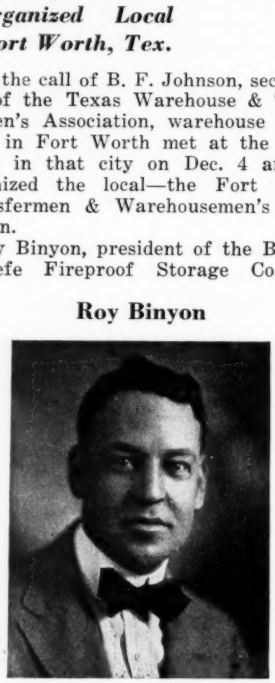
Roy Binyon Heads Reorganized Local in Fort Worth, Tex.

AT the call of B. F. Johnson, secretary of the Texas Warehouse & Transfermen's Association, warehouse executives in Fort Worth met at the Texas Hotel in that city on Dec. 4 and reorganized the local—the Fort Worth Transfermen & Warehousemen's Association.

Roy Binyon, president of the Binyon-O'Keefe Fireproof Storage Co. and

Roy Binyon



Elected president of the reorganized Fort Worth Transfer and Warehousemen's Association president of the State organization, was elected president. W. A. Johnson, president of the Johnson Warehouse Co., Inc., was chosen secretary.

It was voted to hold noon meetings every other Thursday.

Petry Renominated to Be President of the New Jersey FWA

ALL officers and directors of the New Jersey Furniture Warehousemen's Association whose terms will expire on the occasion of the annual meeting in January have been renominated by the committee headed by Herbert Holden, Elizabeth, to prepare the 1931 slate, which follows:

For president, Frederick Petry, Jr., president of the Petry Express & Storage Co., Trenton. For first vice-president, James E. Mulligan, of the Knickerbocker Storage Warehouse Co., Newark. For second vice-president, Richard Coyne, Jr., owner of the Richard Coyne Storage Warehouses, East Orange. For third vice-president, Nathan L. Goodman, secretary of the Goodman Warehouse Corp., Jersey City and Bayonne. For treasurer, Griswold B. Holman, secretary of Geo. B. Holman & Co., Inc., Rutherford, Hackensack and Westwood. For secretary, Frank J. Summers, of the Model Storage Warehouses, Newark. For directors, three years each, Edward E. Leach, operating executive of E. E. Leach, Inc., Montclair, and Thomas A. McGrath, treasurer of the Roseville Storage Co., Newark.

The election will take place at the annual meeting on Jan. 7 at Dietsch's The Sign of the Lobster Restaurant, Newark, recently purchased by Daniel Ruder, president of the Iron Bound Storage Co., Newark. The 4 p. m. business session will be followed by an evening banquet.

North Carolinians to Seek Equitable Motor Truck Taxes

THE North Carolina Truck Owners' Association, with which warehouse firms are identified, will hold its annual meeting, and elect officers, at Raleigh on Jan. 14, when the State Legislature will be in session there.

At the November meeting, held in Charlotte, the president, H. D. Horton, Charlotte, called attention to the heavy taxation imposed on motor truck owners engaged in the transportation business, stating it was four or five times greater than in any other State except South Carolina. The laws to be written at Raleigh this coming session would be applicable for two years, he emphasized, and relief must be secured from the Legislature.

The North Carolina organization is about a year old and has storage executives among its officers and directors. E. C. Land, vice-president of the Rucker Bonded Warehouse Corp., Greensboro, is secretary, and J. L. Wilkinson, secretary of the Carolina Transfer & Storage Co., Charlotte, and a past president of the Southern Warehousemen's Association, is treasurer.

Other warehouse firms which are members are the Lentz Transfer Co., Winston-Salem; Jordan Transfer Co., Durham; Frederickson Motor Express Corp., Charlotte; Standard Bonded Warehouse Co., Charlotte, and the Warren Transfer Co., Charlotte.

Ohio Haulers Will Oppose Legislation Considered Adverse

THE Ohio Association of Commercial Haulers will follow the coming session of the Ohio General Assembly, and all legislation considered inimical will be opposed.

At a recent special meeting of the association a resolution was adopted to seek amendments to the public utilities law to straighten out important points.

Under present interpretations of the law there are no provisions made for the consolidation of freight lines operated by certificated carriers or for the interchange of equipment between various lines when this is necessary.

Likewise there are no provisions for putting on additional equipment without appearing before the Public Utilities Commission and literally fighting for the privilege of increasing the service. The association takes the ground that after a certificate has been issued, the company holding the certificate should have authority to increase equipment and give better service without filing an application and having a rival transportation firm perhaps appear to oppose it.

Meanwhile enforcement of the public utilities law is progressing. Acting on information from the Ohio association, the Commission recently cited about fifty haulers to appear and show cause why they should not be prosecuted for law violations. Most of the cases are for failing to secure certificates of convenience and necessity. These cases will be heard by the Commission between Jan. 13 and the middle of February.

H. L. Hunter

G. M. Taylor

When a group of Texas storage executives organized recently the Rio Grande Valley Warehouse and Transfermen's Association, H. L. Hunter of the Grant-Storage Transfer Co., Harlingen, was elected president and G. M. Taylor of the Jones Transfer & Storage Co., Inc., Harlingen, was chosen secretary

Brooklyn Association Elects John D. White President for 1931

THE Furniture Warehousemen's Association of Brooklyn and Long Island, affiliated with the New York Furniture Warehousemen's Association, held its annual meeting and banquet on Dec. 16 and elected officers and directors as follows:

President, John D. White, president Chas. D. Strang, Inc., Brooklyn.

President emeritus, Harry W. Wastie, Long Island Storage Warehouse, Inc., Brooklyn.

First vice-president, Raymond V. Reilly, partner Peter F. Reilly's Sons, Brooklyn.

Second vice-president, Wilbur J. Whelen, secretary Atlantic Storage & Warehousing Corp., Brooklyn.

Treasurer, Harry A. Strang, treasurer William H. Strang Warehouses, Inc., Brooklyn.

Secretary, Walter W. Weekes, secretary Harragan's Storage Warehouses, Inc., Brooklyn.

Directors for two years, C. N. Jenkins, Long Island Storage Warehouses, Inc., Brooklyn, and M. Charles, Holden Warehouse, Inc., Brooklyn. Directors for three years, Frederick G. Dieckmann, president Reliable Van & Storage Co., Inc., Brooklyn; George N. Winkler, secretary John Winkler's Sons, Inc., Far Rockaway, and J. Campbell, Frank M. Strang, Inc., Brooklyn.

Mr. Wastie, who was the 1930 president until his recent resignation, was toastmaster at the banquet and introduced Thomas F. Murray, president of the New York F.W.A.; J. H. Coughlin, president-elect of the New York F.W.A., and Mr. White, the newly-elected president of the Brooklyn and Long Island unit

Cincinnati Locals Choose Keller and Taylor Presidents

THE Furniture and Piano Movers' Association of Cincinnati at its annual meeting, in December, elected as its president L. C. Keller, president of the Star Moving & Storage Co. Albert G. Kipp, president of the Cincinnati Moving Co., was chosen vice-president, and the treasurer elected is Henry Weil, Jr., vice-president of the Weil Fireproof Warehouse.

Harry B. Rubey continues as executive secretary of the Furniture and Piano Movers' organization, and of the Cincinnati Team and Motor Truck Owners' Association, which also held its annual meeting in December.

J. Rex Taylor, proprietor of the J. Rex Taylor Drayage Co., was elected president of the team and truck organization. Louis J. Hughes, manager of Peter Hughes Express, was chosen vice-president. Fred Fuller of the Fred Fuller Cartage Co. was elected treasurer.

How Many Public Warehouses Are There?

THIS question is asked us many times each year and while we do not claim to be letter perfect in the following information, we believe this tabulated list offers the nearest to what can be considered complete information on the subject published anywhere.

It is a digest of the warehouses listed in this, the 1931 Annual Warehouse Directory issue and in further explanation it should be understood that where more than one warehouse is operated by a single company the number of warehouses are counted rather than the company being considered a single unit. We believe this manner of computing the size of the industry is far more accurate than by any other means. Therefore, where an organization operates say three distinct warehousing units it is counted in this tabulation as three, not one. These figures total 4423 warehouses while there are 3449 listings in this issue of the directory.

MOTOR FREIGHT

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

FOR the busy executive of a warehousing business who is keen to keep abreast of the times there are several important new things to think about in the field of motor freight. Developments are following one another at a rapid pace, and all have a distinct bearing on the cost and opportunities of handling the hauling requirements of any warehouse business, regardless of its size. There are many advancements being made on the manufacturers' side of the industry, and some of these will be discussed in this department, which is conducted

THIS MONTH

Today's Big Questions in Successful Warehouse Truck Use

"I AM going to save $250,000 this year on our truck operations." For this interesting statement, which furnishes an appropriate "lead" to the current month's article, we are indebted to George T. Hook, who, in a recent paper, quotes a timely little story.

The statement is not the beginning of a bed-time tale, although admittedly it smacks of fiction when associated with 1930. It is an actual declaration which the superintendent of a large fleet in New York City made to his superiors at the beginning of the recent year.

Naturally his superiors were skeptical. They probably even suspected that stock market operations had unbalanced both his bank account and his mind. But he assured them he was serious and that his plans for saving a quarter of a million dollars in an unhealthy business year were mapped out.

This man, it seems, went right ahead with his plans. and in the first five months of this year his savings amounted to $110,000.

"Certainly I'm going to save the $250,000 this year," he declared with vehemence when we asked him if he would save the balance of his promised amount during the remaining months. "I have the entire thing figured out right here"—and he opened a desk drawer and pulled out a sheet of type-covered paper.

"But $250,000," we can hear incredulous readers protesting. "That's a lot of money. How can he save that much in one year?"

Frankly, we don't know all the details. But we do know that replacement of chassis and body equipment, rerouting, and changes in delivery methods are the main factors in the fabulous economy. This may lead to suspicions that the fleet operation must have been sloppily organized and handled in order to make a saving of $250,000 possible. It happens, however, that for quite a number of years this has been one of the most scientifically operated fleets in the country.

NO matter whether the number of trucks used is large or small—even though there may be only one or a very few trucks in the warehouse owner's fleet—there is an important point in this little story.

The point is that not only is there need for scientific operation, but recognition of the fact that scientific operation can be improved by taking advantage of the latest developments of a progressive industry. A fleet that was scientifically operated five years ago can make no claim to such excellence today if it has not kept abreast of improvements in design and in operating methods. The tractors, trailers, high-speed engines, six-wheelers, special bodies, lighter bodies, balloon tires, door-to-door delivery vehicles and such, that have been developed in recent years, and the many things that are certain to be the products of future progress in the truck industry, must enter into the calculations of every operator.

It does not mean that the wise executive will advocate adding new equipment the moment it comes on the market. If he is operating scientifically he will determine on the basis of cold facts whether over a period of time it would save him money, or cost him money, to put in the new equipment. If a saving is indicated, scientific operation demands that the equipment change be made.

But in order to make an accurate appraisal of new equipment it is essential that the operator find out the facts. For that reason he owes it to himself and his firm not only to keep posted on new developments by reading but also to welcome truck and truck equipment salesmen and to draw out of them every bit of information that he desires. And he'll never know whether a salesman has information of value to him unless he hears his story and questions him.

Acquisition of knowledge and application of that knowledge are two requisites in an efficient executive. He must keep abreast of all developments by acquiring full knowledge of them and by keeping his truck operation scientifically up-to-date by applying that knowledge.

Checking Up

IN going about a review of an operating system certain important angles deserve first consideration. It is true that probably 80 per cent of delivery cost depends on the way in which the trucks are used in day-to-day operation. The rest is a matter of fixed overhead with which the customary efforts toward improvement cannot usually be made.

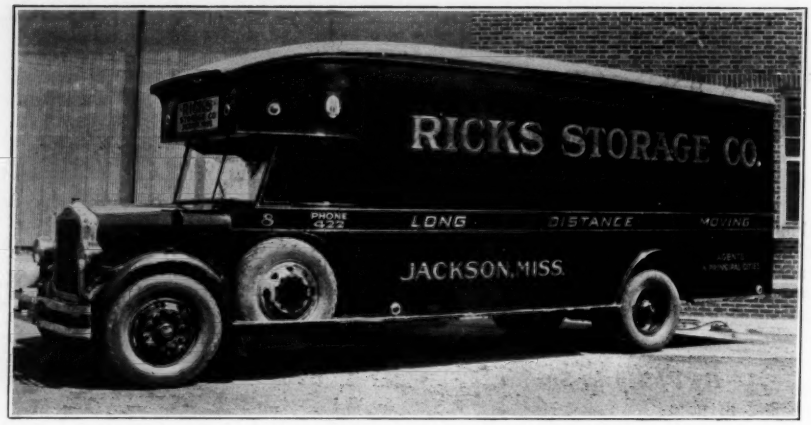
A truck which shows a unit cost of eight cents per average delivery in one business may show double or three times that figure in another business even though the delivery requirements of both might be the same.

Close observation reveals that there are surprisingly broad differences in the unit costs of pick-up and deliveries, varying widely in the experience of one concern compared with another. The reasons for this difference are interesting when studied, and such a study offers suggestions which can be applied profitably to each individual operator's business.

In a series of interviews which the writer had with various executives, it was noticeable that there was a tendency among many to look for improvements in a narrow, haphazard way.

Today's Questions

IT may be said that the principal factors of a motor delivery system may be divided into eight points. We will express them in the form of questions:



This full de luxe aluminum van body was built for the Ricks Storage Co., Jackson, Miss., by the Gerstenslager Co., Wooster, Ohio. Dimensions are 18 feet long, inside; 8 feet wide, overall; and 7 feet high, at lowest point inside. On left side of cab a special tire carrier was built in, utilizing space ordinarily used for left cab door. Heat-treated aluminum alloy was usel for all cross members, standards and rafters, and also for the panelling. The body is mounted on a White Model 65 A, bus chassis type, with 212-inch wheelbase. It is painted maroon with a green streamline and lettered in gold leaf

First, are the vehicles used well adapted to the work they are called upon to perform, with respect to modern types, size and quality?

Second, is the truck body equipment well coordinated with conditions met in unloading and loading to insure a minimum of idle time?

Third, are routes well planned and arranged to keep each vehicle on the road as much as possible in the course of the day?

Fourth, are route requirements evenly distributed over the week, and are seasonal and rush-period requirements handled in a way that will reduce idle time of the vehicles in dull periods to the extent possible?

Fifth, are gasoline vehicles used only on routes for which they are qualified to do the work more economically than electrics?

Sixth, are cost records properly kept to detect (a) incapable drivers; (b) inferior vehicles, tires, fuel, etc.; and (c) waste in routing?

Seventh, are drivers well informed on vehicle operation and care?

Eighth, is the maintenance plan systematic, to insure the very minimum of cost for repair and overhauling?

Each of these questions represents an opportunity to cut route costs or improve the service. They cover the fundamentals of successful route operation. Only if the individual executive can answer them all in the affirmative, after careful thought, can he be assured that his system is not working under a severe handicap.

A review of the experience of various companies with motor vehicle types will reveal one fact of tremendous importance—that a wise or unwise choice in choosing a particular kind of vehicle will make or break the success of the system.

Selecting a vehicle of inadequate size without allowing for later expansion often results in the expensive practice of overloading. A small percentage of overload with a high quality vehicle is often justifiable. But too many operators insist on learning through bitter experience that with motor vehicles, as with other things, the proverbial "something for nothing" is not obtainable. Investigation shows that a large percentage of the higher unit costs can be traced to heavy repair bills; and these, in turn, to the practice of overloading.

Provide for Expansion

AS with the purchase of any other equipment which is to become a permanent part of the business, it is a good policy to look ahead and provide for expanding needs.

This is an important consideration in choosing vehicles of one size or another. When routes become longer and cover more territory it frequently happens that the vehicles are found to be too small and must be sold at a loss and replaced by larger ones. When this occurs, the tendency is to break up the routes and put on more vehicles, still of the small size—usually meaning a wasteful duplication of the ground covered by two or more cars.

A point which seems obvious, yet which has a wealth of meaning, is that it is cheaper to maintain one long route with one large truck than two short routes with two small trucks, provided the former does not involve wasted carrying-capacity when the truck leaves the platform.

Another method to be considered is that of installing one large truck to haul a big load to a certain outside point where this truck is met by two or more smaller trucks and the load transferred, to be delivered by the smaller trucks over their respective routes.

But whatever plan is adopted, it is important to select the vehicles with a view not only to present requirements but to those of future expansion as well.

The selection of a motor vehicle, to be well based, must be the result of a careful analysis of past performances in the purchaser's own particular line of business.

There are numerous differences among makes of trucks. Where one may make surprising records in a given line of business it may fall down completely when assigned to the tasks of another. The importance of careful selection will be best appreciated when it is considered that depreciation and interest on investment, as well as many of the maintenance and running charges, are dependent on this. Probably as high as 75 per cent of the total operating expenses are influenced by the amount of care exercised in selecting the vehicle.

There are three principal types of gasoline trucks—commonly called the shaft drive, the chain drive, and the double reduction. Each has particular advantages for certain well defined purposes. No installation should be made without a full consideration of each of these types. Factors of dependability, power, hill-climbing ability, longevity, operating economy, etc., enter into consideration. An additional consideration, as far as vehicle type is concerned, is that of the wheelbase.

Trucks are obtainable with various sizes of wheelbase. Often a short wheelbase will add to loading and unloading efficiency by permitting quick and easy manipulation of the truck in narrow or congested places. On the other hand there are advantages to be gained from a long wheelbase and even distribution of load.

The selection of the proper gear ratio is most important in the case of gasoline trucks. Good hard roads with only normal grades require gearing which does not sacrifice speed for unnecessary power. Conditions which present short stretches of heavy going for an infrequent steep grade should have gearing which provides a maximum high-gear speed with lower and reverse gears, giving abnormal pulling power. Road conditions, which do not warrant a high speed, or a hilly country having good roads, require a gear ratio giving a lower high-gear speed than normal. Special gearing should be specified where extreme conditions are encountered.

So far as body types are concerned, it will suffice to say here that there is a body type to suit every requirement perfectly. It may be necessary to have such a body made to order, yet the extra cost involved will invariably be made up for in the saving in the vehicle's time and that of the driver. The choosing of body types has been found to present a substantial opportunity for economy, in the experience of a large number of operators.

Routing

NOW, as so large a proportion of the total delivery cost lies in the item of interest on investment, insurance, garage cost and drivers' salaries, it can be seen that much of the difference in the cost for one company as compared with that of another is due to the effectiveness of the routing plan.

Many operators have reported that by careful routing they have been able to reduce the amount of equipment required, thus cutting down on drivers' wages and the other important items already mentioned. In addition, many economies can be gained by routing the trucks over the best possible roads as well as over shortest distances, saving both time and wear and tear on the vehicle.

The waste so often found in idle-equipment time may, in many cases, be the result of installing too many vehicles. Of course one of the principal problems of route operation is that of maintaining an adequate number of vehicles to meet peak requirements and yet have as few trucks as possible idle when the demand for vehicles is low. The ways for doing this can be learned from experience, and for this reason it is merely mentioned here as an item of importance, to be considered in an analysis for reducing costs.

Standardizing

IMPORTANT advantages have been found to lie in standardizing as far as possible on the vehicles used. Once having determined the make of vehicle which proves to be the best investment, the practice of concentrating on this make is extremely advisable. Mechanics become accustomed to working on the one type, and so adjustments and repairs may be made more quickly and economically.

Parts may be kept on hand for immediate use, thus avoiding the necessity of keeping the truck idle until such parts can be obtained. Many operators go even further than this by keeping complete units for the truck on hand so that, for example, a motor needing repair can be taken out of the car overnight and a substitute motor put in, thus reducing the vehicle's idle time to the minimum. There is also the further advantage to be gained by standardizing the loading facilities and the motor trucks to the best advantage in relation to each other.

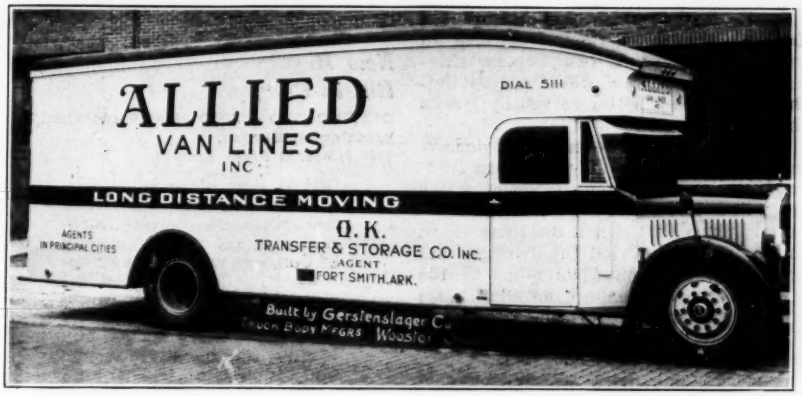
When the fleet of cars is large enough to justify the capital investment, it has been found that a worthwhile economy in running expenses can be effected by establishing a repair shop exclusively for the company's own fleet. The advantages of this apply in various ways. Dependence on a public garage or a service station is satisfactory only in one respect. It is a place where work may be done. But these stations and garages are not able to repair a vehicle and get it back to the owner in quick time. Many of the larger firms report that they have found it pays to provide a repair shop equipped with adequate tools, placing it in the charge of a reliable mechanic.

Trucking Decision in California Case

INDICATING that the California State Railroad Commission will not tolerate operation by certified truck operators of any service other than the service authorized, the Commission on Nov. 28 revoked the operating rights granted L. A. Thornewill, who conducted a service between San Francisco and Santa Cruz.

The Commission ordered that Mr. Thornewill cease all trucking operations and "all common carrier auto trucking service between San Francisco and Santa Cruz unless and until he shall have obtained a certificate of public convenience and necessity from the Railroad Commission." The text of the decision stated that the applicant frankly admitted he was transporting goods beyond the scope of his certificates, some under contract and some not covered by any sort of agreement.

The license was revoked in spite of the fact that the defendant had publicly by means of newspaper advertisements notified that his service was not open to the public at large, inasmuch as the record of the hearing showed that he continued to accept general freight.



Piece of motor equipment introduced by the O. K. Transfer & Storage Co., Inc., Fort Smith, Ark. Body, dimensions, chassis, etc., are similar to those of the Ricks vehicle described on the previous page except that the tire carrier is on the right side of the cab, interior, while the body has been painted according to Allied Van Lines, Inc., specifications

Further I. C. C. Hearings in the Trucking Inquiry

MOTOR truck transportation has nothing to fear of railroad competition on short hauls, although railroads can maintain long haul business if they give service, according to J. W. Blood, secretary of the Southern Kansas Stage Lines Co., counsel for the Wichita Truck Owners' Association and a director of the Kansas Motor Bus Association, testifying at the second hearing, at Kansas City on Nov. 21, in the Interstate Commerce Commission's inquiry into coordinated rail and truck transportation. The first hearing, at St. Louis on Nov. 17, was summarized in last month's Distribution and Warehousing.

Appearing as a witness before Examiner Leo J. Flynn, Mr. Blood at Kansas City gave some pertinent facts and opinions. His testimony in brief was this:

The development of motor truck transportation has been due to the trend in merchandising which demands quick turnover. Where formerly the merchant bought dozens of an article and did not expect to turn them inside of a year, today he buys two or three and expects to turn them immediately. Consumers formerly did not need to go to the store more than once in 60 or 90 days, especially the farmer, then and now a predominant factor in the merchandising carried out in smaller towns.

The merchant demands his merchandise quickly. Railroads uniformly will not take freight after 4 p. m., with delivery after 8 the next morning. It is because the motor truck gets it after that time, and delivers it to him at his loading dock the next morning at an earlier hour, that the motor truck gets his business. Trucks have realigned jobbing territories, also.

Asked at what distance a railroad could begin competing with the truck, Mr. Blood answered between 250 and 300 miles. On a longer haul the railroad, with its freight cars that have a capacity of three ordinary trucks, can haul more cheaply.

Most truck lines, according to Mr. Blood, arrive at their rates by adding five cents to the railroad rates. Refrigeration and store door delivery make the truck service more valuable to the merchant, experience of the Southern Stage Lines had shown, and according to A. H. Hall, freight traffic manager, that business did not develop until the rates were lowered to the above figure.

Mr. Blood declared that regulation from Washington would be detrimental to motor truck transportation. The industry was so young that there was practically no basis whatever on which to fix rates, he said, while another difficulty was the local character of the trucking business. Mr. Blood did admit the need, however, of regulation in such things as billing, now a bad feature of the business. He further said that better regulation of contract carriers would do much for railroads and common carriers. He pointed out that taxes, varying in different States, were very high and any increase was likely to prove fatal to the truck business.

To the claim that truck freighting involved greater damage to goods, and was more inefficient, Mr. Hall replied with figures on his own company's experience, showing that loss claims were few and that total revenue paid for damages was small.

C. F. Real, traffic manager for the Topeka Chamber of Commerce, filed an exhibit from twenty-two Topeka shippers, the majority of whom agreed that they were being better served by trucks than by railroads.

E. D. Wilson, of the industrial department of the Kansas City Southern Railroad, testified that competition of motor truck lines had cut L. C. L. tonnage enormously since 1921, when the competition first was felt, and that the average haul had increased from 44.99 miles to 126 miles. L. C. L. tonnage from all stations on Mr. Wilson's line to Siloam Springs, Ark., in 1920 was approximately 61,000 tons. In 1928 it was 39,000 tons.

Under examination, Mr. Wilson said that motor truck companies had enabled many small jobbers in smaller outlying centers to secure the jobbing business formerly done in large part by Kansas City houses. The use of trucks was realigning and scattering jobbing centers, he testified.

"Is it desirable that there be Federal legislation providing for the supervision of the operations of motor buses and trucks?" was asked Mr. Wilson. Regulation of truck rates, with especial attention being given to the cost of truck freighting service, Mr. Wilson said, was desirable. State regulations, he said, were unsatisfactory, as contract carriers evaded them.

He said most of the L. C. L. taken by truck companies was taken by common carriers. Contract and owner-operated trucks were responsible for little of the competitive loss. The class of L. C. L. which freight truck companies secured was heavy unbulky freight that would give the largest payload with the least danger of damage.

Mr. Wilson said so far as he knew warehousemen are going into the truck business to a certain extent, and were distributing through common carrier truck lines which they owned or controlled. This, he said, accounted for some volume of L. C. L. freight his road had lost, particularly in the South.

Mr. Wilson was asked if he knew that the national warehousemen's associations were advising warehouse companies to get into the trucking business. He said that he did not know but he did know it was the policy of warehouses to absorb licensed truck lines as fast as possible, and that they had been doing this during the past year.

On the question of regulation it was pointed out that it would be impossible to regulate truck lines operating intracity or in the immediate vicinity of one city.

R. B. Campbell, president of the Arkansas Valley Interurban Railway, Wichita, introduced some interesting testimony when he told of his line's having added store-door delivery and refrigerator cars to avert loss of L. C. L. freight traffic.

Mr. Campbell pointed out that warehouses distributed carloads of merchandise over a wide territory at their own convenience. He cited the need of closer cooperation between State and Federal regulations, as truck companies, in order to evade regulations and fees, bought the merchandise they were to deliver, delivering it c.o.d. They then say they owned the merchandise and were therefore distributing on the same basis as trucks operated by private companies in hauling their own goods.

J. H. Tedrow, transportation commissioner for the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce, presented an exhibit showing the estimate of his department that the equivalent of 4000 to 5000 merchandise carloads of freight was shipped in and out of Kansas City monthly by truck. The Kansas City stockyards received 1,063,117 animals last year by motor truck. These trucks, owned largely by farmers or individuals in outlying districts, then solicited return loads from shippers and merchants. The amount of L. C. L. freight carried to destination by this method was probably very high, according to Mr. Tedrow.

At Dallas

AT the third hearing, in Dallas on Nov. 28-29, further demands for restriction of truck and bus use, through regulation and higher taxation, were made by seven representatives of railroads. Commissioner Ezra Brainerd presided.

Truck and bus representatives were present and prepared to testify, but after hearing the railroad evidence they declined to be witnesses, on the grounds that:

1. Railroads had shown extent of rail operation of bus and truck.
2. Railroads had shown value to public of bus and truck service.
3. Truck and bus representatives could not see any advantage of presenting statements at this hearing.
4. They would follow the procedure and testimony at other hearings and give statements at Washington next March, if deemed necessary.
5. The only thing to be gained by any statements at Dallas would be to show taxes paid, whereas the Commission had this data from its 1926 hearings and from other sources.

Among the witnesses at Dallas was Miss Helen Smith, who was secretary of the old L. C. Crutcher Warehouse Co., Kansas City, and who now is identified with the transport division of the Kansas Public Service Commission. She made a long statement showing the extent of rail, bus and truck operation in Kansas. She did not advance any ideas as to regulation.

P. J. Neff, assistant to the president of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, testified as to bus and truck competition. Expressing opinion that truck lines should be regulated by the I. C. C., he believed such Federal regulation should cover:

1. All property haulers.
2. Certificate of convenience should be required and granted only after I. C. C. hearing.
3. Financial responsibility of truck lines should be established and approved by the I. C. C.
4. I. C. C. should set rates.
5. Proper service should be prescribed and required.
6. Rail operation of trucks should be permitted and coordinated service supervised by the I. C. C.
7. Proper truck fees should be charged.

"Unless contract trucks can be regulated," Mr. Neff said, "truck competition can not be met by the rails, and contract and private truck lines will ruin the rail and regulated truck lines."

J. B. Payne, vice-president of the Texas & Pacific Railroad, which operates the Texas-Pacific Transport Co., claimed that his railroad was now getting big increases in freight which, without the transport company, would go to independent freight lines. He believed the railroads could legally operate trucks interstate.

At Atlanta

THE fourth hearing, scheduled for Dec. 3 in New Orleans, was cancelled for lack of testimony, and Examiners Flynn and Stephan moved on to Atlanta, where witnesses were examined on Dec. 8.

At Atlanta, truck witnesses refuted railroad charge that trucks were not paying heavy taxes for the privilege of using the highways in Georgia.

E. M. Cunningham, counsel for the Central Railway of Georgia, alleged unfair discrimination against the railroads because they had to pay for and maintain their rights of way while trucks and buses use highways provided for them by the public. He said that in 1930, 890 trucks operating under certificates from the Georgia Public Service Commission had paid only $15,000 to the Commission and that this represented all the taxes they paid. He asked for higher taxes and urged that all trucks operated by private concerns or in public service be required to operate only over regular routes and upon proof of public convenience and necessity.

New Regulation Bill in Congress

DISTRIBUTION AND WAREHOUSING'S Washington Bureau, 1163 National Press Building.

THE first piece of legislation affecting the truck transportation business introduced in the present session of Congress was a bill by Representative James V. McClintic, Oklahoma, which would give to the States the right to regulate the size, speed, and license fee of all intrastate and interstate trucks and busses engaged in public business with its citizens.

This measure, which was introduced on the opening day of the session, was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House for consideration.

—Robert C. McClellan.

L. C. Spring, general manager of the Georgia Highway Express, Inc., said his company, operating 14 trucks and 7 trailers, alone paid more than $8,000 in privilege fees and special motor taxes for the right to carry freight in Georgia. This amounted to 16 per cent of his company's revenues, he testified.

Senate Again Refuses to Enact Parker Bill for Bus Regulation

DISTRIBUTION AND WAREHOUSING'S
1163 National Press Building.

FOR the second time the United States Senate has declined to pass the so-called Parker Bill for the regulation of motor vehicles engaged in interstate passenger traffic. On Dec. 4, on the motion of Senator Ellison D. Smith, South Carolina, the measure was recommitted to the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce. Senate leaders now express a formidable doubt as to the likelihood of getting the bill to a vote this session. The vote to recommit stood 51 in favor and 29 against, with 16 not voting.

Senator James Couzens of Michigan, chairman of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, and in charge of the bill, vigorously protested against the bill again being returned to his committee. Just before the vote was taken, he said:

"I do not charge anyone with bad faith, but if there is any desire to get legislation at this session of Congress, the questions which have been discussed on the floor of the Senate can be determined in conference and presented to the Senate in the conference report. There is no more reason for recommitting the bill for consideration the second time than there is to kill the bill entirely. If it is the desire to kill the bill, let us vote it down. There is absolutely no reason for recommittal."

While it is stated that further hearings on the mesaure may be held after the holiday recess by the Senate Committee, at least one Senator, Clarence C. Dill, Washington, has said that the measure will not pass as long as it contains the provisions requiring bus lines to obtain certificates of public nenecessity and conveniences. Senator Dill is by no means alone in his opposition to this feature of the bill. As it is an easy matter for a few Senators to filibuster against a measure in a short session, the Dill statement is accepted as something more than an idle threat.

Trucks

One significant feature of the debate in the Senate was the evidence of sentiment in favor of including motor trucks in any regulative legislation dealing with motor vehicles in interstate traffic. The first issue raised when the Senate began consideration of the bill was the motor truck issue. Senator William H. King, Utah, asked for a statement of the reasons for excluding motor trucks. In explanation, Senator Couzens said:

"The committee at various times during the past few years has had under consideration the question of regulating trucks engaged in handling interstate business. It developed in the hearings, which were not had recently but two or three years ago, that the trucks were mostly engaged in contract business; in other words, they were not common carriers. All the bill attempts to do is to regulate vehicles which are engaged in interstate business as common carriers. Most of the truck business is contract business and therefore does not come under the jurisdiction applicable to common carriers.

"Following the hearings some years ago on that phase of regulating motor vehicles the motor bus people got together among themselves and requested legislation for the regulation of passenger buses. The truck people did not join them because they were such a small factor as common carriers. They were mostly all engaged in contract business. The committees in the House and in the Senate decided that as long as we could not bring in the few truck people engaged as common carriers we would confine ourselves to the regulation of motor buses or vehicles carrying passengers."

Freight Cartage

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Arkansas, minority leader in the Senate, during the debate, said: "I think every Senator knows that under present conditions there is quite as much necessity, if not a greater necessity, for the regulation of the trucks that are being operated in the carriage of freight. Anyone who takes a trip by automobile through several States will see lines of freight buses being operated. In numerous instances they carry loads that tax the capacity of the bridges.

"While we are dealing with this subject it is a mistake not to include trucks used in hauling or carriage of freight. I merely make that statement to the Senator with a view to ascertaining whether, in his opinion, it is practicable to deal with the question in this bill."

In replying Senator Couzens said: "I hardly think so, because no hearings have been held and no one has been given an opportunity to be heard with respect to the regulation of trucks engaged in carrying freight. Furthermore, I think the question of the weight of loads is one subject to regulation by the States if the States desire to regulate it. We have not attempted in any way to usurp the police powers of any State in this bill. Nothing has been presented to the committee, but the committee is perfectly willing to go ahead and consider any legislation which may be proposed for the regulation of motor trucks engaged in the carrying of freight. I think, however, that would be a subject which could not be dealt with in this particular bill by way of amendment, because, as I have said, no hearings have been held and no consideration has been given to the question of the regulation of the carriage of freight by trucks in interstate commerce."

"What the Senator from Arkansas has said about the necessity for some sort of regulation of interstate freight buses is undoubtedly correct," Senator Barkley, Kentucky, said. Senator Robert B. Howell, Nebraska, speaking in opposition to the bill on the ground that it eliminated competition, warned that a bill applicable to motor trucks would be introduced in the House and that the Senate faced the prospect of having to consider such a measure in the near future. He made the point that whatever precedents were established in passing a bill applicable to motor buses would have to be applied to trucks, and that the Senate ought not to vote to kill off competition in either passenger or freight field.

The rocks of opposition which blocked the legislative channel in the Senate, however, were principally two—opposition to the requirements of a certificate of public necessity and convenience, and the proposed restrictions on rail carriers buying, merging, or acquiring control of bus lines already established and operating. The bill placed no restrictions on rail carriers in establishing bus lines over routes not served by buses or even in competition with other bus lines. It did prohibit, however, the rail carrier from buying or acquiring control of a line already established. Senator Glenn, Illinois, made a vigorous fight to liberalize this provision but the Senate voted down his proposal.

Senator Couzens has not indicated when his committee may resume consideration of the bus bill and will not do so until after the holiday recess.

Storage Executives in Safety Council Group

THE National Safety Council, Chicago, has announced the new officers of its refrigeration section, and among them, as vice-chairman, is W. M. O'Keefe, Chicago, executive secretary of the cold storage division of the American Warehousemen's Association.

Gardner Poole, Boston, a past general president of the A. W. A., and J. F. Nickerson, Chicago, general secretary of the American Institute of Refrigeration, together with Mr. O'Keefe, are members of section's executive committee.

Further Hearings to Be Held on McDuffie Bill Before Congress

DISTRIBUTION AND WAREHOUSING'S Washington Bureau, 1163 National Press Building.

WHILE a forecast of favorable action in this short session of Congress would be indulging in unwarranted optimism, sentiment in favor of the McDuffie bill, in which warehousing if directly interested, has increased materially since the last Congress adjourned. This probably is due to the fact that printed copies of the hearings on this measure before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce were in circulation during the summer and members have had an opportunity to inform themselves as to the real issue in the proposed legislation.

The McDuffie bill would amend the Interstate Commerce Act so as to require separate valuation of terminal facilities and require rates for service that would produce a reasonable return on these investments. The House committee held hearings on the bill April 22 and 23 at which time the proponents presented their evidence and arguments. (See Distribution and Warehousing for June, 1930, page 28.) Opportunity for the opposition to the measure to be heard will be given but the House committee has not indiated a date for such hearings. It is not likely to announce a hearing date until Congress reconvenes after the holiday recess.

Representative John McDuffie, Alabama, author of the bill, is watching the legislative situation and will improve any opportunity offering to further consideration of the measure. However, conditions in a short session always are unfavorable to the consideration of legislation of this character and it is doubtful if the bill can be advanced beyond the hearings stage.

It is apparent that Charles E. Cotterill of Atlanta, representing the American Warehousemen's Association, made a favorable impression with his statement of the case before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. As a result of his argument, many members of Congress now understand that present practices of many rail carriers, in handling storage at port terminals, are but forms of rebating.

The Cotterill statement frequently is referred to here, and especially that part of it in which he presents the picture of just what is going on in the port terminals.

"Direct rebating has substantially disappeared; but the intensity of present competition between railroads has given rise to new forms of what many think are rebates, although as to some of them the law is not entirely plain," according to the Cotterill statement to the Committee. "The underlying evils of those concessions, however, are the same, whether they be legal or illegal, because in any event and in whatever form they appear, they have the effect of draining the revenues of the railroads on particular traffic and causing the general body of other traffic to make up the deficiency.

"One of the most aggravated conditions of that character, and one which is now virtually nation-wide in scope, and certainly is rapidly extending, and will extend unless interrupted by this committee, has to do with the manner in which the railroads are utilizing their distinctive port terminals in accommodating water-borne commerce.

"Not by any means have the railroads in this country undertaken to absorb the task of supplying the principal part of our port terminal facilities. On the contrary, today they supply but a comparatively small percentage of the whole; and, strictly speaking, it may be doubted whether it would be any part of the strict common-carrier duty of railroads thus to engage in the general business of providing port terminal facilities. I think the concession must be made that they have a right to provide themselves with such facilities as are essential and incidental to their operation of railroads. But there is much of this imported and exported and coastwise traffic which never reaches railroad service at all; that is, line-haul service.

"The members of the American Warehousemen's Association having investments at the port cities, beginning in Maine and terminating in New Orleans, have investments which, we have computed, aggregate approximately $450,000,000. To that sum should be added the additional investments of the governmental institutions, both the States and the municipalities. I venture to say that at this time, and up to date, the railroad investment in those port terminals facilities would be found to amount to less than $150,000,000 to $175,000,000.

"The railroad has no interest in the utilization and expansion of its own facilities, viewed merely as terminal operations. Their interest has to do alone with the prospect of securing a line-haul movement of the freight, and the nature of these facilities which have to be provided by some agency at the ports, in the main consist of docks, piers, wharves, berthing depths, and warehouses, with a certain amount of rail on

Less Meat but More Eggs in Cold Storage

DISTRIBUTION AND WAREHOUSING'S Washington Bureau, 1163 National Press Building.

COLD STORAGE warehouses on the first of December were holding less meat, meat products, dairy products and poultry than they were a year before, but they had more eggs and fruits of various kinds, according to figures announced on Dec. 13 by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Decreases were shown in holdings of creamery butter, which aggregated 87,969,000 pounds this year, as compared with 111,650,000 pounds on Dec. 1 of last year; frozen poultry, 82,929,000 pounds, against 115,876,000 pounds a year ago; frozen and cured meats, 565,372,000 pounds, against 661,011,000 pounds; and lard, 31,189,000 pounds, compared with 68,517,000 pounds.

Increases were reported for case eggs, 4,150,000 cases against 2,631,000 cases a year ago; boxed apples, with 21,204,000 boxes against 15,235,000 last year; apples in bushel baskets, 7,010,000 baskets against 6,613,000; boxed pears, 2,340,000 against 1,495,000; pears in bushel baskets, 83,000 baskets against 39,000 baskets; and frozen and preserved fruits, 76,559,000 pounds against 57,860,000 pounds.

Receivership Action Against Milwaukee Co.

RECEIVERSHIP for the Milwaukee Warehouse Co., So. Water and Park Streets, Milwaukee, was asked in the Circuit Court in Milwaukee on Dec. 11 by the Foreman State Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago.

Foreclosure and appointment of a receiver were petitioned on the claim that the warehouse firm had defaulted on a payment of interest since last June on a $550,000 bond interest made in 1926 and for which the company's holdings were declared to have been pledged as security.

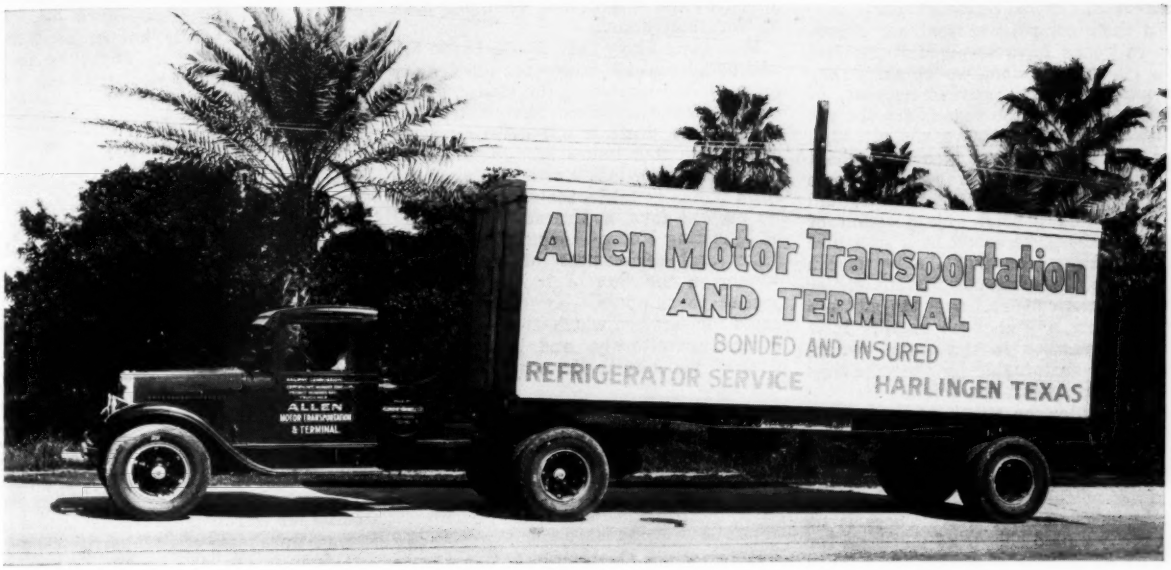
Columbia's Business

How L. Wade Childress, president of the Columbia Terminals Co., St. Louis, developed coordination of the city's freight haulage in cooperation with the railroads is described in an interesting article by Thomas W. Parry, Jr., published in the Nov. 15 issue of Forbes Magazine.

This International Hauls Meat 330 Miles for the Southernmost Town in Texas



THE transportation of 10 tons of fresh meat twice each week from Laredo to Brownsville, Texas, is the important job assigned to this new International Model A-5 Speed Truck and semi-trailer. It went into service early in September for the Allen Motor Transportation and Terminal, of Harlingen, Texas. It covers 1,320 miles every week, averaging between 6½ and 7 miles per gallon of gasoline, and a change of oil once a week.

It is necessary to have a dependable truck on this route because of the spoilage hazard entailed in such a hot climate. The temperature must be held below 38 degrees to insure freshness. The body is insulated with two-inch cork and there are ice bunkers in the front and rear as in a refrigerator car. Deliveries must be on time to keep the loads as fresh as possible.

The first delivery is made to markets at Edinburg, 229 miles from Laredo. This long jump is made in less than eight hours. There are concrete roads but they go through very hilly country. From Edinburg, the route of this International continues on to Brownsville, 101 miles to the south.

The performance of this truck is a good example of what you can expect of any International Truck. You get outstanding values in motor trucks when you buy Internationals. those facilities themselves, leading from the waterfront back into the interior terminal and classification yards.

"In their competitive zeal our American railroads have involved themselves in a grave condition, we think. They are making no charges whatsoever, of any kind, against the vessels for the use of these facilities by the vessels, although it is the maritime practice throughout the world for vessels always to pay some charges for the use of port terminal facilities; and beyond any question of serious doubt there would be a structure of such charges against the vessels in this country were it not for the choice of the American railroads to abstain from making any charges at all. It is a clear concession to the vessel owners that is not sustainable by the maritime practice throughout the world.

"Secondly, at the North Atlantic ports the railroads make no separate charges whatsoever against the traffic which utilizes the port facilities or for the handling of that traffic into and out of terminals—none whatever. There is no separately stated charge of any kind for that great volume of service and labor which the railroads supply."

Pointing out that no complaint was made against incidental transit storage privileges, Mr. Cotterill presented the major issue as follows:

"But there is a large percentage of the import commerce into this country which, by reason of its character and the economic methods of handling it, requires long-term storage; a matter of months, sometimes years. Now, it can be no proper part of the American railroad's duty to engage as such in the long-term storage business. It is not directly incidental to railroad service; and were we now arguing, either in Court or before the Legislatures which granted these railroad charters, there might be some ground for the contention that when the railroads go beyond this temporary storage that I speak of as 'free time,' and undertake to engage in full time and lengthy storage of freight, they are transcending their corporate powers as railroads.

"But that is not the point that we are making here. We do complain that the railroads have provided themselves with storage facilities having varying degrees of efficiency and safety, and that instead of charging for those facilities anything resembling normal commercial rates, adequate to pay the railroads even operating expenses, the record before the Interstate Commerce Commission demonstrates—and there is no disposition on the part of the railroads to question this—that they are virtually giving the storage free."

On the part of some members of Congress who for the first time have had their attention called to the discriminations in storage practices at the ports, considerable surprise is expressed that the Interstate Commerce Commission has not long since taken remedial action. The expression of this surprise clearly indicates a conviction that the practices are against good public policy and, perhaps, suggests that these members will be quite ready to support legislation aimed at the evil if and when it comes up for final action.

It is quite likely that the McDuffie bill will be amended in important particulars before it is reported to the House. Some of the House members have asked Mr. Cotterill to draft a bill covering some of the disputed issues brought out during the hearing last April. In whatever form it finally takes, the McDuffie bill in its present form has served the purpose of educating House members to the character and seriousness of a situation which, on the face of it, works an injustice to shippers who pay in freight rates for services which are bestowed on others gratuitously, and does a great deal of violence to the warehousing industry.

Winslow - Marcy - Buck Merger in Watertown, N. Y.

A CONSOLIDATION in Watertown, N. Y., involves the Winslow Trucking Co., Inc., a merchandise and household goods storage company established in 1912, and the Marcy-Buck Co. The new organization is known as Marcy-Buck & Winslow, Inc., engaging in the general warehouse and trucking business.

C. A. Winslow, who was president of the Winslow Trucking Co., Inc., and who is a past president of the New York State Warehousemen's Association, is vice-president, manager and operating executive of the new concern. R. M. Buck is president, Leon R. Gale is secretary, and Miss E. Bachman is treasurer.

Marcy-Buck & Winslow, Inc., has taken over the business formerly operated by H. E. Tyler, Inc., which, established half a century ago, had a merchandise and household goods warehouse at 438 Court Street, having 30,000 sq. ft. of floor space and served with a New York Central siding.

Under the consolidation the new organization now operates the Tyler warehouse for merchandise storage and a fireproof warehouse containing 25,000 sq. ft. of floor space, at 588 Morrison Street, the address of the old Winslow company, for storage of household goods.

The new firm's investment is given as $350,000.

Gibson Aids Plans to Make Oakland a Distribution Center

PLANS to establish at Oakland an inland waterway distribution base to handle shipments from manufacturers and jobbers throughout the country to California's expansive hinterland were announced on Dec. 9 by Ralph T. Fisher, president of Oakland's Board of Port Commissioners, after consummation of negotiations between the Commission and A. T. Gibson, who, president of the California Warehousemen's Association, is president of the Lawrence Warehouse Co., Oakland and San Francisco, and president of the Bay Cities Transportation Co.

"Savings of thousands of dollars in freight bills will be effected for shippers through shipping economics made possible by the creation of this new center of distribution," according to A. W. Vickery, assistant to Mr. Lawrence.

"Construction of a new $183,000 municipal pier and quay at the foot of Webster Street will be rushed to completion after the contracts are let next month. This will provide employment for 150 men during the period of construction and permanent employment for approximately 100 men when the new facility is put in operation.

"Ample rental for the use of the new pier and an anticipated increase in port dockage and tolls will amount to thousands of dollars a year."

The Bay Cities Transportation Co. is at present paying the city some $10,000 a year in dockage and tolls, and it is predicted that this amount will be greatly increased when the new facility is established. The Lawrence organization will pay the city an annual rental of about $10,000 for the new terminal.

Plans call for a substructure 285 feet long with a harbor face of 151 feet 9 inches. This will be of concrete, on reinforced concrete and concrete-jacketed piles. The transit shed superstructure will be 280 feet long and 93 feet 6 inches wide. This will be of steel frame with corrugated iron siding and a built-up warranted roof, and will have two adjustable ramps and one combination ramp and elevator. It is estimated that four months will be required to build the entire project.

Following completion of the pier, which is directly in front of the Lawrence Warehouse Co.'s Gibson Terminal, the operating forces of the Bay Cities organization will be increased to about 100 persons.

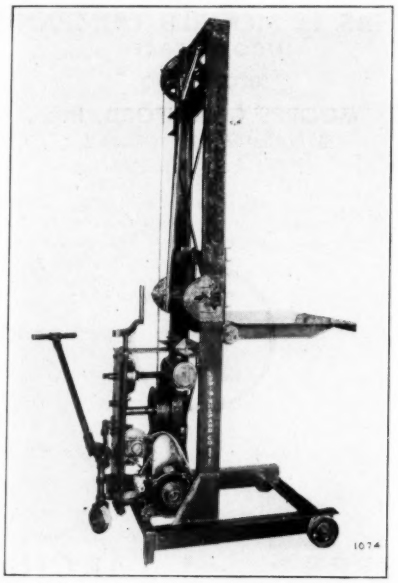
According to Mr. Gibson, the development will mean that Oakland will be on a rate parity with San Francisco for the handling of this particular type of cargo. "Furthermore," he states, "through the elimination of drayage charges incident to the handling of such cargo across the bay under the present system, Oakland will become the local point for practically all the freight destined for transshipment by water to California inland points." He adds:

"Not only is this true of inland waterway shipments, but it will mean also diversion of much other freight through Oakland, for our companies have working agreements with the California Transportation Co., the Sacramento Northern Railroad, the Sacramento-Auburn Freight Line, the California Navigation & Improvement Co., the Lincoln Truck Line, the San Francisco, Napa & Calistoga Railway, the Monticello Steamship Co., the Petaluma & Santa Rosa Railroad Co. and the Erikson Navigation Co.

"The location of the new pier in front of the Lawrence warehouse makes it possible for eastern manufacturers and jobbers to store large quantities of goods directly on the waterfront, in order that they may fill orders to retailers from the stocks maintained in the Oakland warehouse.

"The ultimate result of this new shipping arrangement will be that Oakland will become known throughout the nation as the central distribution point for the West, knowledge of which fact will undoubtedly cause eastern manufacturers to give serious consideration to this city as a desirable location, should they contemplate the establishment of branch plants on the Pacific Coast."

Lewis-Shepard Co. Announces Stacker



THE Lewis-Shepard Co., Boston, has added to its line of lifting equipment the combination gas engine driven and hand power stacker here illustrated.

Operated by a compact 2½ to 3 h.p. air-cooled four-cycle engine, this machine is designed to lift a 1000-pound load at the rate of 40 feet a minute.

Lowering the load is taken care of by means of a decelerator control which prevents undue speed.

The stacker is for tiering and storing material with economy of floor space and handling. The gasoline, it is pointed out by the manufacturers, removes restrictions imposed by electric lines.

Scobey Informs the Public in Newspaper Advertising and Text

WHEN the Scobey Fireproof Storage Co., San Antonio, completed recently its $1,000,000 storage plant, the Scobey firm and allied contributors to the project — builders, office outfitters, public utilities, contractors, manufacturers of light fixtures, bankers, refrigeration machine makers, linen suppliers, stationers, consulting engineers, insurance interests and others—cooperated in filling five complete pages of a Sunday real estate section of the San Antonio Light with advertising.

Naturally, the advertisements were accompanied by editorial stories which outlined the history and diversified service—merchandise, household goods and cold storage—of the Scobey company. The stories were liberally illustrated—photographs of the founder and president, Frank E. Scobey, and his executive staff; pictures of the building and motor equipment, and warehouse interior views.

"San Antonio," said the first paragraph of the "lead" text, "becomes headquarters for the storage industry of the entire Southwest and provides her great farming area with a direct marketing boost."

It was an unusual publicity stunt—more striking because put over in a poor business year.

SENATOR JOHN J. BLAINE, Wisconsin, has introduced a bill (S5108) which would authorize and direct the Comptroller General to prescribe a standard Government form of bill of lading to be used on all Government shipments. The following is the text of the bill:

"That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to prescribe a standard Government form of bill of lading, including the conditions thereof, for uniform use throughout the Government service in the shipment of public property, at rates not exceeding the rate legally chargeable on shipments moving under commercial bills of lading less applicable land-grant deductions. No conditions shall be a part of such bill of lading unless expressly prescribed therefor as herein authorized. Any carrier refusing any shipment of Government property made on a bill of lading prescribed by the Comptroller General shall be fined not exceeding $1,000 for each refusal to accept such shipment."

Yohe Reports Added Demand for Agricultural Storage Space

DISTRIBUTION AND WAREHOUSING'S
1163 National Press Building

LICENSED storage space for grain and cotton was in greater demand than ever before during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1930, according to the annual report of H. S. Yohe of the Division of Warehousing in the United States Department of Agriculture. There was a substantial increase, also, in licensed storage space for canned goods. In his report, Mr. Yohe says:

"The greatest growth under the warehouse Act during the past year was in the licensing of grain warehouses, the licensed storage capacity for grain having increased more than 50 per cent over the preceding year. On July 1 more applications were pending for the licensing of grain warehouses than at any one time in the past. This increased demand for the licensing of grain-storage facilities was due to several factors, the principal ones being the condition of the grain market and a keener appreciation on the part of credit institutions of the Federal warehouse receipt as collateral for loans.

"The licensed storage capacity for cotton also reached a new high mark, and indications were that additional warehouses for cotton would be licensed under the Act during the coming year.

"Moreover, an increase in the demand for licensed wool warehouses was noted, especially in producing sections.

"A substantial increase occurred also in the licensed storage space for canned goods. This has been brought about by the credit needs of canners and by a desire of many canners to avail themselves of the grading service afforded under the warehouse Act. Buyers of canned vegetables on a large scale have also played a part. In one instance a large chain store entered producing territory during the canning season and made its purchases of canned tomatoes on the basis of the grades for canned vegetables which were prepared under authority of the warehouse Act. This company specified that all canned tomatoes purchased must grade in line with those standards. To secure the grading service they directed that all goods should be shipped to Federally licensed warehouses, where they were inspected immediately upon arrival."

The Yohe report shows that regulations for the storing of cottonseed were amended so as to permit the storage of cottonseed having a moisture content not in excess of 12 per cent in warehouses equipped with cooling and conditioning apparatus approved by the Federal Division of Warehousing.

Regulations for the storage of nuts were amended and revised, and the storage of pecans, filberts and English or Persian walnuts was authorized.

Regulations for the storage of cold-pack fruit were amended to permit the storage of berries packed with one-tenth of 1 per cent of benzoate of soda by weight. Berries so packed are not required to be placed in sharp rooms, and they may be carried in storage at higher temperatures than the ordinary cold-pack berry covered in the regulations prior to the amendment.

Dietrich Writes Waterways Free Storage Goes On

own warehouses exclusively, gave shippers who could use the barge-rail route the opportunity to avoid the expense of storage and handling formerly paid the public warehousemen while the sugar was awaiting sale or consumption.

River Banks

The General says he would be glad to accord storage in transit or stoppage in transit in warehouses located on the river banks. Well, he will meet with some physical difficulty there, too. Does the General want to make ferry boats of his barges? His barges carry, say, 50 carloads when full. Suppose there are ten warehouses on the river banks of any one river town, each warehouse having consigned to it five carloads of the cargo on this barge. That would mean ten shiftings of the barge by some tug, with the corresponding incidental expense all around. The wharf in front of some particular warehouse may be occupied by some other barge, and the General's barge would have to wait its turn. The total expense is bound to be more than that incurred in loading box cars at the wharf and switching to some warehouse away from the river bank.

And so we reach the conclusion that all the valuable warehouse property two city blocks or ten city blocks behind the wharves would have to be abandoned, and new properties located on the river banks, so that the ideas of economy of the Government Barge Lines as to stoppage in transit or storing in transit could be met.

These river towns, including Memphis, are more than a hundred years old, and doing big business when they could only be reached by waterways and from the river banks. But commercial warehouses were invariably located away from the banks. Maybe these old-timers were wrong; maybe they knew nothing about the economic handling of freight; and maybe they never feared that old "Mississippi" might swallow up warehouses and river banks at one mouthful.

Summed up, the warehousemen see in this situation an effort by the Government's Barge Lines to get the routing, via their barges, of additional tonnage, by an offering to shippers and others of free storage and free handling, amounting to a substantial sum which these shippers and others formerly paid to the warehousemen for the same service.

And by making the through rate apply to goods only when stored in their own warehouses, the Government's Barge Lines are practically forcing the storage into their own premises and away from ours; yet the Government's Barge Lines officials attempt to say they are not in the warehouse business; that their storage activities do not hurt our business. In other words, they say in their unique classical language, that the "warehousemen are scratching when they don't itch."

Such treatment if accorded by an ordinary carrier, would be bad enough, but when handed out by a Governmentally owned and operated organization, becomes doubly deplorable, because the Government is charged with the duty of being fair to all its citizens, whether warehousemen or otherwise.

The warehousemen have not hesitated to bring complaints against any carrier, whether by rail or by water, when these carriers engaged in unfair, unreasonable, prejudicial, or discriminatory practices. Their legitimate interests, and the obligation which the members of our organization owe to one another for the good of all, are our guiding principle in such cases, and not the promptings of any carrier, whether railway or waterway.

Trade Association Business Figures —a Chamber Book

FOR the guidance of organization executives the Trade Association Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States has issued a handbook—"Trade Association Business Figures"—which deals in question and answer form with the more important aspects of this field of statistical activity.

The value of this type of trade information, the legal phases, the character of the statistics to be gathered and the use to be made of them, are some of the subjects covered.

Copies of the handbook may be obtained from the Trade Association Department.

Meanwhile the department's preliminary report of the survey on trade promotion shows that 297 associations have carried on trade promotional work; some 115 have been engaged in technical research; 109 in market research; 183 in publicity; 55 in advertising; 117 in field service, and 107 in systematized education. The following estimated expenditures were reported for 1930:

Technical Research	$874,431
Market Research.....	298,260
Publicity	696,453
Advertising	5,816,969
Field Service.....	1,225,510
Systematized Education...	415,862

Eighty-one associations report that their budget for 1930 was increased; 56 associations report a decreased budget, while 81 associations carried over the same budget. Twenty-one associations sent only the figures for their total budgets, the sum of these figures amounting to $4,686,180, which obviously is not included in the expenditures for individual items. In other words, 127 associations reported a total 1930 budget for trade promotion work of $9,327,485.

Yellow Vans Associated Organized to Exchange Household Goods Loads

YELLOW VANS ASSOCIATED, a non-profit corporation intended to promote interchange of business, has been organized by some of the Pacific Coast household goods warehouse companies. The company is incorporated and gives to each of its members the right to operate under the names Yellow Van & Storage Co., Yellow Van Shipping Co., and Yellow Van Motor Lines, and to use the slogan "Call a Yellow Van Anywhere." Affiliations are being established in all parts of the United States and Canada, thus establishing reciprocal relations with non-members on crated household goods shipments. There will be only one representative in any one city except Los Angeles.

The association has set up a lift van service used by all the members up and down the Pacific Coast. The lift van movements of the organization are largely by water.

Gatter Manager

Arthur J. Gatter, widely known in furniture warehousing, and who is a past president of the California Van & Storage Association, formerly the Pacific Coast Furniture Warehousemen's Association, is general manager of Yellow Vans Associated. On the board of directors are Merle E. Turner, secretary of the Los Angeles Warehouse Co., Los Angeles, and a past president of the California Warehousemen's Association; Jackson W. Kendall, president of the Crown Transfer & Storage Co., Pasadena; C. C. Lockett, partner in the Electric Transfer & Storage Co., Sacramento, and once president of the old Pacific Coast F. W. A.; Charles H. Samuels, secretary of the U. C. Express & Storage Co., Berkeley and Oakland; George W. Rodolph, president of the Pierce-Rodolph Storage Co., Inc., San Francisco, and Donald H. McDonald, secretary of the City Transfer & Storage Co., Seattle.

The foregoing firms, all members of the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association, belong to Yellow Vans Associated, as do Baker's Transfer & Storage Co., Bakersfield, Cal.; the Holmes Express & Storage Co., Fresno, and the San Jose Transfer & Storage Co., Inc., San Jose, Cal., also N. F. W. A. member companies.

Affiliate members include the Aetna Shipping Co., Oakland; the Baker & Stanton Transfer & Storage Co., Eureka, Cal.; the Beverly Hills Transfer & Storage Co., Beverly Hills, Cal.; the Griggs Van & Storage Co., Ltd., Santa Barbara; the Hill Bros. Transfer & Storage Co., Glendale, Cal.; the Shear Transfer & Storage Co., Santa Monica; the Ventura Transfer Co., Inc., Ventura, Cal.; the George L. Wright Transfer & Storage Co., Santa Ana, Cal., and the Zimmerman Bros. Transfer & Storage Co., Long Beach.

At the main office, and 4601 Shattuck Avenue, Oakland, a reciprocal ledger is kept in which is registered a complete record of what tonnage the members ship to other warehousemen, and what tonnage others have shipped to Y. V. A. members. Mr. Gatter explains:

"A copy of the transmittal letter showing weight of shipment is mailed to the main office, and the shipping company is immediately credited on the ledger with the weight, showing name of the consignee to whom shipment is sent, and consignee is charged with the weight of the shipment. When a member receives a shipment, the main office is notified in writing and immediately charges the member with the weight, showing from whom it was received and at the same time crediting the shipper accordingly.

"Twice a month the main office issues a bulletin to all members of the association showing the amount of tonnage the group owes each individual non-member, and vice versa. With this, set-up any non-member warehouseman who has sent tonnage to any one of our operators is assured that the tonnage sent will be reciprocated by not only the one to whom the shipment was consigned, but by any one of the members of Yellow Vans Associated, as soon as possible. In other words, the shipping warehouse knows that the Yellow Van group, as a whole, are interested in matching that tonnage.

"The association, at the present time, is enjoying splendid cooperation from a large number of non-members, and reciprocal relations are increasing materially from month to month. All our members belong to the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association, and our affiliated members are those who must join the National Association within two years. This is one of the basic conditions of membership in Yellow Vans Associated.

"Yellow Vans Associated is a non-profit corporation organized primarily to promote an interchange of business between a group of independent warehousemen who own and operate their own business and who are desirous of perpetuating and maintaining their own individuality, and also to enter into reciprocal relations with any household goods warehouse company that is anxious to match tonnage for tonnage.

"The board of directors is composed of men of integrity and of wide experience in the household goods warehouse industry, and whose business ethics are above reproach, consequently guaranteeing to our association members, as well as to the firms we do business with, a high standard of executive jurisdiction.

"The management assures those interested that their shipping and collection instructions will be followed out to the letter and that their interests will be safeguarded until a satisfactory completion of each transaction is consummated."

Proposal to Place Warehousing Under Federal Regulation

"The position of the industry today is the same as the position of the railroads prior to the enactment of the interstate commerce law, and at that time railroads all objected to its passage. Beneficent effects of that law to the carriers is illustrative of benefits accruing to the warehouse industry if supervised by the Federal Government along lines laid down in the proposed bill. The warehouse industry would then no longer be subjected to prevailing conditions."

While the executive committee of the cold storage division of the A. W. A. did not, at its meeting in October, endorse Mr. Mason's bill, it approved continued handling of the situation and authorized Mr. Mason to prepare a booklet setting forth the views of those with whom he had corresponded.

Milwaukee Companies Aid "Better Times"

AMONG two score Milwaukee business organizations which participated in a recent "Better Times Week" celebration were the United Fire Proof Warehouse Co. and the Paul Kortsch Storage Co., Inc.

All during the week the cooperating interests displayed products in the lobby of a theatre to which 10,000 free admissions were given at a Saturday midnight party. The United exhibited in the lobby an attractive painting of its warehouse, made specially for the occasion, and both warehouse firms received trailer mention on the theatre's screen throughout the week.

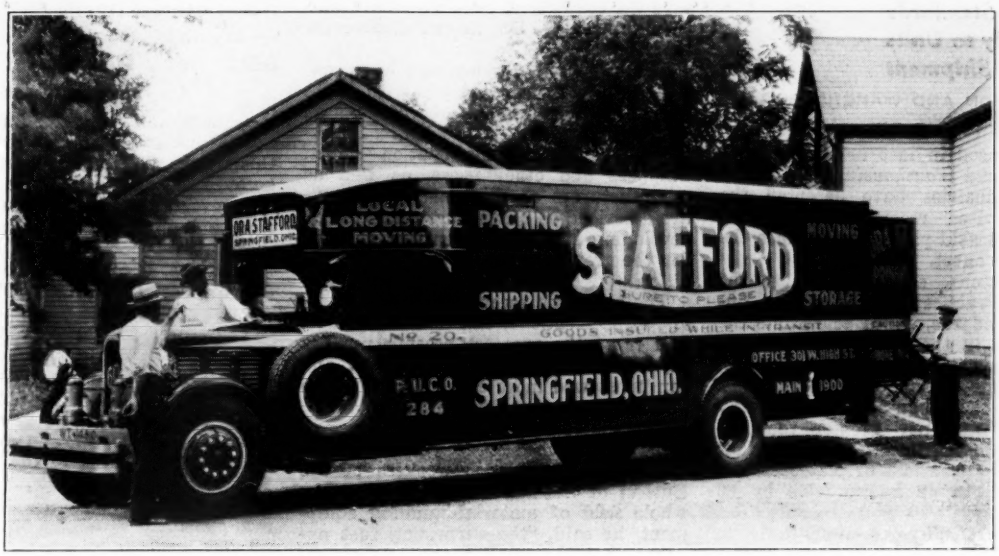
The movement was sponsored by the Upper East Advancement Association, of which Walter Schaus of the United and William Kortsch of the Kortsch company are members.

Pamphlets Received

"Freight Traffic Management," a circular issued by the American Freight Traffic Institute, 302 Graybar Building, New York City, outlining the Institute's standard traffic management course.

"Handbook on Insulation," of interest to cold storage warehousemen using refrigeration. This is the 1931 edition, issued by the United Cork Companies, Lyndhurst, N. J., which will distribute them without charge while they last. Touches on technical date, construction methods, insulation details, blue print specifications and manufacturer's catalog date.

"Merchandise Warehouses and Distribution Service," describing the storage and distribution services of the Griswold-Walker Bateman Co., 1525 Newberry Avenue, Chicago.



GRAMM DELIVERS THE GOODS

THERE IS A GRAMM TRUCK TO FIT EVERY TRANSPORTATION JOB THAT MOVING AND WAREHOUSEMEN ARE CALLED UPON TO DO.

No matter what the job, you can depend upon GRAMM VANS to deliver the goods on time and profitably, too, for they are noted for their low overhead cost per ton mile.

One of the outstanding SAFETY advantages of GRAMM VANS is their double-drop frames insuring LOW CENTER OF GRAVITY which eliminates sidesway, making possible extremely high speeds with perfect safety.

GRAMM puts plenty of power under the hood, another SAFETY FEATURE especially appreciated in present day traffic.

GRAMM VAN BODIES are the latest developments in high quality dust-proof bodies for long distance hauling.

New Skid Standards Apply Only to Units Used for Shipment

DISTRIBUTION AND WAREHOUSING'S
Washington Bureau,
1163 National Press Building

AS announced in last month's Distribution and Warehousing, enough interested industries have accepted the recently revised recommendations for standardized skid platforms to place the revisions in effect.

The revisions, as described by the Simplified Practice Division of the Bureau of Standards, which represents the Government in the simplification movement, recommend that the over-all dimensions for the platforms of No. 1 skids be not less than 32 inches wide by 54 inches long, nor greater than 33 inches wide by 54 inches long; and that the over-all dimensions of platforms for No. 2 skids be 42 inches wide by 60 inches long.

The recommendations apply only to skid platforms used in shipment, and it has been reiterated by the committee representing the affected industries that no attempt should be made at this time to establish standard over-all dimensions for skid platforms used for other purposes than shipment.

"Skid platform," the committee says, "used only in one establishment, may be of almost any length and width, depending on the particular commodities and handling processes for which they are used. It is believed, however, that the establishment of definite standards of length and width for skids used for shipment will tend to bring about the adoption of skids of the same sizes for inside handling, wherever these sizes are practicable."

The revisions recommend also that the clear height from the bottom of the runners or other supports to the underside of the platform be 8 inches or 12 inches, and that the minimum horizontal distance between the insides of the runners or other supports be 29 inches.

The original recommendations, displaced by the revisions, were adopted tentatively on Dec. 3, 1929. They provided for an over-all dimension for No. 1 platforms of 33 inches wide by 54 inches long, and for No. 2 platforms of 42 inches wide by 66 inches long. These did not receive the approval of a number of the original acceptors and others. Objections were made to a fixed width of 33 inches for the No. 1 skid, and also to the 66-inch length for the No. 2 skid, although general approval was given to the 54-inch length for the No. 1 skid and to the 43-inch width for the No. 2 skid.

Meeting Objections

The revised recommendations, it is claimed, should meet the objections, and it is pointed out that in the case of the No. 2 skid the reduction in platform area will permit higher loading without exceeding carrying capacity.

"A large number of shippers are already using skids of these dimensions," says the committee, "and they have also been approved by manufacturers of skids."

The proposed development of a national skid service, together with rapid growth of the practice of shipping on skids, has resulted in much greater interest in the standardization effort. Shippers and other users, as well as manufacturers of skids and equipment, are described as being more concerned in developing standard dimensions suitable for the greatest possible number of conditions.

The two sizes recommended in the revised specifications, the committee says, will carry the greatest possible number of different kinds of commodities, and can be stowed most economically in the various transportation units.

The subject of economy in the use of skids was touched on recently by one of the simplified practice workers of the Bureau of Standards. Considering the whole field of material-handling equipment, he said, "the surprising fact appears that the smaller and less expensive the equipment, the sooner it is likely to save its own cost in reduced handling costs." It was cited, also, that "reductions of as much as 80 per cent in handling cost have been made through the use of lift trucks and skid platforms, resulting in saving the cost of equipment in two to eight months."

Cary Shinkle Dies

Cary Shinkle, head of the Anderson, Ind., transfer and storage company bearing his name, died on Oct. 27. Two sons will carry on the business. Mr. Shinkle was a charter member of the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association and belonged also to the Motor Truck Association of Indiana. His warehouse company was established in 1890.

Warehouse Is Wanted in Mount Carmel, Pa.

FROM T. A. Serfas, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Mount Carmel, Pa., comes a letter to Distribution and Warehousing stating that there is "an excellent opportunity" for the establishment of a general merchandise and household goods warehouse.

"We have a population of more than 50,000 within five miles and no warehouse in this area," Mr. Serfas writes. "There are more than 100,000 people within ten miles, and approximately 500,000 within thirty-five miles.

"Some of the storage companies considering the establishment of branch warehouses might be glad of this information regarding Mount Carmel and every reasonable cooperation."

New Business No. 62 — Storing Automobiles for Dealers

why the local dealer should use the warehouse. All these reasons are multiplied this winter, as we have tried to outline, because dealers will have more cars than ever to store and finance and, at the same time, will have larger stocks than ordinary of trade-ins. Due to the regulations of the finance companies, too, the cost this winter will be higher than it has been.

Therefore, to the warehouseman is given a finer chance than he has had to bring to attention the ease and inexpensiveness of using the warehouse.

To get this business, two approaches seem to be necessary. First, the plan must be made clear to the local dealer, so that he will see where he benefits. Second, to the banker, for the same reason. Then to bring the two together is an easy matter.

Remember, in warehousing automobiles, always to insist that a separate receipt be issued for each car. Describe the car by serial and engine number, type of body, color, etc., but never have one receipt outstanding for more than one car, even if they are of a single model. Then, when delivery is made, a receipt is off the books—not some blue scratches on an outstanding receipt.

No matter how careful you are in checking off deliveries from the multiple receipt, some day the wrong numbers will be erased from a receipt and it will later show up, calling for a car you can not deliver. This rule is the secret of avoiding trouble in this type of storing. It is so simple, yet so important!

Hartford Firms Give Service and Space in Unemployment Crisis

TOWARD relief of conditions arising out of the unemployment situation in Hartford, Conn., and vicinity, two warehouse companies were timely contributors in response to an appeal from the local Community Chest in December.

Through the newspapers the Chest directors appealed for trucks and crews to distribute potatoes donated by Connecticut Valley growers to needy families. The first to respond from any industry was Edward G. Mooney, president of the Hartford Despatch and Warehouse Co., who promised vehicles and labor.

The Bill Brothers Co. volunteered to cart the potatoes from the farms to the city and to store them pending distribution to the families.

Family Album Tells Story of the Career of David L. Tilly

whose warehouses line the shore for many blocks along the Brooklyn waterfront, across the way from his office at 44 Whitehall Street, Manhattan. It also gives one a premonition of how many interesting things he has to say about warehousing in general.

Though he was neither English nor in need of work, Mr. Tilly drove a milk wagon on the streets of London when he was fourteen. Having been graduated from grammar school, he was sent to England on a pleasure trip with a bachelor friend of the family. The friend had some friends who operated a dairy in London and while the American visitors were there a strike was declared among the workers. Young Tilly volunteered to drive a milk wagon, this vehicle being a rather fantastic affair with a huge copper kettle in the middle. He stayed on the job a month. Then the driver, who had been suspected of watering the milk and purloining shillings, returned.

It was March when the two travelers got back to New York—too late for high school that year; so the amateur milk salesman decided to go into business. He had been slated to study law; instead, he stayed on at work, getting high school and college in evening courses during the ensuing years.

A very good way to do if a boy has to pay for his own education, he will tell you. Teaches him to get his money's worth and all that sort of thing.

While he was a student at New York University, Mr. Tilly worked in a bank, a paint establishment, a silk business, and, finally, Wall Street and a railroad office, the Erie, where he remained six years.

Any type of warehousing is intimately associated with railroads and steamships, so it was a logical step that brought him from transportation to his present occupation. Logical, too, that after twenty-eight years he should return to London last summer and recognize many of the same old streets in the section where he used to peddle milk.

Warehousing, in Mr. Tilly's opinion, is generally speaking a broader field and a bigger and better business than warehousemen, themselves, realize.

It is an industry which has not yet found itself, he says.

An industry whose members have been going out after what business exists, instead of creating more.

An industry whose members do not, as a rule, treat their business as a business because they are too busy getting goods for storage to think of building for the future.

As an example, he cites the automobile manufacturer who does not say to a prospective customer: "I will give you my make of car $50 cheaper than the other fellow," or "Buy from me because my father is a friend of your uncle." The automobile manufacturer creates an alluring new model with new features to arouse and appeal to the buying urge that is in all of us. That, in Mr. Tilly's opinion, is what the warehouse business needs—salesmanship, service, vision.

Then, too, he will tell you that warehousing is suffering from its own glamour. Just as every man believes he could paint a house as well as any painter, many think they could run a warehouse and so have been attracted to the industry on an unsound basis during the past few years. They are now finding that merely putting up a big building is not establishing a business which must be conducted on the proper foundation.

Which brings up again the assertion that warehousemen have not yet developed the possibilities of the industry as they should. Warehouses, Mr. Tilly asserts, should be a very definite aid to the credit system of the country.

No big establishment, he points out, should try to take care of its own merchandise. The public warehouses should do that—and would do it if business men all understood how much more elastic their credit is when they have warehouse receipts for merchandise to show at the bank instead of merely their own promises.

Warehousemen, Mr. Tilly says, should make the bankers of the country warehouse-minded.

Veterans in the industry will recognize that the development of the uniform warehouse receipt has been a major step toward making American business—particularly the banking fraternity—warehouse-minded. Mr. Tilly contributed from his experience to that movement consummated by warehousing in cooperation with the Department of Commerce, the American Bankers Association and shippers' organizations.

The building of a specimen tariff and the compiling of the industry's encyclopedia are achievements in which Mr. Tilly participated importantly also, as he has long been a member of the Central Bureau committee of the merchandise division of the American Warehousemen's Association. For the past year he has served on the executive committee of the merchandise division. He is vice-president of the Warehousemen's Association of the Port of New York.

St. Louis Terminal Takes 10-Year Lease

THE St. Louis Terminal Warehouse Co., whose storage building at 12th and Spruce, St. Louis, is to be razed to make way for the Mart building (described on page 47) has taken a lease on the six-story warehouse at the northwest corner of Main and Valentine Streets for a term of ten years, with annual rentals aggregating $100,000.

The new home has 60,000 square feet of floor space and is served with a switch from the Missouri Pacific. The company will remove as soon as alterations have been completed.

Larmer Plant Is Wrecked by Fire in Salem, Ore.

FIRE on Dec. 6 destroyed the three-story concrete warehouse owned by the Larmer Transfer & Storage Co., Salem, Oregon. An employee entering the building at 6.30 a. m. discovered the blaze, which spread so rapidly that the structure was soon wrecked, its walls collapsing.

Stored goods burned included 6,265 bales of hops which, worth about $187,000 at current prices, occupied a floor leased by the Oregon Electric Railway Co.; 1,000 tons of paper worth $150,000, property of the Oregon Pulp & Paper Co.; 40 drums of peppermint oil valued at $25,000; a speed boat worth $1,000; a collection of Indian curios; household effects of various persons, and one of the Larmer motor trucks.

Most of the contents were insured. The building, which stood at Liberty and High Streets, was worth $75,000 and was partly insured. Daniel A. Larmer, the owner, said he would continue the business.

The blaze was believed to have started in the furnace room.

Hill to Add to Toronto Plant

HILL THE MOVER, operating household goods warehouses in Hamilton, Toronto and London, Ont., has let a contract for the erection of an addition to the firm's plant at 369 Spadina Avenue, Toronto.

The new building, of fireproof construction, will be 80 by 40 feet, six stories and basement, and will give the company an overall of 44,300 square feet of floor space.

Port Rates Under Fire

Warehousemen and merchants in New York port held a conference at the office of the Collector of the Port on Dec. 15 to consider charges that rates for cartage, stowage and handling of import freight at the port are in excess of rates warranted by business conditions.

Among those representing the Warehousemen's Association of the Port of New York was its president, H. E. S. Wilson, president of the Campbell Stores, Hoboken, N. J.

St. Louis Co. Builds

The Central Transfer Co. is erecting a $50,000 warehouse and transfer building, 201 by 90 feet, at 14th and Mullanphy Streets, St. Louis. The structure will be completed some time in January and the firm will add twenty employees.

Would Add Eleven Inspectors Under the Warehouse Act

DISTRIBUTION AND WAREHOUSING'S Washington Bureau, 1163 National Press Building.

TO provide eleven more inspectors for the administration of the United States Warehouse Act, an added $55,000 is provided in the Agricultural Department appropriation bill. This further amount brings the total appropriation for the warehouse administration up to $312,200 for the fiscal year 1931-32.

Appearing before the House Appropriations Committee to explain the necessity for the increased appropriation, C. W. Kitchen, assistant chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, said that the administration faced conditions which might make it necessary to refuse licenses, under the warehousing Act to future applicants.

"The market situation in grain and cotton," Mr. Kitchen said, "has placed very unusual demands upon the warehouse Act and we have tried to meet the situation with our present administration, but unless some relief is soon granted it will be necessary for us to deny further applications and even then we will have great difficulty in giving proper supervision of licensed warehouses.

"We now have 861 warehouse licenses compared to 621 last year, which shows a tremendous increase. We have licensed warehouse capacity for 5,623,049 bales of cotton, or an increase of approximately 20 per cent over a year ago, and the licensed capacity for grain is 73,435,000 bushels or nearly 100 per cent over a year ago."

Mr. Kitchen pointed out that the administration of this Act was far from being self-supporting, the revenues from fees this year amounting to probably $15.000 or $16,000. The expense of the initial examination of the warehouse, when license application is made, is paid by the applicant, but subsequent examinations are stood by the Government. The administration tries to make four examinations of each warehouse annually.

A tabulation submitted to the committee by Mr. Kitchen shows the remarkable growth in licensed warehouses since 1920. In that year there were 23 licensed warehouses for cotton with a capacity of 43250 bales; this year 365 warehouses with a capacity of 4623,049 bales. In 1920, there were five licensed grain warehouses with a capacity of 146,000 bushels; this year 331 warehouses with a capacity of 73,181,500 bushels. In 1920 there were no licensed warehouses for tobacco, peanuts, broomcorn, beans, potatoes, syrup, canned goods, cottonseed, or cold-pack fruits. Today there are licensed, under the Act, 23 wool warehouses with capacity of 42,-152,500 pounds; 10 tobacco warehouses with capacity of 239,600,000 pounds; 15 peanut warehouses with capacity of 11,-751 tons; 1 broomcorn with capacity of 1000 bales; 16 beans with capacity of 759,681 hundredweight; 13 syrup with capacity of 1,099,860 gallons; 70 canned goods warehouses with capacity of 3,269,-000 cases; 1 cottonseed with capacity of 1000 tons, and 3 cold-pack warehouses with capacity of 3,445,000 pounds.

It was brought out during the hearing that the licensed warehouse has become increasingly important as part of the basic structure for the loan policy of the Federal Farm Board.

Regarding the use of the eleven requested new inspectors, Mr. Kitchen said:

"The plan will be to appoint eleven additional inspectors, who will be employed in making inspections of warehouses applying for licenses, and in checking up on the activities of these warehouses after they have obtained licenses. Each of these additional warehouses must be examined in accordance with the Act and the regulations to determine the eligibility of the warehouseman and the suitability of the space for license. Following licensing all of these additional warehouses and this additional capacity should receive at least four inspections annually. On account of the large volume of grain that will be handled through some of the large elevators which have been licensed this season even more than four inspections per annum may be desirable. The present organization is inadequate to handle this expansion. Moreover, it is confidently expected that further substantial increases will take place."

Occupancy and Tonnage

THE Department of Commerce's January release, covering warehousing occupancy and tonnage figures for October, was not made public at Washington in time to be included in this issue of Distribution and Warehousing.

The figures, with comparison with those for October of 1929 and October of 1928, will be published next month.

A New Cold Storage Firm in New Orleans

THE Orleans Warehouse Corporation, with offices at 428 Julia Street, has filed its charter to carry on business of cold storage warehousing and to contract, hire, purchase, operate and maintain conveyances for transportation in cold storage or otherwise, by land or by water. The total authorized number of shares are 1000 at a par value of $10 each, the corporation beginning with $10,000 capital.

The officers are, president, Walter Thiel, Waveland, Miss.; vice-president, Emile Weil, New Orleans; second vice-president, A. H. Johness, New Orleans; secretary-treasurer, W. C. Jones.

Shippers Ask Action on Rail Store-Door and Pick-Up Service

DISTRIBUTION AND WAREHOUSING'S Washington Bureau, 1163 National Press Building.

PRECEDING the formal action with a sharp discussion from the standpoint of the shippers and the railroads, the Atlantic States Shippers Advisory Board meeting in Washington on Dec. 19, called on the carriers for "the why and the wherefore" of their failure to inaugurate a store-door pick-up and delivery service in New York City.

While the action applies only to New York City on its face, it was stated by officers of the board that it has a national significance, for if the service should be begun and should prove successful in New York, it will serve as a precedent for the same service elsewhere.

The formal action involved adoption of a committee report which declared the failure of the railroads to adopt the store-door service "places them in the position of failing to help themselves" against motor truck competition.

This view was emphasized by H. E. Stringer, general chairman of the board and vice-president of the Hydraulic Press Brick Co., Washington.

"The railroads," he declared in an address, "ask cooperation in car service problems, but in other matters there is one delay after another. We are trying to help the carriers solve the complicated delivery and pick-up problems in New York, to take the place of the present system, which is expensive and fearfully slow.

"As regards the railroad executives' program for improved financial conditions, they are overlooking a valuable agency when they do not cooperate properly with this board and similar bodies in their general plan.

"The present financial troubles of the railroads are due in large part to their out-of-date rate structure. The old yardsticks should be abandoned, and rates should be revised to assist distressed industries."

The delay in adopting the store-door service was defended by J. W. Roberts, New York, assistant to the vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He declared that after several years of study the rail executives had found it not yet possible to evolve a workable plan.

The report as adopted was prepared by a special committee headed by C. L. Hilleary, traffic manager of F. W. Woolworth & Co., New York. It follows:

"For a number of years, consideration has been given from time to time to the development of a form of collection and delivery service that will properly meet the conditions in New York.

"The efforts referred to include those which involved a report made by the late Justice Harlan of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the appointment of a special committee by the presidents of the New York railroads. This special committee was directed to confer with shippers and receivers of freight and make a careful study of this problem with a view of insuring sound and conservative action.

"The Atlantic States Shippers Advisory Board also appointed a committee, and these two committees did meet on Feb. 6 last, and at that time did agree in principle to a plan of procedure.

"The presidents' committee agreed to compile a tariff as early as possible and submit it to the board's committee. Our committee not hearing from the presidents' committee, the general chairman wrote to the chairman of the presidents' committee asking the status, and was advised that another committee had been appointed to carefully study this problem.

"We believe that the railroad presidents have all the information to definitely act. Further, the railway executives on Nov. 20 approved a 'declaration of policy' pleading for the public support of a program to strengthen the position of the railroads. This 'declaration of policy' laid considerable stress on motor truck competition. We believe the failure of the railroads to act on this store-door delivery and pick-up service, whereby truck competition in a measure could be combated, places them in the position of failing to help themselves, which position is untenable.

"We are further interested in knowing if the carriers' method of handling this matter reflects their belief that this board has outlived its purpose and usefulness."

ABBREVIATIONS APPEARING IN THE 1931 WAREHOUSE DIRECTORY

In Which Is Included the

SHIPPERS' INDEX

The Directory Consultant Should Read the Following:

THIS revised edition of the annual Warehouse Directory published by Distribution and Warehousing has two major purposes. One is to give Business America an authentic and up-to-date reference list of public warehouses with equipment and facilities to store, forward, transfer or distribute manufactured and raw products and household and cold storage goods. The other is to provide for the industry itself a record of the responsible companies engaged in all branches of the warehouse business.

¶ In this year-round reference work is to be found information, regarding warehouse companies, that will be consulted throughout 1931 by the shipper, the banker, the storage executive, by Government officials, and by the business and industrial public generally—information that relates to names, addresses, office personnel, year of establishment, investment, storage and distribution and pool car facilities and services, space statistics, motor truck and team operation, motor freight lines, railroad connections, and trade association affiliations.

¶ The Directory consultant should keep in mind the following:

¶ When a bold face star—thus: ★—appears after a company's name, in the United States and Canada, it signifies that the information contained in that company's listing has been attested, before a notary public, as being correct—that the facts and figures were sworn to under oath after being set down on information sheets distributed in the preparation of this revised edition.

¶ Where no bold face star appears, the information in the listing was not sworn to; and, in the cases of companies which did not supply up-to-date information for their year's Directory, such listings may be at least one year old.

¶ The bold face mark—thus: §—after the name of a company operating in a foreign country, signifies that that information was prepared specifically for the 1931 Directory. Absence of this mark means that the firm made no return for 1931, and thus the information is at least one year old.

¶ Where the investment figure given is small, this may mean that it covers fixtures and equipment only—not taking into account the real estate, etc.

¶ Where the statement is made that a company is bonded, it should not be construed that the company's entire available space necessarily is bonded; for example, USCB may mean that only a part of the space is United States Customs Bonded.

¶ Toward the close of a listing, one or more commodities may appear in bold face type. This means that the company specializes in the storage and distribution of such commodity or commodities.

PLYMETL, the metal-faced plywood, is the van panel material that makes possible big pay loads. First—it is much lighter than sheet steel for equivalent strength . . . hundreds of pounds of dead weight are eliminated. Second—its smooth-as-glass surface offers a perfect base for beautiful signs—sure producers of paying business.

Plymetl is stiff enough to prevent rumbling and its great impact resistance cuts repair bills (impacts that seriously dent sheet metal or split wood do not affect Plymetl). In case of serious accident, the Plymetl can be repaired without the necessity of removing the whole panel.

Weatherability is assured by a secret process glue, with which the metal faces are bonded directly to the plywood core. This exclusive construction does away with ply separation and interior rusting. The faces are copper bearing metal of the highest grade obtainable, which is zinc coated by a heat process which insures permanent rust resistance. The sheets are stretcher-leveled to eliminate any waves or irregularities in the surface.

We will be glad to send you valuable engineering data on the use of Plymetl.

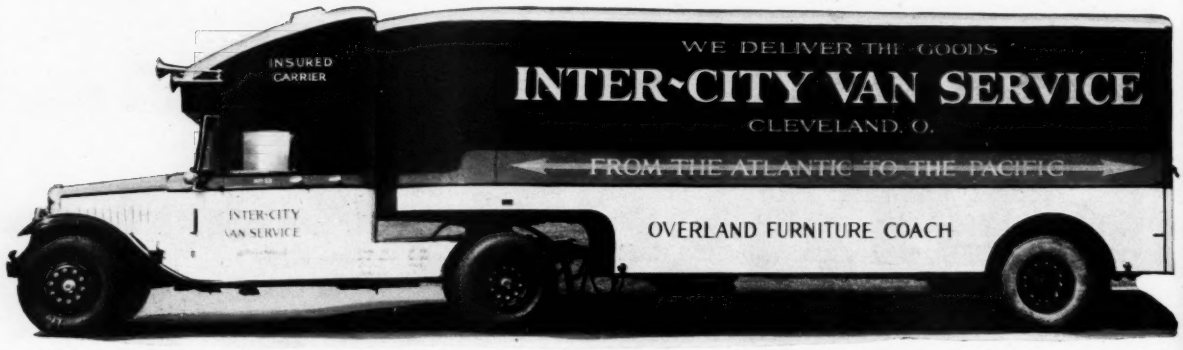
MET-L-WOOD SEMI-RIBLESS

VAN BODIES



THESE illustrations show two new ways of using Met-L-Wood in van construction. Both designs embody principles of the Met-L-Wood Semi-Ribless design for the purpose of reducing weight and improving appearance.

Added designs and larger sized panels now recommend Met-L-Wood more than ever before for your new equipment.

A sixteen foot demonstrator van is now being built in a local body shop so that you can inspect this construction at your door-step.

THERE'S A CLEAN-UP OF PROFITS IN YOUR SHAMPOOING RUGS & CARPETS

STEAM HEATED RUG DRYER

WITH Connersville Rug Cleaning Equipment, you can start in a business that will keep you busy. Others are doing it, you can do it, too. The initial investment is small, the business will grow big. Connersville equipment is a lasting investment, as most of the first machines sold are still in use today.

It is practicable and profitable to add a rug cleaning department to any furniture warehouse. With an ever rising standard of living, more people expect and demand that their rugs and carpets be thoroughly renovated before they are placed in storage. A small investment will set you up in this profitable business.

Scores of prominent warehouses include rug cleaning as a part of their services and they recognize the value of these departments. Many of these started on a small scale, but they had, from the first, the advantage of proper machinery. After all, adequate equipment, careful workmen and correct cleaning practices are the essentials for assuring good cleaning of rugs.

People trade where they are invited, but they only continue their patronage where they are treated right, and rendered the service to which they think they are entitled. A rug cleaning sign on your building, and a Connersville equipped plant, will together show your customers that your service is complete, and your aim is to please them. Let us help you start a rug cleaning department.

STURDY-INEXPENSIVE MOVING BOX—FOR YOUR CUSTOMERS

Moving boxes, generally homemade, are rapidly becoming a thing of the past. They do not last, they are generally of odd sizes making handling in the trucks expensive, and are too easily broken into—Lewis Multitrip Moving Boxes offer a real solution to Moving Companies —Multitrips are sturdily built of woven Wisconsin white elm with galvanized wire construction—furnished plain or varnished and with your name stencilled on both sides and ends numbered. Strong hinged covers locked with a seal protect your customer's goods from pilfering en route. Multitrips are uniform and are therefore easily handled and stacked in the van.

Multitrip Boxes are made of selected Wisconsin white elm slats, sanded and interwoven with galvanized steel wire securely stapled to thick substantial frame cleats. Three-way steel stampings armor them at corners. U. S. Forest Products Laboratory tests together with our own rigid standards for a period of over thirty years definitely insure their strength and perfection.

Special trial orders of one Multitrip at the 100 lot price

Write for prices and catalog. We gladly send representative—"A Specialist in Handling and Moving Problems"—at no obligation to you.

Empties a car like pulling the bung from a barrel!

A New Way to Load or Unload a Car

Clark's Car Loading Kit comprises eight dual sections—each easily connected or disconnected—added to the end of a standard TwinVeyor line. Parallel lines of spiral tubes are turned toward each other by power head at warehouse end.

Kit pours constant stream of packaged freight from warehouse to the exact spot in car where it's to ride. Ends of car loaded first—then center section. Kit sections easily moved about—line is shortened as car fills up. In unloading, TwinVeyor runs in reverse, taking freight to storage or place of use. All done in minimum time, at hitherto unheard-of low cost.

Heavy Trucking demands FAULTLESS CASTERS

Everything you need know about casters is contained in this book—a treatise of caster information—a copy of which will be sent upon request.

Down crowded aisles—over rough floors—out on the loading platform—under the hands of the trucker, none too gentle—under loads that tax the strength of even the hardiest caster—Faultless Casters come through smilingly, their burdens delivered safely, surely, swiftly.

Ruberex wheels for quiet, easy operation—or steel wheels where desired—ball bearings or plain bearings—swivel or plate—any Truck Caster you want you will find in the Faultless line. It will pay you to investigate Faultless Casters.

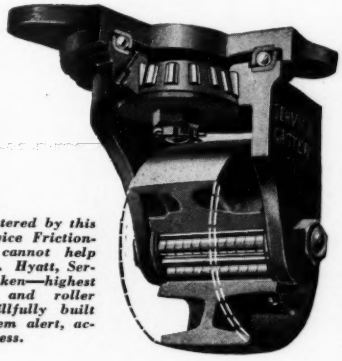
Ever try to drive an Automobile ...Sideways...?

You Discovered How Much Damage Can Be Done by Slow-to-Swivel Casters



Trucks castered by this 606STH Service Frictionless Caster cannot help acting young. Hyatt, Service and Timken—highest grade ball and roller bearings, skillfully built in—make them alert, active and tireless.

It doesn't need a crack-up of your car against some curbstone to convince you that wheels won't roll any way but straight ahead.

Yet, look at your warehouse floors, your loading platforms. If they're marked and scored and splintered you can thank the lazy little wheels under your trucks and dollies — the casters that didn't "right face" or "guide left" promptly when the command was given.... Or if your floors are fairly new, look back at the bill for refinishing or renewing them. Floors aren't overhead, but they cost money just the same.

And, you can stop all this with casters that turn at a touch and roll spontaneously with the momentum of the load. These are Service Casters with bearings where bearings count most. The amazing difference is worth looking into. Write us for details.

Today, more than ever, the comparative value of every product is quite as essential as the reputation of the manufacturer who builds it . . . . At the right is listed a partial group of Security Door installations made in 1930—some on the basis of past Security performance, others on the basis of that careful comparison which determines the choice of Security Doors as a matter of course.

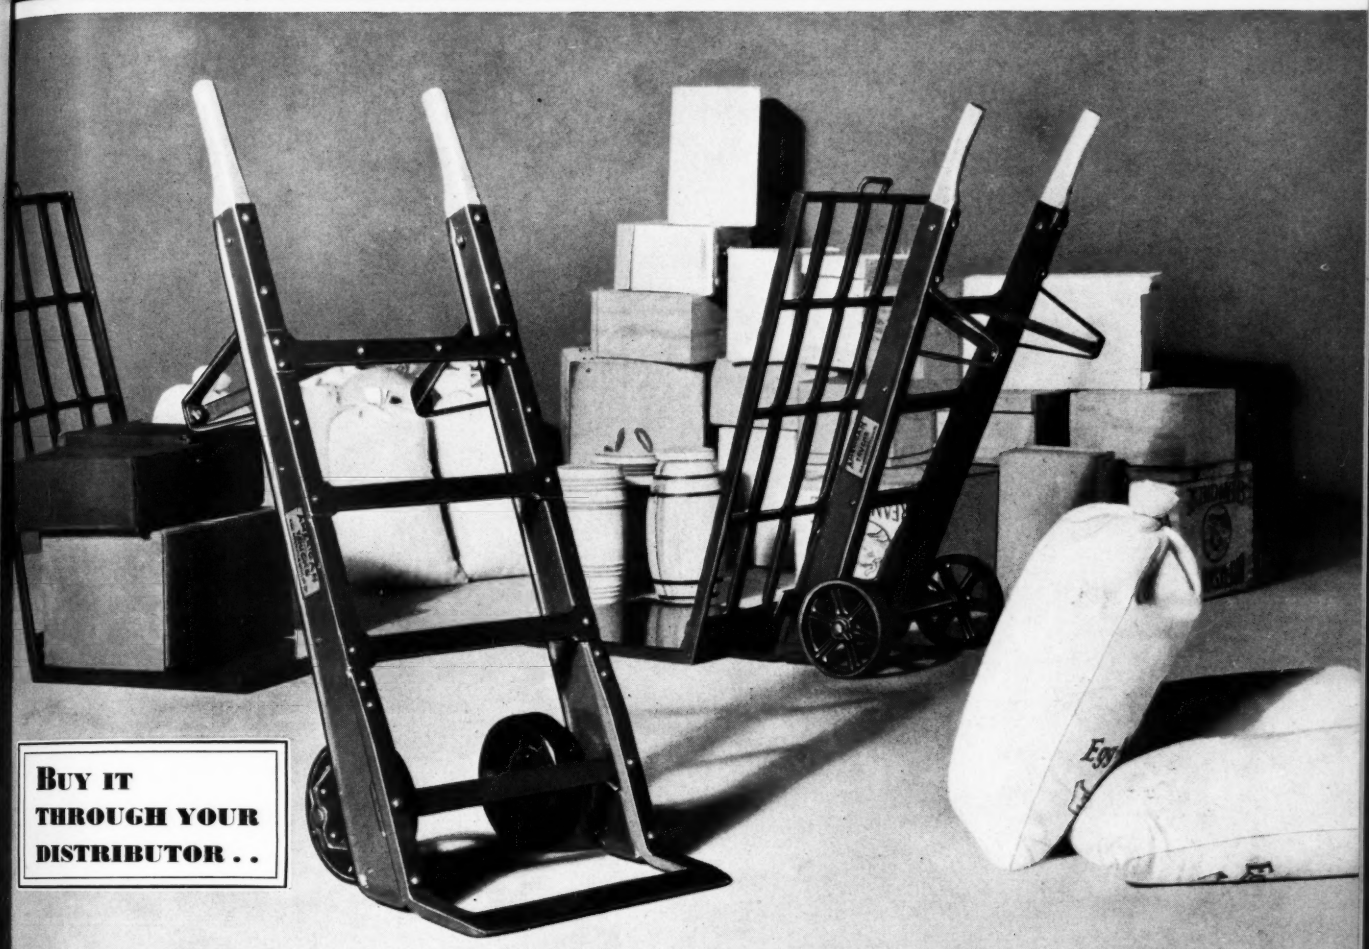
AMERICANS speak for themselves



EVERYWHERE it is the same story. The special money-back trial offer sells the first AMERICAN Pressed Steel Truck — its superior service and longer life on the job sells the fleet.

Writes the Boston Tidewater Terminal, Inc., "The first AMERICAN Pressed Steel Trucks we used proved their worth so positively and so quickly that, as you know, we bought 35 more."

From the land of cotton comes, "There is no doubt about it, AMERICAN Pressed Steel Hand Trucks are the best we ever used." (Savannah Warehouse and Compress Co.)

Philadelphia & Norfolk S. S. Co. add, "We have approximately 350 AMERICAN Trucks in use and now have an order in for 100 additional trucks. We believe them to be the best on the market, giving excellent service at a reduced cost."

From Schenectady, "We have given one of your trucks a two-year trial against several others and find it gives the best real service by a mile. In fact, there is no comparison and we have used it rough!"

AMERICAN Trucks have removed the guesswork from hand truck buying. Select your handling equipment on the "service per dollar" basis. Make the test yourself. Buy an AMERICAN, put it to work and watch it. If you are not satisfied that it is saving you money — return it to us for refund of the purchase price.

Buy it through your distributor: AMERICAN Products—nationally known, used, appreciated—have always been sold through a large number of mill supply distributors. We believe that a major part of our business success has been due to the earnest efforts of these men to serve industry economically and efficiently.

9 MEN DID THE WORK OF 12

An eastern S.S. company cites the case. Cargo to be moved, quickly. And cargo meant countless sizes and shapes from kegs to cases, from sacks to rolls, barrels, bales.

Twelve men and twelve hand trucks usually tackled the job. This time, nine men, three AMERICAN Trucks and nine AMERICAN Pressed Steel Truk-paks took command.

Three men loaded Truk-paks in the hold. Three others unloaded Truk-paks on the wharf. Three more kept up a continuous round trip circuit, picking up loads on the jump, carrying back empty Truk-paks for reloading.

Results: The ship cleared by nine men in the same length of time twelve would normally have required—no spilling of loads en route—no congestion—no lost or damaged merchandise.

It is the constant endeavor of the American Pulley Company not only to produce truck handling equipment that will give better, more economical service over a longer period of time, but also to develop improved truck handling methods, offering you further savings in time, labor and money.

Whatever your handling problem, investigate AMERICAN Pressed Steel Hand Trucks—light, strong, durable, built to wear without repair. Ask about the new AMERICAN Pressed Steel Truk-paks that offer lift truck service at hand truck cost.

100 NUTTING Floor Trucks

are used by the Atlanta Joint Terminal Warehouse — selected for sturdy construction, ease of handling and a national reputation for long, trouble-free service.

All castings used in Nutting trucks are made of a special SEMI-STEEL, much stronger, tougher and more durable than cast iron.

ROLLER BEARING FLOOR TRUCKS

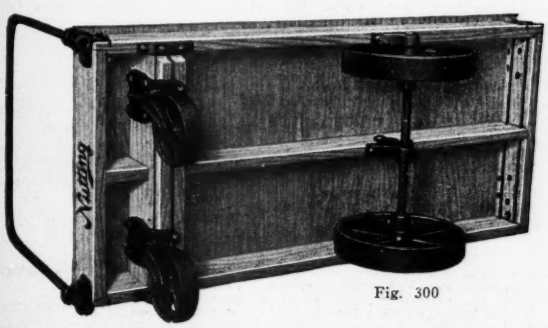

Fig. 300

YOU, too, will select Nutting trucks if you take note of the special features which give them greater strength, rigidity, easier running and longer life.

The solid, hardwood platform construction is reinforced by a heavy sill backbone and by binding rods that run clear through the truck from side to side and can be tightened with a wrench, to make truck as rigid as new.

The casters have tapered steel stems, reinforced so that binding is virtually impossible. Their "L" shape fastening to the caster bar adds strength and rigidity and the lips take strain off the bolts.

Easy Fumigant To Use—Just Sprinkle

Easiest fumigant to use—just sprinkle.
No spraying. Simply seal doors and windows and sprinkle Calcyanide on strips of paper. Lethal gas is created; it reaches every nook and cranny.
A little Calcyanide does a big job. It's economical, but would be worth a hundred times its price if measured by the freedom from worry that's yours when you know: "No infestation in my warehouse."
After 24 to 36 hours, roll up the paper on which the residue remains. Nothing mussy. A hard job easily done—with Calcyanide.

In the past year the public has doubled its expenditures for

MOTHPROOFING SERVICE

Leading Warehousemen are now reaping extra profits from Konate Mothproofing Service. Their customers are glad to have guaranteed protection. Konate Mothproofing Service is the year 'round, sure, simple and economical Mothproofing Service that is made to order for the Warehouseman, because you not only make a profit out of it, but it brings you other business.

Every rug, carpet, piece of upholstered furniture, piece of tapestry and piece of household woolen that you handle can be made to pay you more profit. Get this profit with practically no increase in overhead by Mothproofing every possible article with Konate.

Konate is so effective that one treatment prevents moth damage for at least three years. Results can be unreservedly guaranteed—an insurance certificate is issued to cover. Nothing like it has ever been offered before. Nothing else is so thorough. Konate penetrates every thread and fibre so that destructive larvae starve to death rather than eat a Konated article.

Konate leaves no residual odor . . . does not stain . . . leaves not a trace. But the fabric is absolutely mothproofed.

Investigate Konate and guaranteed Konating Mothproofing Service. The American Public spent more than $500,000.00 for Konate Mothproofing Service during the year.

KIL-KAKE

100% Active. Kills moths, their larvae and eggs. Guaranteed to leave no odor no matter how long used. A four ounce pressed cake individually wrapped, sealed and boxed in a handy window box with a convenient cord attached. Made in Rose, Violet and Cedar perfume as well as Plain. Sold by the dozen, three dozen, six dozen and one gross lots.

MOTH KILLER

The most powerful and yet the most pleasant of all moth preventatives. Kills the eggs and larvae and yet the odor does not linger in the goods no matter how long they may be protected with the same. Can be had in Crystal and Nugget forms convenient for sprinkling in furniture and carpets. Sold in five, ten and thirty-five pound cans and fifty and one hundred pound drums.

KILENE

Naphthalene Flakes, Balls and Rice

Prime white, 89 to 91 melting point. Fresh goods always in stock in barrels of 200 pounds or 50 and 25 pound cartons.

CRYSTAL SPRAY

A non-inflammable, non-explosive, powerful moth preventative in liquid form. The liquid forms a gas upon being sprayed, leaving a white crystalline substance wherever sprayed. For carpets and rugs only. Should not be sprayed upon polished surfaces, otherwise it is harmless in every way.

KIL-MOR

A medium priced yet powerful insecticide for the exterminating of all insects including moths, bugs, roaches, etc. Cannot stain or discolor. Pleasant odor.

TAR PAPER

In both Red and Brown. The Brown in rolls of 12 sheets of 40 x 48 inches. The Red (36 inches wide) in 50 yard rolls and upward. Fresh goods always.

RICE HULLS
Ideal for packing uses

Rice Hulls are clean and "springy." They are light in weight (only 7½ pounds per CUBIC FOOT). They are free-flowing and non-packing (cannot be packed even by mechanical means). They are NEUTRAL IN ODOR.

Warehouses will be especially interested in Rice Hulls for packing hygroscopic materials to prevent moisture absorption, and for insulation either hot or cold.

A member of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, asked for an efficient insecticide for use against clothes moths, recommended NAPTHALENE FLAKES.

FOR MOTH PROTECTION THAT IS PROTECTION

All you need, to rid you of the warehousemen's curse, is an airtight room and a generous supply of Naphthalene Flakes.

Your initial expense is amazingly low. No big outlay for expensive vaults or poisonous gases.

Just utilize your waste space by converting a corner of it into airtight quarters. Scatter Naphthalene Flakes freely and forget about it.

You will be quick to realize the advantages and increased revenue you will enjoy when you can promise your customers complete moth protection. Naphthalene Flakes offer the most effective method, the easiest, the cheapest.

The Real Diary of a Real Truck

No wonder it has been called "the most interesting chart in business.

For the first time you are enabled to see your own truck "face to face."

It's a revelation!

And you notice at once that your driver is only a part of your problem.

Now you see your whole problem laid out before you—analyzed for you in terms of hours and minutes.

You Don't Question Facts

This chart is an actual reproduction of trip made by a moving van from Philadelphia to Chicago and return.

TETCO T.I.M. Gives it to you Straight

You can't very well out-argue facts. They have a persistent way of insisting that the truth is the truth—no more—no less. If TETCO T.I.M. says your truck worked steadily for four hours you can depend on it that it did. If TETCO T.I.M. says your truck idled from 10 A. M. to 2 P. M. you can be sure that that's what it did. If you want to know what your trucks are doing—and when—put TETCO T.I.M. on the job. TETCO T.I.M. will give you an exact check on truck operation.

TETCO T.I.M. gives you a definite check on long trips. This seven-day recorder automatically changes from day to day, keeping daily records intact until the chart is changed. Think of the advantages of 7-day recording. Easier comparison of daily operation—seven days' record clearly outlined on one chart instead of seven. Chart changed once a week instead of daily, effecting a saving in time as well as reducing cost of charts.

No mechanical or electrical connections. A steel stylus operating on a waxed chart does away with old-fashioned pen and ink. Slow and fast adjustments can be made. Visible clock dial gives driver a time piece and removes his antagonism for ordinary recorders.

TETCO T.I.M. SEVEN-DAY RECORDER with a year's supply of charts, $40.00.

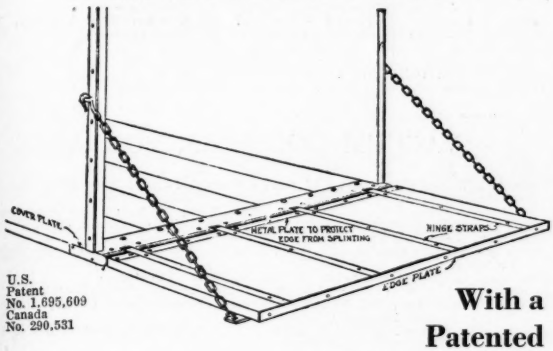
NO MORE BROKEN FURNITURE



U.S. Patent No. 1,695,609
Canada No. 290,531

With a Patented Spaceless Tailboard

Because the usual space between floor and tailboard is eliminated when the tailboard is open. No jamming or breaking are possible. Another anti-damage feature lies in the fact that the body platform extends beyond the tailboard when it is closed. Accidental backing into platforms, posts, etc., does not damage the tailboard.

Smooth surface makes easy rolling. Will not rattle, open or closed. Convenient, efficient. Installed on any truck. See your body builder.

COLD ENOUGH?

No application of refrigeration is more exacting than cold storage temperature maintenance. Here, not one but many temperatures are necessary . . . ranging from considerably above freezing to far below. And these temperatures must be constant for long periods, without deviation.

Albany's famous Central Railway Terminal and Cold Storage Co. is a case in point. Here all sorts of perishables are handled; the need for dependable refrigeration is obvious.

This installation (engineered, designed, built and erected by Vilter) comprises four H.D.A. Duplex Compressors, the largest 17" x 16", the smallest 8½" x 12", approximately 30 miles of 2-inch pipe and all else necessary to maintain the various constant temperatures in every one of the several hundred cooling, freezing and storage rooms.

If you have any problem having to do with refrigeration in any phase, be sure to get in touch with Refrigeration Headquarters. We will be glad to answer your inquiry.

These and hundreds of other progressive warehousemen have found EXTERMOVAULT an important factor in creating good will and increasing their profits.

YOUR TRADE will gladly pay a little more to have their furniture protected against dust and press marks and, when you can guarantee at the same time to exterminate moth life by a fumigation process which has been approved by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, you offer an argument for its use that far outweighs the slight extra cost. You make more money, the customer gets better service.

EXTERMOVAULT comes in sets of three and orders are accepted for a minimum of one dozen sets at $8.50 per set F. O. B. New York. Each set can be used at least twenty times and your initial investment will be repaid many times over.

Order EXTERMOVAULT now and begin at once to reap the benefits of this modern service. Either send your order at once or write for further information.

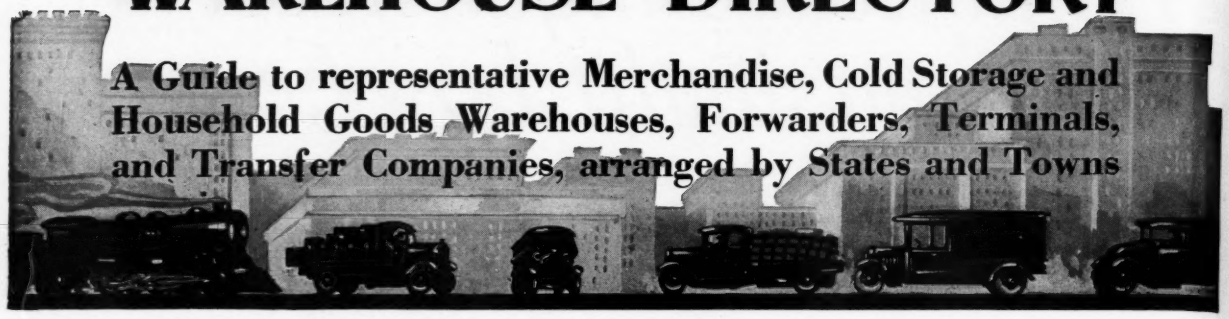
WAREHOUSE DIRECTORY



A Guide to representative Merchandise, Cold Storage and Household Goods Warehouses, Forwarders, Terminals, and Transfer Companies, arranged by States and Towns

"Andy Says"

VOLUME 30 NUMBER 1 identifies this edition of Distribution and Warehousing.

In other words this publication, which today ranks with the leading industrial papers in the United States, has for thirty years been serving what is today the public warehousing and distributing industry of the country.

¶ Thirty years ago it had a modest and humble beginning under the name of The Team Owners Review. That was before the days of the present modern warehouse (there were some but very few fireproof buildings used for warehouses then) and before the advent of the motor truck.

¶ Conditions gradually changed. Storage warehouses of modern construction began being built in such numbers that before long nearly every town and city had its well constructed, beautiful and modern storage plant and in January, 1915, The Team Owners Review changed its name to Transfer and Storage. This name more properly fitted the business of the day and was continued until November, 1919, when the name "Distribution and Warehousing" was adopted—again to mark the rapid development taking place in the distribution of commodities in the merchandise branch of the business.

¶ "D & W," as Distribution and Warehousing is familiarly called, has conscientiously and faithfully carried on during all these years through several business and editorial administrations, to see the comparatively unorganized cartage business of 1900 develop into an industry with its present high standard of ideals, ethics and efficiency. National in scope, it has a credit rating which stands head and shoulders above some other industries that may be considered older in years.

¶ We congratulate the industry in the strides it has made during this thirty-year period, and with due modesty "D & W" takes pride in the part it has been privileged to take in this development.

¶ "D & W" will carry on in the future as it has in the past, seeking ways and means to help every branch of the industry, and then using every means at its disposal without thought of mercenary gain but with the full knowledge that good things are not allowed to perish from the face of the earth.

¶ A Happy and Prosperous New Year is extended to all by the entire "D & W" staff.

Our Warehouses Are in a Position to Render Branch House Service

1. Receive merchandise:
   (a) In carload lots from all railroads, which switch cars to our warehouse spur tracks without charge.
   (b) From all steamers docking at San Francisco, handling with our fleet of motor trucks.
2. Provide storage and issue warehouse receipts accepted by banks, etc., as legal evidence of ownership.
3. Repack or recondition goods for reasonable fees.
4. Arrange for insurance coverage.
5. Provide office and clerical facilities for manufacturers and shippers desiring direct representation at point of storage.
6. Reship merchandise to railroad or steamship dock or redeliver in San Francisco, issuing uniform bills of lading, legal evidence of delivery.

Our five buildings of 385,000 square feet of first-class warehouse storage space, located in the wholesale districts, convenient to all railroad terminals and steamer docks, are at your constant disposal.

This is a picture taken from an airplane by the New England Airways, Inc., showing a group of 23 buildings owned and occupied by The Smedley Company.

The first of these buildings was erected in 1860 and others have been added as the growth of the business warranted.

The picture also shows our private siding on the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. and the dock used by the Starin Line for boats plying between New York and New Haven.

Concrete and steel fireproof storage warehouses, for furniture, pianos, merchandise, and automobiles. Private locked rooms for the storage of household goods and merchandise. Watchman on duty in and around the plant day and night. Local and long distance hauling of every description. Especially equipped for moving machinery, boilers, safes, etc. Railroad and boat connections. Members of the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association, American Warehousemen's Association, the Connecticut Warehousemen's Association, and the Truck Association of Connecticut.

The Smedley Company was established in 1860. The history of this company is the history of the trucking and storage business in southern New England. This company boasts that it has never lost a customer whose business it seemed desirable to retain.

The Smedley Company is fully equipped with automobile trucks and vans of every desirable type and maintains a stable full of horses, not only as being the most practical and economical means of transportation under some conditions, but as being the only means at times when, because of road conditions, motor trucks are useless.

MERCHANDISE STORAGE AND DISTRIBUTION

OUR FIREPROOF WAREHOUSES are far superior to anything of their kind in the region of Washington. Modern in design and equipment, they provide every facility for utmost service in the storage and distribution of General Merchandise and the storage of Perishables.

THE WAREHOUSE PICTURED ABOVE is located on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, with direct switching connections. An entire train of freight may be run into the center of the building—an exceptional feature which assures rapid and safe loading and unloading of cars under roof.

WE ARE ADVANTAGEOUSLY SITUATED directly across the tracks from Main Freight Office of the Pennsylvania System which handles all freight arriving in Washington over the Southern Railroad, Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad, Seaboard Air Line, and Atlantic Coast Line.

ADEQUATE TRUCKING FACILITIES are maintained and we render efficient delivery service. Our location in the heart of the commercial zone enables us to furnish such service at minimum delivery rates.

SHIPMENTS should be consigned to OWNER, for Pennsylvania delivery, in care of

SERVING FLORIDA

This great state with its wealth of Citrus Fruits, Vegetables, Phosphate, Lumber, Fish, and countless other "money crops," purchases practically all of its manufactured articles and food stuffs from without the State.

TAMPA is the logical point of distribution for the entire state. Ocean freight rates bring the merchandise to our doors at lowest cost, and railroads, coast steamers and truck lines make deliveries to practically all points on the day following date of shipment and at lower average freight rates than from any other seaport.

Fellow Warehousemen:

In the heart of the residential districts of the North and South Sides of Chicago are nine EMPIRE warehouses well located to give efficient and economical service in the delivery of shipments of household goods either to residence or to storage.

Two of these warehouses have private railroad sidings and in event of carloads for storage this means complete elimination of cartage expense. There is a nominal charge for unloading the car in the warehouse but this is only a fractional part of cartage expense.

Your customers' interests and your own will be carefully protected if shipments are consigned to EMPIRE. Collections will be handled promptly. Railroad claims, if any, will be filed by us and the customer will receive every courtesy.

BILLING INSTRUCTIONS

Consign carloads for storage to

Empire Warehouses, Inc., Private Siding
5041 Lake Park Avenue, c/o Illinois Central R.R.

JOLIET ILLINOIS

CONCERNING YOUR ILLINOIS STOCK

Traffic delays are unnecessary and can be easily eliminated by taking storage space in Joliet. It is quickly accessible to all parts of Illinois. By morning, your shipment can be laid down in Chicago or other nearby points.

As a consequence of being outside the congested Chicago area, the lease space costs far less—a substantial saving for you—yet the warehouse furnishes the same modern efficient service as the Chicago warehouses.

OVERNIGHT SERVICE TO GREATEST ILLINOIS BUYING CENTERS

Freedom from congestion permits the largest warehouse in Illinois outside of Chicago to offer speedy and unhampered service facilities.

In addition to the fourteen rail lines, easily accessible to this Peoria warehouse, two electric lines, two steamship lines, and an efficient fleet of modern motor trucks assure quick and economical connections.

It is the sensible choice for your Illinois storage center.

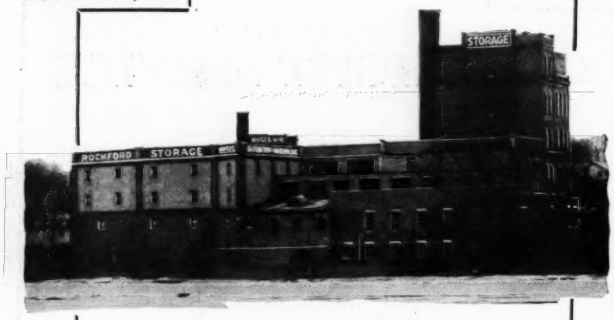
ROCKFORD, ILL.



Mr. Distributor—
Come to Rockford and the
Rockford STORAGE WAREHOUSES INC.

For the distribution of your products in Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin.

A natural, first step out of Chicago in a national distribution scheme is to Rockford—second industrial city in Illinois. Situated midway between east and west boundaries of the state and seventeen miles south of Wisconsin. Four railroads — interurban lines —regular freight bus lines traveling over six concrete highways— all go to make up Rockford's natural advantages as a distributing point.

Make Our Facilities part of your Distributing Organization

Three warehouses carrying the lowest insurance rates—owned and operated by this company. 122,500 square feet of floor space. Trackage connections and free switching from all roads. Eleven trucks for transfer and cartage. Desk, office and sales room available for your sales organization. Also selling information on the Rockford trading territory.

Intelligent, quick and careful service with Complete Facilities for Distribution in Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin.

FREIGHT SAVING

Mississippi River—breaking point of freight tariffs. Thereby saving freight to ultimate destination (to your customer); including the lcl freight is less than from inland distributing points.
The saving on carload to Davenport more than absorbing such lcl rate, besides as illustrated delivery is effected within 12 to 24 hours.
Write us for demonstration tariff sheet or any information.

Storage in Worcester

At this time when distribution costs are receiving more attention than production costs, it will pay any manufacturer or distributor to investigate the claims of Worcester.

New England is the first section of the country to reorganize her transportation system. This system now consists of trunk line railroads and highways. Worcester is centrally located both geographically and as to population with regard to ⅞ of her 8,500,000 people. Worcester has main line service from three railroads, N. Y. C. Lines, N. Y., N. H. & H. R.R. Co., and B. & M. R.R. Co.

Worcester is the cross-over point for these three railroads of New England. Worcester is also the cross roads point for the main highways of New England. No city in New England is so located or has the facilities to effect economical distribution than Worcester—Investigate and save yourself money and your customer time.

ST. LOUIS TERMINAL WAREHOUSE CO.

ST. LOUIS TERMINAL WAREHOUSE COMPANY
SERVICE THAT EXCELLS

Largest Warehouse Organization in St. Louis

(For industrial storage)

We operate five separate storage warehouses, all on railroad tracks with private sidings connecting with all rail lines entering St. Louis; also, all warehouses have free carload delivery and receipt of merchandise to and from Mississippi River Barge Line. Three of our warehouses are built over a Union Freight Depot, which permits us to forward your freight economically.

Our fleet of trucks deliver to St. Louis and to surrounding towns and cities daily.

We handle a larger volume of business than any other Industrial Storage organization in St. Louis, and our warehouses are so located as to serve every industry conveniently and economically.

Let us help increase your sales by prompt, accurate and courteous service.

"The Pioneer Firm"

For nearly fifty years goods consigned in our care have been handled promptly and efficiently.

Naturally, we attribute our constantly increasing business to our attention to details.

The accuracy and dispatch with which we distribute merchandise consignments are bringing us lots of new business in this line.

We place no distance limit on our intercity trucking service. We go as far as you like.

Our constant aim is to render a superior service in everything appertaining to the storage warehouse and motor transportation business.

It is our invariable rule to remit collections on the same day we receive them.

Rest assured that your shipments, if sent in our care, will be handled the right way.

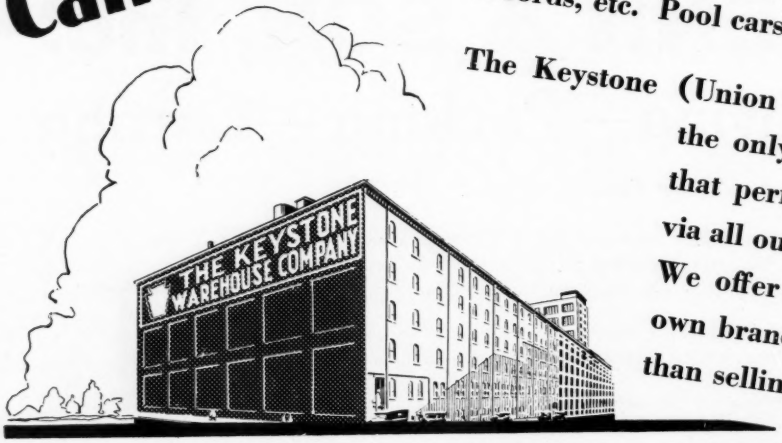
Modern Warehouses

Served by— all Railroads— Great Lakes Steamers— N.Y. Barge Canal Lines—

Shippers and distributors are offered a most efficient warehousing service at America's most strategic distribution point. Fireproof construction allows low insurance rates. Fifty cars per day capacity guarantees rapid handling. All freight is unloaded and delivered under cover, which insures against damage from the elements. An up-to-date trucking department is maintained and suburban trucking companies operate direct from the warehouse . . . there is no pick-up charge. An experienced traffic department is in a position to quote rates, trace cars, maintain transit records, etc. Pool cars are promptly distributed.



The Keystone (Union Dock Warehouses) are the only waterfront warehouses that permit the transit privilege via all outbound carriers.

We offer any service that your own branch could furnish other than selling the products.

Simplified Rate Manual FOR Merchandise Warehousemen

AUTHOR, D. W. TACKETT
Merchants Fireproof Storage Co., Dallas

Compiled and Published by the TEXAS WAREHOUSE AND TRANSFERMEN'S ASSOCIATION, Inc.

A scientific rate structure of 110 pages, based on the average experience as to floor load, stacking and pile height and weight per square foot of merchandise warehouses throughout the country.

A simplified Rate Manual which takes the guess out of quotations for package storage, handling and drayage.

Contains Basis of Rate Structure and an Analysis of Revenues received for handling or draying the average 10,000 pound lot of merchandise.

Contains conversion tables, so as to discount the Tariff 10% or 20% and also for increasing the Tariff 10% or 20%.

Bound in limp leather, convenient pocket size. A durable booklet for everyday service and for usage on your Rate Desk.

Merchandise warehousemen using this Tariff will find it indispensable in quotation of rates on package storage, handling and drayage.

Price per copy, $3.00. Lots of ten or more, per copy, $2.75. Limited supply.

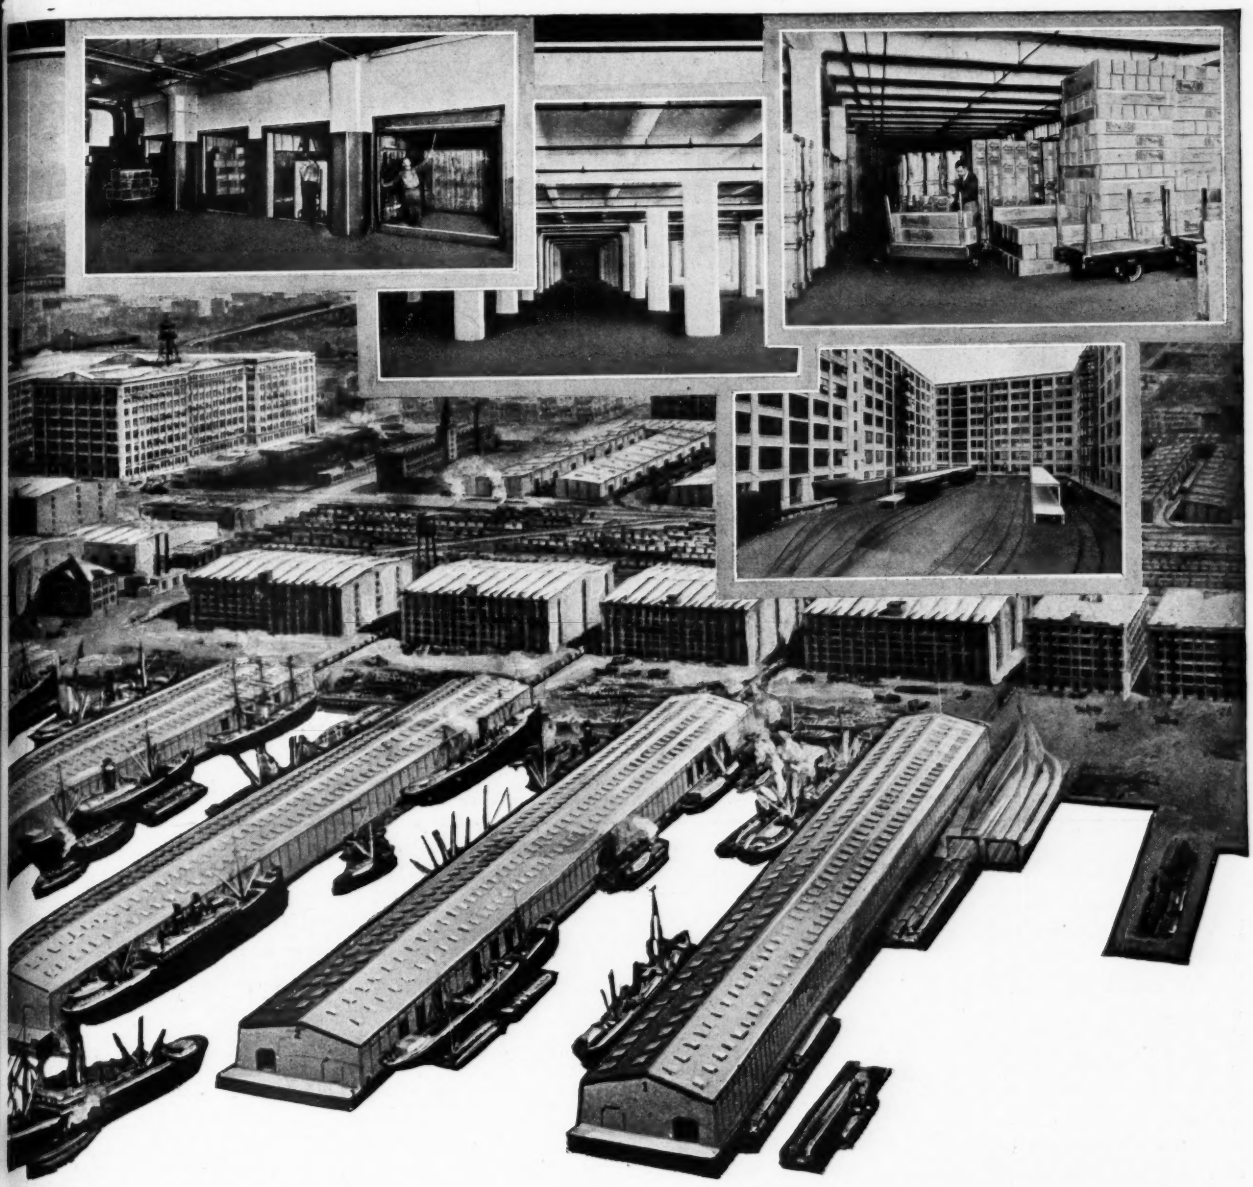
Over 200 Acres

Over 200 acres fully developed; 26,000,000 cu. ft. of storage space; 1,000,000 cu. ft. of cold storage; 6,000,000 sq. ft. of manufacturing space; eight steamship piers; 35 miles of railroad track connecting with all Trunk Line railways entering New York; car floats, tugs and fleets of motor trucks.

DISTRIBUTION PERFECTED

In New York you have the Bush Terminal. Think of it as a distributing headquarters where you will find your satisfaction guaranteed by every modern facility as well as by vast experience and the progressive policies of a company whose great growth has been based on service. You will find Bush Distribution Service a most complete and scientifically perfect coordination of industrial warehousing and transportation facilities; connecting with all existing means for the receipt and dispatch of goods with the greatest possible security, in the shortest possible time, and at the lowest possible cost. The entire resources of the Bush Terminal Company are behind its warehouse receipt. Our client's merchandise is handled with an efficiency, economy and dispatch which he could not attain if on the ground and acting for himself.



AT BUSH TERMINAL

The activities of Bush Terminal are so coordinated that no detail is too small or too large to receive our closest possible attention. The facilities and services having been built along cooperative lines, the smallest manufacturer or distributor is guaranteed the same careful attention, the same service and same economies as the largest.

Our new booklet, "Distribution Perfected," will be mailed free on request.

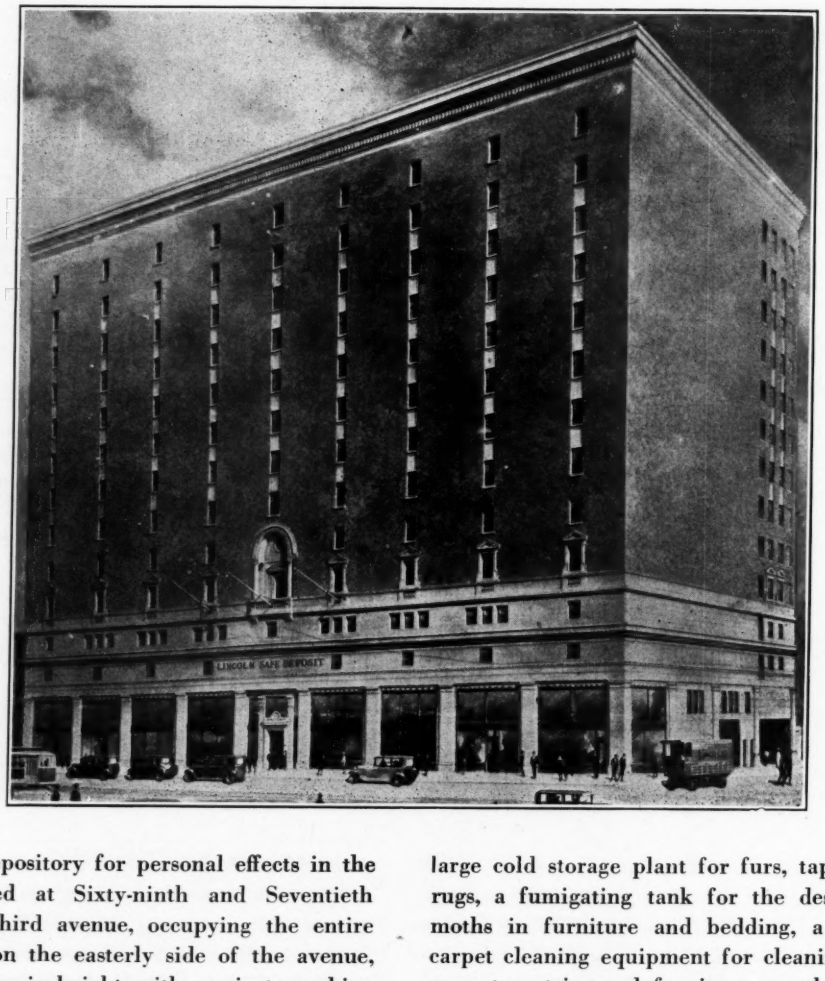
Packers who know how to pack

Consignments to this Company will be handled with the same care as they would were the shipper personally present



The finest depository for personal effects in the world, located at Sixty-ninth and Seventieth streets, on Third avenue, occupying the entire block front on the easterly side of the avenue, fourteen stories in height, with a private parking space in the rear, extending from Sixty-ninth to Seventieth street, where cars of depositors may enter and leave with the utmost safety and privacy, and where they will be free from police parking regulations or other interference.

Modern vaults for securities and silverware, a large cold storage plant for furs, tapestries and rugs, a fumigating tank for the destruction of moths in furniture and bedding, a pneumatic carpet cleaning equipment for cleaning valuable rugs, tapestries and furniture, on the premises, thus insuring their careful handling. Over two thousand fireproof storerooms for household furniture, office records, etc., trunk vaults, heated piano room; and an entire floor for automobiles. Everything that an experience of over fifty years has suggested has been most carefully considered.

Morgan & Brother now enjoys the rare distinction in warehousing annals of remaining under the continuous control and management of one family for three-quarters of a century.

Fireproof Storage Warehouses and Motor Vans For Long Distance Moving

Moving—Storing—Packing

Our reputation for handling collections on consignments is your guarantee in selecting us as your correspondent in New York City

Furniture and Works of Art Boxed and Shipped to All Parts of the World

ESTABLISHED 1851

To safeguard shipments and to avoid unnecessary delays, be sure to insert local address on bills of lading on all New York shipments. By complying with this rule of the railroad company you enable arrival clerk to reach consignee promptly, thereby helping the railroad company to clear their freight platforms, as this space is very limited in freight yards in New York City. It also saves your customer demurrage charges.

Service That Brings Efficiency and Economy

GREAT NORTHERN WAREHOUSES

It makes a favorable impression when you tell your trade that your stock is handled by Great Northern.

A complete, modern and fully equipped plant, and a smooth-working, experienced organization makes Great Northern service particularly advantageous to you. We will be glad to help you analyze your warehousing or distributing problems and will suggest a service that meets your requirements exactly.

The majority of all nationally advertised food products distributed in Central New York use Great Northern warehousing and distributing service.

Syracuse is a wide-awake, progressive city and is the center of a profitable buying market. Give us full information about your products and we will submit our recommendations and rates.

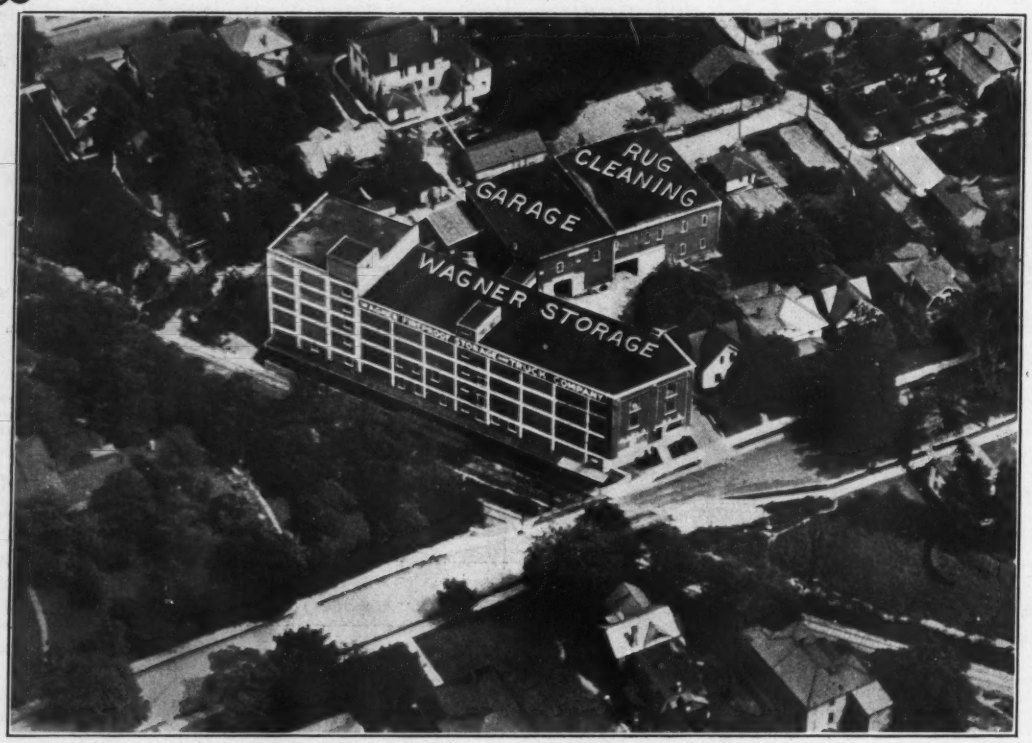
SPRINGFIELD OHIO



Cover Ohio Through Springfield

Daily Hi-Way Freight Service at freight rates. Door to door delivery to or from Dayton, Springfield and Columbus. Ask for our tariff. We have one of the most modern warehouses in the State of Ohio. A Fireproof Building for the storage of Household Goods, Automobiles and Merchandise.

A private siding on the Pennsylvania Railroad gives us unusual facilities for the efficient handling of pool car shipments with the benefit of free switching tariff.

Many large national distributors route their business through us because our service has proved reliable and efficient, and our organization sound. City and Inter-City Transportation of merchandise is handled by our fleet of light and heavy motor trucks. Our equipment is complete and up to date and provides for the proper rigging and moving of heavy machinery.

Write and let us acquaint you with the advantages that Wagner offers at Springfield.

We give you all the service you want in Charleston and Territory

WAREHOUSING and distributing of merchandise in the port of Charleston and surrounding territory, together with the handling of pool car and solid car shipments, is one of our specialities.

Whatever the service you may desire, ask us. We can take care of you.

Our new three-story reinforced concrete warehouse, with 100,000 square feet of floor space, all modern equipment, and private tracks connecting with all railroad and steamship lines, gives you every facility that can be desired. We have the lowest insurance rate in the city. Our moderate storage and handling rates are quoted on request. We ship package cars to the railroads daily, free transfer. All accounts and stock handled by experienced men. Our organization works with you and for you. We have made a strong record of service in fifteen years of dealing with many large customers. Call on us at any time. Consign your cars in our care and you will have no demurrage to pay.

Let Us Show You

what real distribution service is. Our new location —to which we will move January 1st—is strategically perfect, convenient to rail and water and in the heart of the industrial center. Our warehouse is modern in every respect, solid, imposing and doubly protected from fire. The building includes valuable office space, much of which has already been rented.

The latest type of Pressure Sprinkler System assures a low insurance rate. Warehousemen of experience will give your goods their expert attention and our fleet of trucks will provide economical and rapid handling of goods in transit.

We offer you the best and most modern in facilities, equipment and service. We await your instructions.

CANADIAN WAREHOUSE SECTION

Know Canada

Figures revised as of January 1, 1931

as reflected in the following figures and make it a market for your products. Its importance as a market for your merchandise whether manufactured in the United States or Canada should not be underestimated because:

Canada is Britain's largest overseas Dominion—the Britain of the West. Bounded by three oceans; 13,000 miles of coast line; nearly equal to half the circumference of the earth.

Canada is 3,500 miles by 1,400 in area. U. S.-Canada boundary is 3,000 miles long; 1,600 by land, 1,400 through water. Canada is larger in area than the United States, including Alaska, by 67,050 square miles (Canada, 3,684,723; United States and Alaska, 3,617,673).

Canada has one-third of area of British Empire, and is as large as 30 United Kingdoms and 18 Germanys; twice the size of British India; almost as large as Europe; 18 times size of France; 33 of Italy.

Canada's land area (exclusive of Territories and Yukon, and excluding swamplands and forests) is 1,401,100,000 acres. Thirty-one per cent., or 440,000,000 is fit for cultivation. Only 110,000,000 acres are occupied, and 60,000,000 acres, or less than 15 per cent, under cultivation.

Between 1900 and 1925 Canada almost doubled in population and its immigration amounts to over 100,000 persons each year.

This means greater household goods storage for Canadian warehousemen and increasing prosperity for every Canadian business institution. If you desire warehousing connections in this rapidly growing country, refer to those who are listed and advertised in this section.

Mr. Frederic Hudd, Trade Commissioner for Canada at New York, states that Canada is the best customer for United States-made products; the value of United States exports to Canada for the twelve months ending September, 1930, amounting to $726,497,731, representing 64.9% of Canada's total import trade.

Note Regarding Listings in Foreign Countries

A BOLD FACE MARK—thus §—after a listing in this section indicates that the information was prepared specifically for this 1931 Warehouse Directory. For various reasons it was not suggested to companies in foreign countries (Canada excepted) that information be attested before a notary.

American Consular officials at foreign posts will, on request, furnish names of organizations equipped to handle distribution and warehousing.

A Battery of Plymetl Vaults used by Woodward & Lothrop, Washington, D. C.

Equip for Fur Storage with Plymetl Vaults

THE year 1931 will bring some mighty sweet business to those concerns which are equipped for fur storage. Plymetl Vaults enable the warehouse to offer modern scientific storage—the same equipment used by the largest department stores.

These Plymetl Vaults demoth rugs and furniture as well as furs. The experts and practical warehousemen are agreed on one thing; every piece of furniture should be fumigated before it is mothproofed. To spray alone without fumigation is to cheat the customer. Fumigation is absolutely essential to good service and permanent profits.

Details will be gladly sent.

research... constant probing... ceaseless testing ... modern industrial science places experiment on par with experience. For over a quarter of a century Peelle research has devoted itself to the specialized subject of shaftway enclosures. In the design and manufacture of Peelle Doors, in the construction of every operating unit, constant check by almost infallible tests, is standardized procedure. In Peelle Doors, engineering ingenuity combines basic sturdiness with mechanical simplicity, resulting in a product that serves and endures. A list of over 15,000 Peelle installations offers convincing testimony. Motorized... Peelle Doors afford automatic entrance and exit at the touch of a button ... saving time, labor, and speeding the flow of vertical traffic. Write for catalog, or consult our engineers.
